Ford To Have New Ideas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford promised new proposals Wednesday night to deal with the nation's economic problems, but said he would not turn his back on the fight against inflation.

Ford said his economic advisers would work through the Christmas holidays "translating into specifics a number of new or alternative measures to augment and update the economic package I placed before the Congress two months ago."

The President said his new economic proposals would be on the desks of members of the new Congress when it convenes on Jan. 14.

"We will meet the changing priorities of present and future realities," Ford told a meeting of the Business Council, an organization of about 100 of the nation's top corporate executives.

Ford offered few clues on the content of his new economic proposals, but acknowledged that "conditions are changing rapidly."

"The economy is in difficult straits. We are in a recession. Production is declining and unemployment is rising," the President said.

He also said the nation still is faced with a higher rate of inflation than can be tolerated over an extended period of time.

Despite all this bad economic news, Ford said, "our country is not in an economic crisis."

He said a national crisis "is something that demands immediate and drastic action," while he considers the nation's current economic difficulties to be a "nation problem ... something that demands widespread understanding and carefully deliberated solutions — cures that are not worse than the disease."

But although Ford said the administration would propose new programs and policies to respond to changing economic conditions, he said inflation will continue to receive major attention.

"If there are any among you who want me to take a 180-degree turn from inflation fighting to recessionary pump-priming, they will be disappointed," the President said.

In his speech, Ford made no mention of his proposed 5 per cent income surtax on middle and upper level incomes as a way to raise money to finance his public service employment program.

A presidential spokesman said earlier in the day that Ford had concluded there was little chance that the present Congress would approve the surtax, but that Ford had not ruled out submitting it again to the new Congress in January.

Ford said in his speech Wednesday night that the Trade Reform Act is his major legislative priority before Congress adjourns later this month.

Ford also said he was willing to compromise on the cost and coverage of the proposed public service employment program and increased unemployment benefits to help ease the nation's rising unemployment rate.

The President said he sees no prospect for "instantaneous improvement in the economy" and said any new policies adopted now would not be felt for months to come.

He urged Americans to engage in positive thinking about the nation's economy and future.

The administration's employment plan calls for stepped up aid for jobless persons when unemployment reaches the trigger points of 6, 6.5 and 7 per cent of the labor force, and remains at those levels or higher for three months.

The Senate Labor Committee approved a separate $4 billion emergency public service jobs bill Wednesday which sponsors hope to enact before adjournment. The Senate bill would produce about 530,000 jobs in the next year.

The Senate Republican Policy Committee issued a call for legislation to provide 500,000 public service jobs along with a $1-billion emergency fund to expand employment in depressed areas and a tax credit to encourage creation of jobs.

At a Senate budget committee hearing, leading economists testified that the government must change its policies immeidately or face a frightening depression. The economists' consensus there will be 8 to 10 per cent unemployment soon and no quick end to inflation.

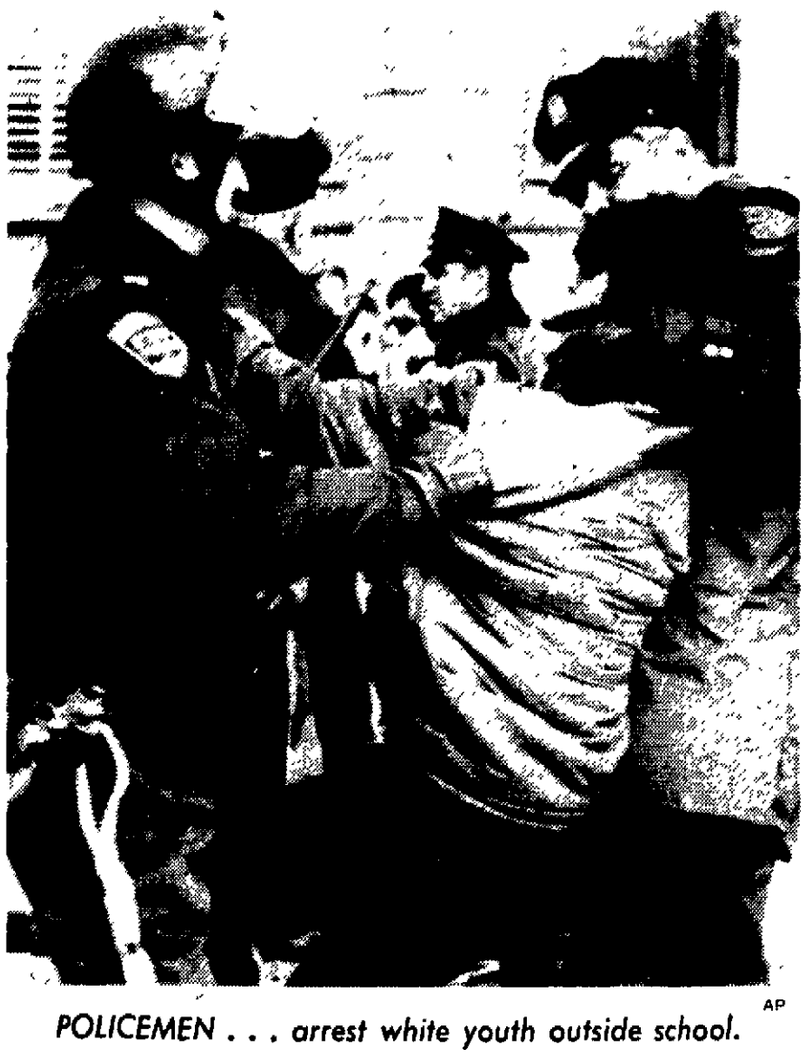

Arthur Okun, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said unless there is some new action, unemployment will climb above 8 per cent by summer or fall and perhaps "much higher."

Ford is scheduled to meet Thursday with top executives of the auto industry and the United Auto Workers to discuss problems in the auto industry.

In other economic developments:

— House Speaker Carl Albert announced formation of a task force headed by Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., to develop an economic program.

— The House Agriculture Committee decided to wait until the new Congress convenes to make any attempt to revive a 40-year-old sugar control program. Consumer groups have contended the controls kept prices artificially high, but sugar interests said they kept prices from rising.

Blacks Led Safely From Boston School

BOSTON (AP) — Decoy buses and lines of charging policemen were used Wednesday to spirit black students out of South Boston High School as about 1,000 angry whites hurled missiles.

Three police officers were injured by bricks, stones, cans and other flying objects as they led the police charge in front of the school, which was closed earlier in the day after a 17-year-old pupil was knifed.

A number of civilians in the area also were injured, witnesses said.

Three white South Boston youths were arrested in the melee and charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon on a police officer.

After police cleared whites from in front of the school, four school buses rolled up to the front door. But the 132 black pupils who had been inside were led out a side door to other buses.

The moving of the black students climaxed a day of tension that started when a white student was stabbed at the school. A black youth was arrested in connection with the incident, police said.

The School Department ordered all South Boston schools involved in court-ordered busing for desegregation closed for the rest of the week, hoping for a cooling-off period to relieve tensions.

Whites outside of South Boston High smashed windows in the decoy buses and vandalized several police cars.

An estimated 300 state and city police were in and around the school as the jeering crowd refused to leave the area.

City Councilwoman Louise Day Hicks, a staunch busing opponent, pleaded with the crowd to let the buses take black students back to Roxbury, the mostly black part of the city where they live.

Her pleas were met with shouts of, "Bus them back to Africa" and a barrage of obscenities.

Elsewhere in Boston, at Roslindale High School, nearly all of the white student body walked out of class. The move by the 600 students came after a reported slapping incident between a black and a white student Tuesday.

Extra police were called to Hyde Park High, previously the scene of racial outbreaks, when officials noted what they called a tense atmosphere and threats of white student walkouts.

The city's other 200 schools were relatively calm. School officials reported over-all attendance at 75.6 per cent, slightly below average.

In the South Boston stabbing, Michael Faith, 17, of South Boston, was reported in good condition at Boston City Hospital after surgery for a stab wound in the abdomen.

Charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon was James A. White, 18, of the Roxbury section. School officials said they had no record of White as a student at South Boston High.

Eighth Graders 'Discover' Careers

Minister or journalist? Mechanic or baker?

Those are some of the career possibilities Lincoln East Junior High School 8th-graders are exploring in a field test of "Project Discovery."

If it seems a little early, offering information in school about permanent jobs to 13-year-olds, consider that some of them, after all, are only four years away from the job market.

English teacher Doris Vetter brought Project Discovery to East Junior High, the 20th Midwest field-testing site since the project was developed four years ago by the Southwest Iowa Resource Learning Center at Red Oak. Goodrich and Mickle Junior Highs have also been selected for field testing.

Aimed at junior high youngsters, Project Discovery offers self-instruction on "different areas rather than any specific job," Mrs. Vetter said.

"The main goal" for the 31 students in her English class "is just to give them a little exploring experience," she said. "They don't have to decide right now they want to be a bookeeper"; rather, they'll "just see what a bookkeeper does."

Project Discovery offers exploration in about 40 different occupational areas, said Gloria L. Williams, East Junior High career education coordinator. Mrs. Vetter's students are getting into 13 of the areas, such as religion, journalism, commercial art, auto body repair, oil mechanics, electricity, environmental monitoring, banking, accounting and consumer education.

"It's all individualized," Mrs. Vetter said. After an orientation session, the students this week began a two-week foray into learning packets for each area.

Going at their own speed, some of the students might finish in four days, others might take the full 10, she said.

"They just do it on their own," although she's there to help if needed, Mrs. Vetter said. Part of the field test is to determine how practical the learning packets are.

Besides reading materials, the packets include a soldering iron, for example, to indicate what's needed for an electricity career. Or in the auto body repair packet, the kids can get the feel of a special hammer and cans of spray paint — "anything that they're going to run into" in that work, Mrs. Vetter said.

Mrs. Williams said the school staffs that use Project Discovery will be asked for "ideas on how to develop it on a junior high school-wide basis."

Wilson To Resign As GOP Director

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Glenn Wilson, the Nebraska Republican Party's executive director for the past 3½ years, will announce his resignation at a GOP state central committee meeting in Omaha Saturday.

Wilson will leave the paid party post to go into business. But he is planning to remain active in political affairs.

"I intend to go from a paid position to a volunteer position," he said Wednesday. "I've had four good years in this position, and I'm not leaving with any disenchantment with politicis at all."

Wilson said he wants to save the formal announcement of his departure for the central committee meeting.

"I've had a good relationship with members. They have been very kind and very helpful," he said.

Wilson succeeded Joe Edwards as the GOP's top paid executive in July of 1971. He has served under two state chairmen — Milan Bish of Grand Island and William Barrett of Lexington.

Prior to his assignment here, he was executive director of the Young Republican National Federation in Washington, D.C.

There was no early clue to Wilson's likely successor.

Presumably, that decision will depend, in part, on whether Barrett decides to seek re-election next year.

If Barrett should step down from the chairmanship early in the year, the choice of a new executive director may be left for his successor.

Barrett has not yet announced his plans.

But speculation within the party indicates that he may leave the chairmanship at the conclusion of his current term.

WILSON . . . plans to quit.

Crime Unit Computer Inched Ahead

Purchase of about $850,000 worth of computer hardware to store data for the criminal justice system in Lancaster County inched closer to reality Wednesday.

The Region II Crime Commission voted to include the computer system in its 1976 Comprehensive Plan, which will be forwarded to the State Crime Commission as an indication of projects for which funding might be sought after July 1, 1975.

In an interview, Region II Director Curt Snoberger said that the computer system will probably be the most controversial item in the 1976 Comprehensive Plan.

"We're talking about a lot of money," Snoberger noted. The cost of the hardware, systems design and initial programming are estimated to be around $960,000.

The groundwork for installation of the computer system is being laid by Jim Patty, who managed data processing in Ocean County, New Jersey, before coming to Lincoln

Working Under Grant

Patty is working under a grant approved by Region II and the State Crime Commission to devise a computer system to do what local officials want.

Patty, who has been working in Lincoln about three months, said in an interview that information stored in the computer would be available to police, courts, juvenile authorities and corrections officials

He said the computer would store information on when, where and why a person was arrested, what he was charged with, what happened in court and what happened during probation or institutionalization.

The battle on the issues of what information should be in computer files and who should get that information is now being waged in Congress and the State Legislature, according to Patty.

Legislation Expected

He said he expects Congress to pass legislation covering the area in the next 12 months and said that State Sen. Jack Cavanaugh will reintroduce legislation covering the area in the next session of the State Legislature.

Patty said the computer system now envisioned would allow an officer in the field to ascertain within 10 seconds if a person (identified by name) was wanted or if a car (identified by license number) was involved in an offense.

He said the computer system would also provide management statistics telling the police "brass" what kind of offenses were occuring in a specific geographical area.

The computer system now envisioned could be updated immediately as an arrest was made, a person booked into jail or a case disposed of, Patty said. He said "teleprocessing" is a relatively new operation and differs from "batch processing" in which data is accumulated and fed into the computer in one big gulp.

Other Projects

Among other projects given Region II approval for inclusion in the 1976 Comprehensive Plan was one offered by Municipal Court Probation Officer Robert Keller to establish a program under which judges would assign persons to volunteer work with various agencies.

The program, Keller said, would provide a "meaningful sentencing alternative" for judges in lieu of jail or a fine.

Another project was suggested by newly-elected Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners, who said that a deputy Lancaster County attorney should be placed in public schools in a program similar to the School Resource Officer Program in which police officers are placed in the schools.

Lt. Eugene Armstead suggested a program under which police officers would receive training in "interpersonal communication" to improve communication within the department and communication between officers and people in the community.

Tecumseh Plant Burns

Tecumseh (AP) — A fire of undetermined origin swept through a Mobil Oil Cooperative bulk plant about two blocks south of the city square late Wednesday afternoon, causing an undetermined amount of damage, but no injuries.

Mrs. Adolph Oestmann, wife of the manager of the plant, said she heard the fire whistle go off while she was still at work. She estimated the time at a little after 4 p.m.

Mrs. Adolph said her husband said he was loading his tank truck for a delivery when he felt something hot, and then the area burst into flames.

Oestmann's hair was singed as he leaped from the truck to safety, Mrs. Oestmann said.

Oestmann told his wife that he did not know where the fire started, but that he thought it might have been in the truck.

Fire units from Tecumseh, Johnson, Cook, Elk Creek, Beatrice and Syracuse were called in to fight the flames which lept skyward, and were visable for miles.

Other units from as far away as Nebraska City were also called for assistance, but the latter calls were canceled shortly after 6 p.m., when the flames were extinguished.

Mrs. Oestmann said there were six tanks before the fire, some containing gasoline, others diesel and heating fuel.

Three of the tanks were destroyed, and the others cracked from the heat.

Several railroad cars near the bulk plant also caught fire, according to Mrs. Oestmann.

Grenades Kill Two In Tel Aviv Theater

TEL AVIV (AP) — A terrorist threw hand grenades into the audience of a crowded movie theater Wednesday night, killing two persons and wounding 52, police said.

They said one of the victims at the theater in Tel Aviv's central district apparently was the terrorist, who was "blown to bits."

They said the dead man was carrying a British passport that said he was born in Ghana and lived in Turkey. He arrived in Israel Wednesday morning at Ben Gurion airport, they said.

In Beirut, Lebanon, Palestinian guerrillas claimed responsibility for the attack, which they said was in retaliation for the rocketing by Israeli agents Tuesday of three Palestine Liberation Organization offices in Beirut.

Their statement, carried by the guerrilla news agency WAFA, said five guerrillas participated in the attack.

The Israeli government has maintained silence on the Beirut raids.

As fire engines raced to the theater, moviegoers scrambled out of the building into the rain, shouting and clutching their wounds.

Police stopped private automobiles and shoved bleeding victims into them to be taken to hospitals.

Moviegoers said there were three or four explosions. Then "the crowd began screaming and running for the doors," said a mechanic who was working in the movie house.

"I saw sparks and I thought it was fun, but then I heard the explosions," said army medic Rafi Rosenthal, who was being treated for leg wounds. "I started to run downstairs but I went back to get my friends . . .

"I felt blood running down my legs. There was a girl lying unconscious on the floor with her back slashed open. Some people ripped a door off its hinges and used it as stretcher to carry her out."

The attack was the first in a major Israeli city for some time.

Arab guerrillas have employed foreigners on previous attacks inside Israel.

Although they revealed the information in the dead terrorist's passport, Tel Aviv police refused to divulge his name or anything further about him.

A search of the terrorist's hotel room turned up plastic explosives, detonators and nuts and bolts in a suitcase, police said. Two hand grenades, apparently homemade, were found and defused at the theater's soft drink counter.

Police indicated they believed there may have been more than one terrorist involved.

Tunisian Says 'Recognize Israeli Reality'

KUWAIT (AP) — Foreign Minister Habib el Chatti of Tunisia called on the Arabs Wednesday to "recognize the Israeli reality" within the boundaries set by the U.N. General Assembly Palestine partition resolution of Nov. 29, 1947.

He said such a step should be a phase of the struggle for the establishment of a federation or confederation between the Palestinians and Israel.

The partition resolution, which the Arabs rejected at the time, alloted to the Jews in Palestine far less than the area on which the state of Israel was established as a result of the 1948 war.

Chatti made the statements at Kuwait airport before his departure at the end of a three-day visit to this Persian Gulf sheikdom.

He recalled that Zuhair Muhsen, a leader of the Syrian-backed Saika Palestinian guerrilla group and a member of the executive council of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), recently made a similar statement. Chatti added:

"More than 90% of the Arab people and leaders agree with Muhsen but few dare to express their opinion."

Nixon 'Deceived' Him, Ehrlichman Insists

©The New York Times

Washington — John D. Ehrlichman insisted, in the face of an openly skeptical cross-examination by the Watergate prosecution Thursday, that he had been "deceived" by former President Richard M. Nixon

Ehrlichman, once Nixon's chief domestic affairs adviser, told the jury at the Watergate cover-up trial that there were "at least four major instances" in which Nixon had given him a false "impression."

He said he knew "pitifully little" about Watergate until more than nine months after the break-in of the Democratic National Committee's office June 17, 1972, and that until the very end he was "not in a position to come forward with any facts."

'I Was Deceived'

He said he had realized the deception only after listening to the White House tape recordings. "There is an ample showing in the record," he said, "that I was deceived."

Ehrlichman also said Nixon had suggested that he make veiled offers of clemency to former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, now one of his co-defendants at the trial, and Jeb Stuart Magruder, who had been Mitchell's deputy at the Nixon re-election committee, so that the two would not go too far in whatever testimony they might give.

Ehrlichman said he had not passed on the messages.

However, the long and often contentious cross-examination by the chief prosecutor, James F. Neal, raised some question as to what effect Ehrlichman's denials, and his assertions about Nixon, would have on the jury.

Under questioning by Neal, Ehrlichman said he had given the jury two incorrect statements in his testimony Wednesday.

Incorrect Statement

He also said he had made an incorrect statement to the Senate Watergate Committee last year.

He admitted, too, that he had answered "I don't recall" when asked last year in a grand jury about many of the same incidents about which he has been testifying, purportedly on the basis of his recollection, at the trial.

Neal told Ehrlichman at one point that he had in fact said "I don't recall" or "I can't remember" or "I have no recollection" in answer to 125 questions in his appearances before the grand jury in May, 1973. Ehrlichman said he did not "know" if that was true. The prosecutor challenged Ehrlichman to prove him wrong on that assertion, telling him to "check the record."

Judge John G. Sirica joined in the suggestion.

In addition, Neal brought out various apparent conflicts between testimony Ehrlichman has given previously in other appearances and the testimony he has given here.

Assertions Challenged

Also, throughout the day, Neal repeatedly challenged Ehrlichman's assertions that he had advocated a "full disclosure" of the facts of Watergate by drawing from the defendant one after another concession that he had had certain information about Watergate and not revealed it.

Dent, Ex-Nixon Adviser, Given Probation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Nixon White House political adviser Harry S. Dent was sentenced to one month's unsupervised probation Wednesday after he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of violating federal political campaign contribution laws.

Dent, 44, resigned recently as general counsel to the Republican National Committee.

Moments before he was sentenced, Dent admitted taking part in the so-called "Townhouse" Republican fund-raising operation of 1969-70.

In imposing no jail sentence or fine, Chief U.S. District Judge George L. Hart Jr., said, "It does appear to be as if Mr. Dent were more an innocent victim than a perpetrator."

Dent generally is credited with devising the Republican "Southern Strategy" of the 1970 congressional elections.

Dent, a former Republican chairman in South Carolina, was an administrative assistant to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., before joining Richard M. Nixon's White House staff.

The "Townhouse operation" involved a secret fund of $3 million raised by Herbert W. Kalmbach, Nixon's former personal attorney who has pleaded guilty to campaign violations

House Extends Turk Aid Cutoff

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $2.6 billion foreign aid bill cutting U.S. military aid to Cambodia and extending the present cutoff of military aid to Turkey until June 30 was approved Wednesday night by the House.

The Turkish aid cutoff was extended by an overwhelming 297 to 98 vote indicating the House will resist Senate action to delay the cutoff until Feb. 14 and give the administration more time to seek negotiations on withdrawal of Turkish troops from Cyprus.

The House then passed the aid bill 201 to 190. It now goes to a House-Senate conference for compromise with a $2.7 billion bill passed last week by the Senate.

Rejecting two compromise proposals by administration supporters, the House cut President Ford's $578 million request for Cambodia to $377 million, including a maximum of $200 million for military aid.

As part of a kid-gloves strategy to prevent confrontation that could kill the bill, the administration fought only the Cambodia cut.

An amendment by Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., to extend the present cutoff of all U.S. military aid to Turkey through June 30 was approved 297 to 98 with little resistance from Ford's supporters.

The aid to Turkey was cut off as of midnight Tuesday under previous action by Congress until "substantial progress" is made on negotiating withdrawal of Turkish occupation forces from Cyprus.

The administration decided against fighting the cutoff extension in the House but to wait and try to win the Senate's delay of the cutoff until Feb. 14 when House-Senate conferees work out the compromise bill.

But the overwhelming vote on the Turkish aid matter indicated the House will accept no delay, and a House-Senate tangle over the cutoff could threaten Congress' plans to adjourn at the end of next week.

Kissinger Sees Some Progress In Cyprus Talks

BRUSSELS (AP) — Henry Kissinger said Wednesday night that he "may be getting somewhere" on the Cyprus question after intensive meetings with Greek and Turkish leaders.

The assessment came after the American secretary of state met twice with Turkish Foreign Minister Melih Esenbel and with his Greek counterpart Dimitri Bitsios.

Burma Under Martial Law; Troops Retake Thant's Body

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Burmese government declared martial law Wednesday, radio monitors in Bangkok reported. The action came after troops retook the body of former United Nations Secretary-General U Thant from dissident students in Rangoon and violence erupted, the reports said.

The monitors quoted Rangoon Radio as saying one person was killed and three were wounded by police in clashes that began Wednesday morning. They quoted the radio as saying police opened fire on mobs that were looting and destroying property and that at one point 3,000 persons attacked a police station.

An all-night curfew was imposed on the city for an indefinite period and military courts were ordered established, the monitors said. There was no announcement of how many persons had been arrested.

Burmese troops and police hurling tear gas recovered Thant's body from 3,000 students and Buddhist monks guarding it on the campus of Rangoon University in a predawn raid. Rangoon Radio said Thant's body was later sealed in a tomb near Shwedagon pagoda in the center of the city

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said the reports reaching Wasington indicated violent demonstrations had been under way in Rangoon since Tuesday, and that mobs continued to roam through the Burmese capital's downtown area.

Regular communications from Burma have been virtually cut off. News censorship is in effect and there are restrictions on all outgoing dispatches.

U.S. Develops Devices To Protect 'Sky Spies'

By HOWARD BENEDICT

Washington (AP) — Despite detente, Defense Department officials are continuing to develop sophisticated devices to protect U.S. satellites from possible Soviet attack.

The "spy in the sky" satellites routinely photograph missile and other military forces around the world and provide the Pentagon with global communications, navigation for ships and planes, and military-oriented weather data.

Three very sophisticated spacecraft are designed to provide almost instant warning of a hostile missile attack.

U.S. intelligence indicates all are vulnerable to enemy attack.

The Soviet antisatellite capability was spotlighted recently when international military affairs expert John W. R. Taylor was quoted by The Arizona Republic as saying: "The Russians have demonstrated on many occasions their ability to destroy one satellite with another in orbit."

Taylor is editor of Jane's All Around the World, an authoritative book on military hardware published in Britain.

Asked about the report, a U.S. official replied that "a capability to inspect and destroy satellites apparently has been created by the Soviets." He said the destructive weapon could be either another satellite or possibly a deadly laser beam fired from earth.

To protect future satellites, Pentagon researchers are studying devices to prevent laser damage, decoys to confuse attackers, sensors to detect an approaching enemy satellite and intiate evasive action, and more durable nuclear power sources.

Defense experts hope many of these systems will be operational by 1976.

The Pentagon also plans industry studies to determine whether new satellite designs are needed or whether present ones can be adapted to future needs.

Another program is aimed at developing airborne tracking stations to receive signals from the three missile-detection satellites. These mobile flying platforms would be safer from attack or sabotage than the two fixed ground stations now being used — one near Denver, Colo., the other a politically controversial facility in Australia.

One of these so-called early warning satellites is in stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the Indian Ocean to monitor Soviet and Chinese launch activity. The other two are stationed over the Western Hemisphere to warn of submarine-launched missiles fired against this country from either the Atlantic or Pacific.

Their infrared, radiation and other sensors can spot and report a rising rocket within 90 seconds. By tracking the exhaust flame, the sensors can provide approximate target data.

The United States has known since 1971 that the Soviets have been perfecting satellites capable of knocking U.S. payloads out of the skies.

On at least three occasions, the Soviets sent up inspector satellites that made several passes at U.S. targets. Later the inspector satellites were exploded, apparently on radio command from the ground.

On an operational mission, experts theorize, the inspector could blow up near the target, destroying both. The explosive could be either nuclear or conventional.

Intelligence reports also indicate the Soviets are developing high-power laser beams intended to disrupt satellite electronics.

Laser energy could be particularly damaging to unprotected optical mechanisms in the three-foot-diameter telescope carried in the U.S. missile warning satellites. Scheduled for test next year is a detector that would close a protective screen over the telescope when laser energy penetrated the spacecraft.

Officials report a prototype of a sensor designed to warn of an attack by a killer satellite is nearly complete and is expected tobe tested soon.

Malcolm R. Currie, director of Pentagon defense research and engineering, told a congressional committee that two experimental military communications satellites to be launched next spring will be powered by nuclear generators instead of externally mounted solar cells.

Chile Junta Expropriates Stock In Phone Company

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Citing national interest, the military junta expropriated ITT's controlling stock in Chile's telephone company Wednesday, adding another chapter to the U.S.-based conglomerate's tangled involvement here.

The International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. valued the holdings at $153 million three years ago. An ITT spokesman in New York said the expropriation Wednesday was a "legal, technical step" to reach agreement on compensation and that it stemmed from a decision "favorable to the company which upheld ITT's $95 million insurance claim."

In a decree, the junta authorized the economy minister to negotiate compensation for the expropriated ITT stock in the Compania de Telefonos, a monopoly controlling Chile's 400,000 telephones.

Sources here said the decree legally defined the status of ITT's 71 per cent majority share in the company because "something must be expropriated before there can be any compensation."

ITT was accused of trying to block the 1970 election of the late President Salvador Allende, the only freely elected Marxist chief of state in the Western Hemisphere, including offering the CIA $1 million in funds. ITT denied it.

Allende, who was toppled by the military in a bloody coup on Sept. 11, 1973 and died the same day, had pledged to build a Socialist state in Chile through democratic means.

But he dredged up long-forgotten laws to take over vast areas of private enterpise without resorting to actual expropriation and nationalization, with the exception of nationalizing huge U.S.-operated copper mines for which he paid no compensation.

Rather he "intervened" in private firms after alleged complaints of workers about labor conditions or other disputes. Usually, left-wing unions started the trouble.

In Septmber 1971, he intervened in the telephone company charging it was providing "bad service." This meant that state-appointed administrators were sent in to direct the day-to-day operations of the firm until the alleged problem was resolved.

But Allende kept these "interventors" on the job on a permanent basis and that was the situation that the military found when they took power.

The junta set about to return hundreds of private industries to their owners and dismantled Allende's mammoth agrarian reform program, which had consolidated farms into state holdings.

It paid compensation to the three nationalized U.S. copper companies — Anaconda, Kennecott and Cerro — and has been in informal negotiations with ITT over its holdings in the phone company.

But since the company was never actually nationalized or expropriated, sources here said the legal status of the stocks had to be made more clear.

In the decree, the government said it considers holding the phone company to be in the national interest, so it expropriated the stocks.

Tactical Nuclear Arms 'Indispensable' For Europe's Defense

©The New York Times

Brussels, Belgium — Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger said Wednesday tactical nuclear weapons were "indispensable" to the defense of Europe and squelched, temporarily, a proposal by the Netherlands that the weapons be de-emphasized and used as bargaining chips in force reduction talks with the Soviet Union.

At a news conference, Schlesinger said the defense ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization had done no more than agree to explore Dutch Defense Minister Henk Vredeling's proposal to de-emphasize the tactical nuclear weapons and to offer them in new bidding in the mutual and balanced force reduction talks in Vienna.

There are about 7,000 American tactical nuclear weapons in the European theater, two-thirds of them for Allied use in the event of war. The Soviet tactical nuclear armory is about 3,500 weapons.

The majority's rejection of the Dutch proposal owed much, NATO sources said, to the defense ministers' somber view of the world strategic situation and of NATO's ability to cope simultaneously with growing Soviet power and economic recession.

Third World Raps U.S. Stand On U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Third World countries Wednesday attacked the contention by the United States that the General Assembly had fallen under a "tyranny of the majority" and had adopted illegal, unrealistic decisions that alienate the American people.

South Yemen's ambassador, Abdalla Saleh Ashtal, said, "We are not convinced that even in the United States support for the United Nations is eroding.

"It is true ... that Zionist fanatics burned the flag of the United Nations when the General Assembly decided to invite the Palestine Liberation Organization. But do they represent even a tiny fraction of the American people?"

U.S. Ambassador John A. Scali made his remarks about the United Nations last Friday.

Algerian Ambassador Abdellatif Rahal argued that the unseating of South Africa's delegation to the current assembly, an action which Scali by implication attacked, was "not only legal but a reflection of the will of the vast majority of international opinion."

He said the limitation of Israel to one major speech in the Palestine debate, another move that Scali seemed upset about, was permitted by the assembly's rules of procedure.

Rahal charged that Scali, like "other members of the European minority," had "recapitulated the false reports carried in a partisan and unscrupulous press, instead of providing his fellow citizens" with objective information on the United Nations.

He urged Western critics to go forward with the main current in the United Nations "without regrets for the past that is gone."

"The organization of 1945 is not the organization of today," he said.

U.S. Moves To Block U.N. Employe Pay Raises

United Nations (UPI) — A U.S. move to block a $26 million New Year's Day salary hike for U.N. employes, already the highest paid civil servants in the world, appeared to be gathering momentum Wednesday.

American diplomats at U.N. headquarters in New York and in European capitals where the world body has major offices have launched a major campaign to kill recommendations for a 6% pay hike that would put the take-home pay of U.N. professional employes 42.6% above U.S. federal workers.

The pay boost, coupled with increases in fringe benefits, would cost the U.N. by its own estimate $26 million a year. A vote on the measure is expected in the next two days.

The United States which pays a quarter of the U.N.'s annual $400 million budget, called moves now being considered by a General Assembly committee "fiscally unwise" and "incompatible with the U.N.'s serious financial situation."

Premier Of Rhodesia Says Terrorism To Stop

©The New York Times

London Times Dispatch

Salisbury, Rhodesia — Prime Minister Ian Smith announced Wednesday that the war with black nationalists on Rhodesia's northern border would cease immediately.

All black Rhodesian leaders and followers would be released immediately, and a conference would be held on how the country's overwhelming black majority can enter the government.

Smith, in a nationwide radio and television broadcast, emphasized that this did not mean a settlement had been achieved nor that the United Nations was about to lift the economic boycott of Rhodesia.

He said he believed his actions would create the right atmosphere for the holding of the constitutional conference.

Smith disclosed that talks on the Rhodesian problem between his government and black nationalists had continued after last week's abortive discussions in Lusaka, Zambia, and the differences that separated them had "now been resolved."

The prime minister said his government took the initiative in allowing detained black leaders to go to Lusaka for discussions with President Kenneth Kaunda and his colleagues.

During this period contacts also took place between Salisbury and Lusaka but last weekend it became clear that serious difficulties had arisen. The exchange continued this week and difficulties which had arisen were resolved.

The Rhodesian leader warned that although he had accepted in good faith the undertaking that acts of terrorism would cease immediately, it might take some time for this to be fully effective.

A Scottish-born farmer whose farm was one of the first to be attacked in northeastern Rhodesia two years ago reacted cautiously to the news of the agreed end of the fighting. "I am pleased to hear it but I'll believe it when I see it," he said.

Ex-Auto Maker Cleared Of Bribery Charges

Tel Aviv (AP) — The former director of Israel's Autocars Co., Vitshak Shalmanky, has been cleared of bribery charges after an 18-month court case.

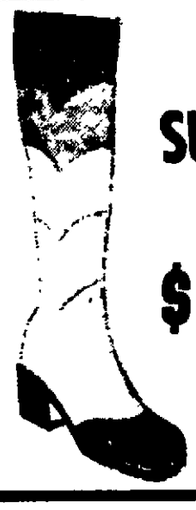

He had been charged with paying bribes to increase sales of cars manufactured by the company. But the judge said all of Shalmanky's deals were legal.

Arrangement Too Cozy

Possible arrangements involving personnel of the Lancaster County Railroad Transportation Safety District are a little too cozy for comfort. Due to his recent election as Lancaster County surveyer, District Executive Director Marvin Nuernberger will be leaving that post.

One possibility for filling the vacancy is the elevation to the post of John Longsdorf, now a coordinator with the district of programs involving the six railroads with lines in Lancaster County. One of the major jobs of the district is to improve traffic safety and convenience by eliminating unnecessary railroad tracks and improving track grade crossings.

Longsdorf is on leave of absence from the Union Pacific Railroad. We fail to see how he can serve even as a coordinator for the district, much less as the executive director.

If his position with the UP does not constitute an inherent conflict of interest with the district, then we have never seen a conflict. It is not a question of Longsdorf's personal integrity, which we do not question at all.

But the district's responsibility is to the taxpayers who support that district, which means its relationship with the railroads is an adversary one. Quite conceivably, the district may be called upon to make decisions that pit the public's interest against the interest of the railroads.

In such a situation, Longsdorf would occupy an obvious position of conflict of interest, regardless of his objectivity.

Further, Longsdorf has offered his services for $30,000 a year, $5,000 more than he is now making and $10,000 more than Nuernberger is making. That is a nice gesture on Longsdorf's part, especially at this holiday time of year, but we believe it might respectfully be declined by the district board.

Finally, there is talk of Nuernberger, when taking over as county surveyor, continuing as a paid consultant for the transportation district. That's another gesture the board might well find best to decline.

Nothing in all this seems to be illegal but it is a might cozy exercise in back scratching. The district board would be well advised not to play the kind of game in which it seems about to be engaged.

No Free Lunch Anticipated

We read that a spokesman for the natural gas industry told government officials that efforts to cut oil consumption would worsen recession and impose austerity on the nation.

It sounded as if he meant it to be an eye-opening prediction of dreadful conditions ahead. We think it should be seen merely as a calm appraisal of what the future holds.

Henry Linden, president of the Institute of Gas Technology, while testifying at hearings on energy policy this week differed sharply with government experts who say fuel can be saved by reducing waste without harming economic activity.

The reduction the government seeks would slow the economy by 3%, Linden said.

He said the public should be told "what this truly means — it means austerity; it means a drop in real income; it may mean unemployment; it means a loss in mobility and many other undesirable side effects."

The true meaning hasn't been hidden from the American people. They know something about austerity (well, relative austerity); a drop in real income; unemployment; a loss in mobility and other undesirable side effects that are the products of economic hard times.

"To make these sacrifices in anticipation of getting a free lunch," Linden said, "may create some political repercussions which are quite dangerous."

We would agree with Linden that if the government takes a tough approach to the energy situation in particular and the economy in general, those advocating such an approach will be in political hot water — at least for awhile. Crimps and cramps in the lifestyle are not designed to make elected officials look good.

But on the other hand, we believe that most people will not equate solutions to the energy and economic problems with a free lunch, no matter what government experts may say. They know there are tough times ahead, that things will have to get worse before they get better.

Industry spokesmen who make self-serving statements suggesting that energy conservation is bad for the economy, and thus an evil in itself, will only help to delay the time when things get better.

"I Think You Can Stop Worrying About Drift And Uncertainty"

JAMES RESTON

In Defense Of Ford

WASHINGTON — President Ford is being criticized severely and sometimes even savagely these days. Even his supporters are giving him what Damon Runyon used to call a "medium hello." But in fairness, there is another side to the Ford story, which has to be balanced alongside the charges against him.

The charges are serious. They are that, with the highest unemployment rate in America in 13 years, and the biggest drop in the stock market in 12 years, he can't make up his mind whether inflation or economic recession is the major problem, and also that he is making too many concessions to the Russians, paying too much attention to foreign affairs at the expense of home affairs, and stringing along with the old Nixon gang in the cabinet and the White House.

There is plenty of room for honest conflict in the White House. It would be a brave man who would say that these are not fair criticisms. There is plenty of room for honest conflict about how to struggle between inflation and recession, what to do about the battle between the Greeks and the Turks over Cyprus, how to deal with the Russians over the trade bill, arms control, the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel, the relations of the United States to Europe and Japan, and many other things.

But in all the arguments about these domestic and foreign problems, one thing about President Ford has stood out. He has restored some kind of integrity to the debate. Whether he is talking to the Democratic leaders of Capitol Hill — Mike Mansfield in the Senate or Speaker Carl Albert or Rep. Thomas "Tip" O'Neill in the House, or the leaders of foreign governments — somehow he manages to convey the feeling that he is giving them an honest pitch.

Maybe this is not good enough, and the guess here is that it isn't, but whether he is right or wrong in what he does, he is at least beginning to restore belief. He is available to his critics in the Congress and the press. He talks and even listens endlessly to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau of Canada, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, Foreign Minister Yigal Allon of Israel, all in the space of a single week, but when they return home, despite their differences, they all say roughly the same thing: we didn't really settle anything, but somehow we feel better, for we felt we were dealing with an honest man.

This is a dicey imponderable, but it is a big change in Washington after the last few years. Presidents Johnson and Nixon may have been more knowledgeable, clever and cunning than Ford, but nobody ever quite knew where they were. Ford is different. He has been on Capitol Hill as a partisan leader for 25 years, which is no exercise in objectivity, but more than most he knows the difference between right and wrong, "yes" and "no," and despite all his troubles this comes through in his negotiations.

All the evidence here is that this human quality was very effective in his latest trip to Japan. It was primarily a symbolic visit, the first by an American president to that country, but the Japanese live by symbols, and after their suspicions of Nixon's devaluation of the dollar and surprise trip to China, Ford's natural candor and promises of "no more surprises" was a relief.

He managed to restore some sense of trust with Trudeau, which is odd, because they are so different personally, and what is critically important, he apparently won the confidence of Schmidt, not only in their formal discussions but in a long private talk that went on after the official meetings until 2 o'clock in the morning.

Ford's talks with Allon of Israel were more difficult, but again here, trust was more important than anything else, and if our information is correct, Allon, who came here deeply anxious about the situation in the Middle East, went away, not with the promises he sought, but at least with confidence in the frank and even blunt conversations he had with the president.

The experts on policy, the people who know precisely what should be done about inflation, unemployment and foreign affairs, of course, doubt that Ford has the answers to all their anxieties, and they are probably right.

But they might be wrong, and it is probably too early to count him out. He is a slow take and has been in the White House for only little more than 100 days. He has not defined policies equal to his problems, or stated clearly where he is going or who is going with him, but he has restored at least some respect for the integrity of the presidency, and whether he is right or wrong on his policies, this is a big advance over the last few years.

Today's Ultra Secrets

WASHINGTON — British actor Leslie Howard, whom generations of Americans remember as the gentle Ashley Wilkes in "Gone With The Wind," boarded an aircraft early in World War II on a secret mission. The Germans knew about it and shot down the unarmed plane. The British knew beforehand that the Germans knew, but to protect the secret of how they knew, British intelligence let the plane go down and the actor die.

On another occasion, Field Marshal Goering's Luftwaffe targeted the city of Coventry for saturation bombing, to show Britons the horror of continued resistance. Winston Churchill was told of the plan in time to have been able to evacuate Coventry; to protect the secret of how he knew, he chose to allow the name of Coventry to become synonymous with destruction.

The secret that had to be protected at all costs was "The Ultra Secret," disclosed after 35 years in a book by Frederick Winterbotham, now 76, who had been an R.A.F. intelligence officer. The secret was this: the British had cracked the seemingly unbreakable code of the Nazi high command, and were able to read their opponent's top-level messages throughout the war.

☆ ☆ ☆

The other night, the veterans of the Office of Strategic Services — predecessor to the C.I.A. — gathered in Washington to present the William Donovan award to Export-Import Bank Chairman William J. Casey, who had been the American chief of secret intelligence in Europe during World War II. The room was filled with aging, fairly successful men — Hale-fellows-well-met who had led spying or resistance operations in a war against an undoubted enemy when they were young and daring.

Casey told how information gathered by Ultra — which not even the O S S knew about at the time — was used to help protect allied forces in the invasion of Europe.

German General Von Rundstedt believed that "Overlord" — the allied invasion of Europe — would be launched at Calais, across the narrowest part of the English Channel; General Rommel disagreed, predicting it would come in Normandy. Rommel was right, of course; but despite the theft of the plans for "Overlord" by an intrepid German spy in Turkey, and even after the Normandy landings took place on D-Day, Hitler would not commit all available forces to smashing the allied beachhead.

Think of it: the Germans had stolen the plans for D-Day, and even after the landings began, would not act on their information, because allied intelligence had convinced them that the stolen secret — and even what their eyes were telling them — was not to be believed.

Breathtaking stuff. Masterful deceit. And the ruthless decisions of Churchill to let men and cities die rather than expose the secret was justified in history.

To send Actor Howard to his death meant the opportunity later to shoot down the plane of Japanese Admiral Yamamoto, and the thousands killed and maimed at Coventry would make it possible to keep Normandy from turning into another Dunkirk. But the alternatives faced at the time by Churchill, F.D.R. and the handful of men making the decisions to protect the secret, must have seared their souls.

A long generation later, we are still making what we now call "tradeoffs," without the drama, certainly without the heroics, and without the courage to explore the conscious choices we are being forced to make.

We have chosen to throw millions of men and women out of work so that inflation can be curbed and our economy brought back from the brink, and we must now choose whether to adopt the official Democratic line of absolute economic dictatorship.

We have chosen to throw more than a hundred billion dollars over the next decade into the direct purchase of nuclear arms, which we call limiting the arms race, because we hope that any agreement to race shoulder-to-shoulder — with neither side leading — will ensure human survival.

We have chosen to try to feed starving millions without demanding stringent population control, salving our consciences today but probably causing 10 times the starvation in the coming generation.

In today's world, Coventrys still have to be sacrificed, but we shut our eyes to the life-and-death consequences of the choices we make.

We kill collective bargaining in the name of stability, we finance an arms race in the name of equality, and we induce starvation in the name of humanity. But these are decisions being made in peacetime — must we treat them now as "Ultra secret?"

Patchwork Prairie Country

One day this past summer a high wind, yes, no doubt a wild wind ripped through the Burress, Nebraska, area. This windmill, another of the disappearing landmarks of the rural countryside, could not withstand the mounting tempo of the wind. Its steel tower bowed gracefully almost dipping its wheel into the tank into which it had pumped gallons of water when the wind was not so ruthless.

Its profile before the storm was boldly etched against the sky defending its right to stand tall or bow low many times in past years when the wayward wind blew a gale. It always chose to stand.

Burress is located about sixty miles southeast of Lincoln.

It seems on so many deserted farmsteads, the windmill is the last to go. All else may vanish — the barn, silo and gray weathered clapboards from small sheds that housed chickens or small animals at one time.

Sometimes the wheel on an old mill turns endlessly day and night, squeaking its defiance to changing times. How many times anxious eyes have watched and yearned for the wheel to turn in a slight breeze to draw the cold water from deep in the earth. How often has it satisfied the parched and dry mouth of a farmer working long in his field on a hot summer's day. The cattle, too, knew the mill would reward them when they filed home at night to the barnyard for a long drink.

So let this sentinel cling to its guarded right to bow low to the elements . . . a silent tower bent but not broken, defending still its right to remain a link binding yesterday with today.

Little towns are nice for they so often accomplish things by the labor of the citizens themselves. Sunday our new library was dedicated. Built because the interested citizens of the community know all too well that those who require a source of knowledge and cannot obtain it are like one who plows but does not sow.

Henry Ford said, "Anyone who stops learning is old whether this happens at twenty or eighty. Anyone who keeps on learning not only remains young but becomes constantly more valuable, regardless of physical capacity."

Whether I go to the library to find an answer to some question I need answered or get a magazine or book to read, I always feel I can be quite content with me, myself and I.

TV is not the answer for entertainment for me. I prefer to read, to draw my own imaginary pictures in my mind, to converse with the author, read over a passage that needs to be thought about a bit longer, dwell in the faculty of his thoughts that turn the common water of life into the most delicious nectar.

The little wisp of snow that we had the past week warned us all too well what is to come. How fortunate we have been that the weather has been so nice considering there are fuel shortages in some areas.

Sooner or later that old north wind will send forth its cold, gusty blast, beat the snow against the windows and send everyone scurrying for shelter.

Three Stories: Pranks For The Memories

NEW YORK — The following three stories have one thing in common:

When Winston Churchill popped into Washington in the immediate wake of our entrance into World War II he and President Roosevelt stayed up most of their first night together, talking about how they would do in Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini. But about 3 a.m. on that blacked-out night, the talk turned to Washington itself. Churchill had not been there since 1929. He remarked that the Lincoln memorial was still the finest architectural ornament of the capital.

"Don't you agree?" he asked the suddenly silenced Roosevelt.

"I don't know, really," the President said. "You see, I've never been there."

" 'Never been there!' " Churchill rumbled. "Why it's scarcely half a dozen blocks from where we're sitting. Why haven't you been there?"

FDR answered after a bit. "The steps," he said.

When the meaning of that permeated Churchill's cognac and Cuban cigar he boomed, "I find this unbearable! We must do something about it right now!" He beckoned Mike Reilly, chief of the White House detail of the Secret Service.

"Have a car brought around, and two strong men," commanded the Richard Burton of his time. "The President and I are going to call on Mr. Lincoln."

So the two leaders of the Western world were driven through the empty black streets of Washington. At the foot of the memorial steps two strong agents formed a hand-seat and carried the President up the endless flight.

They put him down gently and adjusted his braces, enabling him to stand. Churchill took his arm, to steady him as they stood beneath the brooding, seated Emancipator. And there, fathoms deep in the night, they pledged they'd muster all of their peoples' arms and resolution in the common crusade against confident foes then running wild through the world.

An economy-minded suburban matron, noticing in her newspaper that the prices of spirits at Macy's were lower than at her village liquor store in Dudgeon Heights, Conn., cranked up her bright red Volkswagen and drove into the heart of Fun City. Happily, she found a parking place right in front of the big store, picked out an assortment of grogs, carried the box to her car, and deposited it in the up-front trunk compartment.

Then, noticing that she still had some time left on her meter, she locked the trunk and went back into the store for some additional shopping. When she returned, consternation and dismay! The trunk compartment had been smashed flat, as if it had been hit by a safe dropped from a great height. The immediate area was heady with the scent of whiskey.

The poor dear was on the brink of a Niagara of tears when she noticed a note stuck under her windshield wiper. It read: "Dear Car Owner My name is Ralph Zilch. I am completely responsible for the condition of your car. Please call me at 594-6600 and I will see that you are properly reimbursed for the damage to your car and the contents of the trunk. What happened is not easy to explain in a short note."

She called the number.

"Madison Square Garden," a brisk voice answered.

"There must be some mistake," the distraught woman said. "I was looking for a Mr. Ralph Zilch . . ."

"Just a moment, Mr. Zilch is expecting your call."

Mr. Zilch had some incredible news for her. He's an elephant man. Seems he was walking a couple of them across 34th street to the Garden when one of them spotted the red hood of the parked Volkswagen. He sat down on it, apparently believing it was the red stool on which Mr. Zilch had been trying to train him to sit during his new act.

Poor woman drove back to Connecticut. State trooper stopped her on outskirts of Dudgeon Heights. Accused her of leaving scene of a car accident, and of smelling of whiskey. Took her to headquarters. Nobody there would believe her story. Got home very late. Husband angry.

Story No. 3:

Nice little old lady had a great big St. Bernard dog, her faithful companion and security against New York thieves, muggers, etc. Dog died late Friday afternoon. She called the ASPCA and asked if it would pick up dog and give it a decent burial. Man on phone said nix — matter would have to wait over in her small apartment until Monday . . . unless she could get dead dog to the ASPCA before 5 o'clock. It was 4.45.

Little old lady rolled big St. Bernard in large suitcase and skidded late lamented downstairs. It was too heavy for her to lift from pavement, but she spotted a kindly-looking young man and asked him to please carry suitcase to corner, where she could get a cab. Young man picked up suitcase and fled with it.

What these stories have in common is that not one of them is true. They were told to me by people who lead normal, honest lives. The trouble is that I was sap enough to check. And double check.

Pity! I so wish they had happened.

Doubts Grow About Gov. Wallace's Health

KANSAS CITY — Gov. George Wallace of Alabama went to the Democratic mid-term charter convention last week to demonstrate that he means to remain an influential party figure.

But his limited appearance convinced many Democratic officials that his physical health is too frail to sustain the pressures of a presidential campaign in 1976, to say nothing of the White House itself.

He did not participate in any of the convention debates or panels and confined his activities to meetings with old friends in his heavily guarded hotel suite and attendance at one Democratic National Committee reception at the Harry S Truman Library in nearby Independence, Mo. Those who saw him and talked to him felt that he appeared weaker than in the past. "No juice anymore," one said, sadly.

"You're looking good," former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody told him. "I'm still living," Wallace replied in a tired voice.

The day of Wallace's arrival, a Gallup poll showed him as the first choice of Democratic voters for the presidential nomination. The governor told reporters that he has "not yet decided" whether to run, but added, "The constituency I represented in 1972 is certainly going to be represented in 1976."

His aides, however, have insisted recently that he is planning to enter almost every major Democratic primary in 1976. They claim that his partial paralysis, due to a 1972 assassination attempt, will not be an insurmountable handicap. "All the governor needs is a blue curtain and a TV camera, and he can conduct a fine campaign," one aide said.

But many party professionals here doubt the governor could win many primaries, if he did not demonstrate through personal campaigning that his health was strong enough to carry the burden. He tried to solicit delegates for this conference without making a personal effort, spending $100,000 in Texas alone. But he failed to win much support. Wallace could claim only about 2 per cent of the delegates — a significant decline from the 30 per cent delegate strength he showed at the presidential convention two years ago.

His wife, Cornelia, who is in constant attendance behind his wheelchair during his brief public appearances, is opposed to a 1976 Presidential effort. She told a Democratic official recently that she hoped he would not run and would remain within the party, rather than support any independent effort. However, she added that she had no control over his decision.

Rumors out of Montgomery for months have indicated that the governor's recovery progress has been far slower than hoped, and that he is even weaker than his brief and carefully stage-managed appearances and interviews might suggest.

Arrangement Too Cozy

Possible arrangements involving personnel of the Lancaster County Railroad Transportation Safety District are a little too cozy for comfort. Due to his recent election as Lancaster County surveyer, District Executive Director Marvin Nuernberger will be leaving that post.

One possibility for filling the vacancy is the elevation to the post of John Longsdorf, now a coordinator with the district of programs involving the six railroads with lines in Lancaster County. One of the major jobs of the district is to improve traffic safety and convenience by eliminating unnecessary railroad tracks and improving track grade crossings.

Longsdorf is on leave of absence from the Union Pacific Railroad. We fail to see how he can serve even as a coordinator for the district, much less as the executive director.

If his position with the UP does not constitute an inherent conflict of interest with the district, then we have never seen a conflict. It is not a question of Longsdorf's personal integrity, which we do not question at all.

But the district's responsibility is to the taxpayers who support that district, which means its relationship with the railroads is an adversary one. Quite conceivably, the district may be called upon to make decisions that pit the public's interest against the interest of the railroads.

In such a situation, Longsdorf would occupy an obvious position of conflict of interest, regardless of his objectivity.

Further, Longsdorf has offered his services for $30,000 a year, $5,000 more than he is now making and $10,000 more than Nuernberger is making. That is a nice gesture on Longsdorf's part, especially at this holiday time of year, but we believe it might respectfully be declined by the district board.

Finally, there is talk of Nuernberger, when taking over as county surveyor, continuing as a paid consultant for the transportation district. That's another gesture the board might well find best to decline.

Nothing in all this seems to be illegal but it is a might cozy exercise in back scratching. The district board would be well advised not to play the kind of game in which it seems about to be engaged.

No Free Lunch Anticipated

We read that a spokesman for the natural gas industry told government officials that efforts to cut oil consumption would worsen recession and impose austerity on the nation.

It sounded as if he meant it to be an eye-opening prediction of dreadful conditions ahead. We think it should be seen merely as a calm appraisal of what the future holds.

Henry Linden, president of the Institute of Gas Technology, while testifying at hearings on energy policy this week differed sharply with government experts who say fuel can be saved by reducing waste without harming economic activity.

The reduction the government seeks would slow the economy by 3%, Linden said.

He said the public should be told "what this truly means — it means austerity; it means a drop in real income; it may mean unemployment; it means a loss in mobility and many other undesirable side effects."

The true meaning hasn't been hidden from the American people. They know something about austerity (well, relative austerity); a drop in real income; unemployment; a loss in mobility and other undesirable side effects that are the products of economic hard times.

"To make these sacrifices in anticipation of getting a free lunch," Linden said, "may create some political repercussions which are quite dangerous."

We would agree with Linden that if the government takes a tough approach to the energy situation in particular and the economy in general, those advocating such an approach will be in political hot water — at least for awhile. Crimps and cramps in the lifestyle are not designed to make elected officials look good.

But on the other hand, we believe that most people will not equate solutions to the energy and economic problems with a free lunch, no matter what government experts may say. They know there are tough times ahead, that things will have to get worse before they get better.

Industry spokesmen who make self-serving statements suggesting that energy conservation is bad for the economy, and thus an evil in itself, will only help to delay the time when things get better.

"I Think You Can Stop Worrying About Drift And Uncertainty"

In Defense Of Ford

WASHINGTON — President Ford is being criticized severely and sometimes even savagely these days. Even his supporters are giving him what Damon Runyon used to call a "medium hello." But in fairness, there is another side to the Ford story, which has to be balanced alongside the charges against him.

The charges are serious. They are that, with the highest unemployment rate in America in 13 years, and the biggest drop in the stock market in 12 years, he can't make up his mind whether inflation or economic recession is the major problem, and also that he is making too many concessions to the Russians, paying too much attention to foreign affairs at the expense of home affairs, and stringing along with the old Nixon gang in the cabinet and the White House.

There is plenty of room for honest conflict in the White House. It would be a brave man who would say that these are not fair criticisms. There is plenty of room for honest conflict about how to struggle between inflation and recession, what to do about the battle between the Greeks and the Turks over Cyprus, how to deal with the Russians over the trade bill, arms control, the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel, the relations of the United States to Europe and Japan, and many other things.

But in all the arguments about these domestic and foreign problems, one thing about President Ford has stood out. He has restored some kind of integrity to the debate. Whether he is talking to the Democratic leaders of Capitol Hill — Mike Mansfield in the Senate or Speaker Carl Albert or Rep. Thomas "Tip" O'Neill in the House, or the leaders of foreign governments — somehow he manages to convey the feeling that he is giving them an honest pitch.

Maybe this is not good enough, and the guess here is that it isn't, but whether he is right or wrong in what he does, he is at least beginning to restore belief. Story No. 2:

An economy-minded suburban matron, noticing in her newspaper that the prices of spirits at Macy's were lower than at her village liquor store in Dudgeon Heights, Conn., cranked up her bright red Volkswagen and drove into the heart of Fun City. Happily, she found a parking place right in front of the big store, picked out an assortment of grogs, carried the box to her car, and deposited it in the up-front trunk compartment.

Then, noticing that she still had some time left on her meter, she locked the trunk and went back into the store for some additional shopping. When she returned, consternation and dismay! The trunk compartment had been smashed flat, as if it had been hit by a safe dropped from a great height. The immediate area was heady with the scent of whiskey.

The poor dear was on the brink of a Niagara of tears when she noticed a note stuck under her windshield wiper. It read: "Dear Car Owner. My name is Ralph Zilch. I am completely responsible for the condition of your car. Please call me at 594-6600 and I will see that you are properly reimbursed for the damage to your car and the contents of the trunk. What happened is not easy to explain in a short note."

She called the number.

"Madison Square Garden," a brisk voice answered.

"There must be some mistake," the distraught woman said. "I was looking for a Mr. Ralph Zilch . . ."

"Just a moment, Mr. Zilch is expecting your call."

Mr. Zilch had some incredible news for her. He's an elephant man. Seems he was walking a couple of them across 34th street to the Garden when one of them spotted the red hood of the parked Volkswagen. He sat down on it, apparently believing it was the red stool on which Mr. Zilch had been trying to train him to sit during his new act.

Poor woman drove back to Connecticut. State trooper stopped her on outskirts of Dudgeon Heights. Accused her of leaving scene of a car accident, and of smelling of whiskey. Took her to headquarters. Nobody there would believe her story. Got home very late. Husband angry.

Story No. 3:

Nice little old lady had a great big St. Bernard dog, her faithful companion and security against New York thieves, muggers, etc. Dog died late Friday afternoon. She called the ASPCA and asked if it would pick up dog and give it a decent burial. Man on phone said nix — matter would have to wait over in her small apartment until Monday . . . unless she could get dead dog to the ASPCA before 5 o'clock. It was 4:45.

Little old lady rolled big St. Bernard in large suitcase and skidded late lamented downstairs. It was too heavy for her to lift from pavement, but she spotted a kindly-looking young man and asked him to please carry suitcase to corner, where she could get a cab. Young man picked up suitcase and fled with it.

What these stories have in common is that not one of them is true. They were told to me by people who lead normal, honest lives. The trouble is that I was sap enough to check. And double check.

Pity! I so wish they had happened.

MARIANNE MEANS

Doubts Grow About Gov. Wallace's Health

KANSAS CITY — Gov. George Wallace of Alabama went to the Democratic mid-term charter convention last week to demonstrate that he means to remain an influential party figure.

But his limited appearance convinced many Democratic officials that his physical health is too frail to sustain the pressures of a presidential campaign in 1976, to say nothing of the White House itself.

He did not participate in any of the convention debates or panels and confined his activities to meetings with old friends in his heavily guarded hotel suite and attendance at one Democratic National Committee reception at the Harry S Truman Library in nearby Independence, Mo. Those who saw him and talked to him felt that he appeared weaker than in the past. "No juice anymore," one said, sadly.

"You're looking good," former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody told him. "I'm still living," Wallace replied in a tired voice.

The day of Wallace's arrival, a Gallup poll showed him as the first choice of Democratic voters for the presidential nomination. The governor told reporters that he has "not yet decided" whether to run, but added, "The constituency I represented in 1972 is certainly going to be represented in 1976."

His aides, however, have insisted recently that he is planning to enter almost every major Democratic primary in 1976. They claim that his partial paralysis, due to a 1972 assassination attempt, will not be an insurmountable handicap. "All the governor needs is a blue curtain and a TV camera, and he can conduct a fine campaign," one aide said.

But many party professionals here doubt the governor could win many primaries, if he did not demonstrate through personal campaigning that his health was strong enough to carry the burden. He tried to solicit delegates for this conference without making a personal effort, spending $100,000 in Texas alone. But he failed to win much support. Wallace could claim only about 2 per cent of the delegates — a significant decline from the 30 per cent delegate strength he showed at the presidential convention two years ago.

His wife, Cornelia, who is in constant attendance behind his wheelchair during his brief public appearances, is opposed to a 1976 Presidential effort. She told a Democratic official recently that she hoped he would not run and would remain within the party, rather than support any independent effort. However, she added that she had no control over his decision.

Rumors out of Montgomery for months have indicated that the governor's recovery progress has been far slower than hoped, and that he is even weaker than his brief and carefully stage-managed appearances and interviews might suggest.

Ultimate Victory Is Seen By Attorney For Indians

By JIM DeCAMP
Star Staff Writer

Predicting ultimate victory for the Indians in the hearing on the Fort Laramie Treaty of 1868 scheduled to begin Monday, chief attorney John Thorne arrived in Lincoln Wednesday night to begin final preparations for the case.

Thorne said that if U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom interprets the document as it is written he will have to say the treaty is binding on the U.S. government and the government must conform with all the articles of the treaty.

Thorne said the government has always held discovery gives the right of occupation, adding that it was the Indian and not the white European who discovered the Americas.

He said that in August Dr. William Laughlin working with a team of Soviet scholars established that it was in fact the Indians who crossed the Aleutian land bridge thus being the first humans on either North of South America.

Thorne said Dr. Laughlin is scheduled to be on hand to testify as an expert witness.

Thorne said that if the treaty is held to be valid all charges now pending in connection with the Wounded Knee takeover would be void.

A Frenchman cannot be tried in a United States court for a crime he may have committed in France, he said, and an Indian cannot be tried for a crime he may have committed in his own country.

Thorne admitted that the Indian has never stood much of a chance in U.S. courts, but said that if Judge Urbom reads the laws as they should be read and interpreted they will win.

He said finding the treaty valid is only the first step in a massive job of compensation white European immigrants owe the Indian.

Thorne said the land could be returned to the Sioux in one of two ways.

The government could condemn the land and pay the present owners fair value for it and then return it to the Indians, he said, or the government could allow the present owners to retain title until their death and then the land would go to the government which would return it to the Sioux nation.

Thorne said compensation would also have to be made for the depletion of natural resources. He said this would provide an economic base to go along with their long established cultural base.

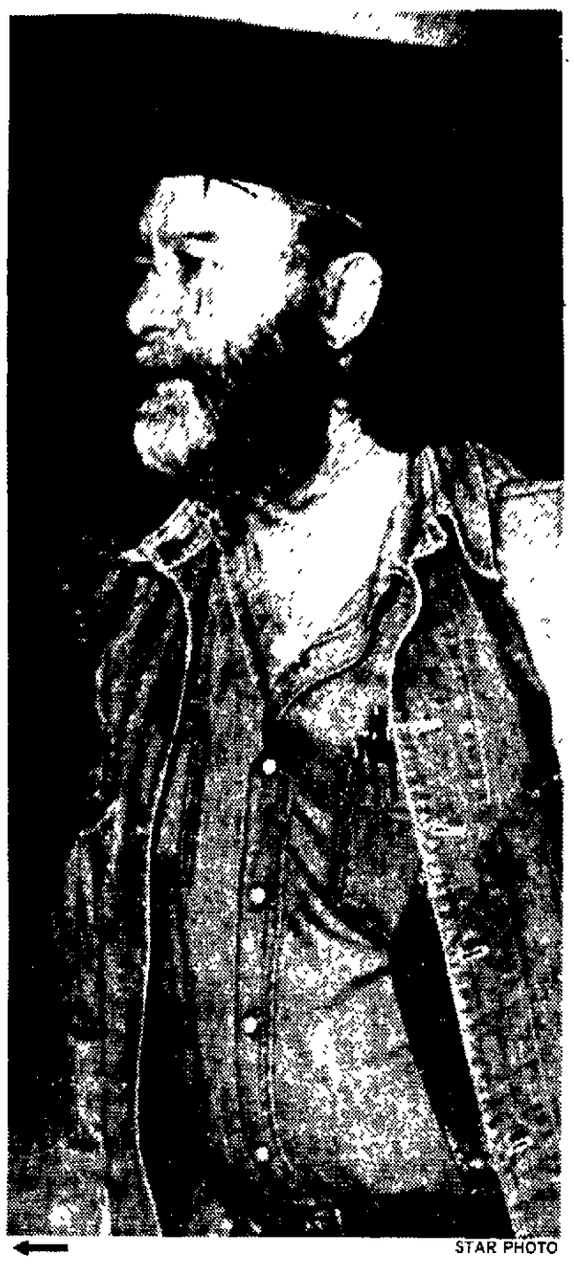

The treaty covers approximately half of South Dakota and a small portion of North Dakota.

Thorne acknowledged that in 1823 Supreme Court Justice John Marshall held that the Indians were not entitled to their land in a ruling that essentially said "might makes right."

He said that Marshall also spoke of the Indians as wards of the state and the U.S. as guardians.

Thorne noted that the court has reversed itself many times and pointed to the desegregation ruling in 1954 reversing the separate but equal doctrine as an example.

Thorne said he expects the Indians' portion of the case to take approximately two weeks depending on how much time Judge Urbom wants to work each day and the extent of cross examination by the government.

Goals, Policies Unit Urges Revising State Constitution

The Goals and Policies Committee recommended Wednesday night that the state constitution be reworked to allow the city to help pay for the remodeling of privately owned homes.

The city hopes to receive $8.9 million in federal funds over the next six years to fight urban decay. The federal community development act specifies that those dollars can be channeled into the rehabilitation of deteriorating houses.

Community Development Director Leo Scherer told the Goals and Policies Committee that the state constitution prohibits such public investment in private housing.

The citizens group, represented by more than 100 people Wednesday night, urged that the City Council and state senators endorse the constitutional change.

A Community Development Task Force is preparing a formal application for federal funds which will be used to benefit low and moderate income people.

As a part of that application, which is due by April 15, the task force must develop a number of goals which the city will try to obtain in redeveloping Lincoln neighborhoods.

The Goals and Policies Committee submitted a number of goals to the task force for possible inclusion in that project.

The goals deal with housing, economic development, transportation, community services, parks and recreation, the environment, education and urban development.

In other action, the committee confirmed six additional appointments to its Monitoring Board, which is charged with overseeing the committee.

Under the bylaws adopted by the committee in October, Chairman Bob Hans appointed six people in an attempt to balance out representation on the Monitoring Board. The bylaws call for the members to represent a cross-section of the city and county.

The six new members are Buck Balok, Charles Svoboda, Viola Boesiger, Hub Hall, Philip Kaye and Mala DeBurg. The committee elected the remaining 14 Monitoring Board members in October.

Hans said the next meeting is scheduled for February.

Hikes Scheduled

The Chet Ager Nature Center will offer winter nature hikes each Sunday in January. The hikes, which will begin at 1 p.m. at the center, will cover 1½ miles and will focus attention on winter activities of birds and mammals.

Chamber Wants 'Prestige' Route

By BOB SCHREPF

The West Cornhusker Highway approach to the new municipal airport terminal should be regarded as a "prestige entrance to Lincoln" and the Nebraska Department of Roads should design it as such, the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce declared Wednesday night.

Chamber Director John Campbell said that lobbying for an upgraded and expedited improvement of the West Cornhusker connection to the airport complex is "one of the most important projects of the coming year."

At an annual dinner meeting otherwise given to pleasantries and the installation of new officers and directors, the chamber board passed a resolution noting:

— That West Cornhusker provides the best direct access to Lincoln's "new front door," the multi-million dollar terminal building which has just opened, and which, the chamber said, is "symbolic of the entrance into a new air transportation age."

— That the highway serves a fast-growing industrial complex and is a vital access to over 28% of Lincoln's total lodging and convention facilities.

— That the "obsolete design of West Cornhusker Highway presents a safety hazard."

The chamber resolution asked the Nebraska Department of Roads "to join us in recognizing West Cornhusker Highway as a prestige entrance to Lincoln, warranting maximum design efforts to provide, as soon as possible, a highway improvement highly pleasing in appearance as well as capable of adequately handling the projected high volume of traffic."

Although construction of the new connecting roads, including the West Cornhusker improvement, nearest the airport is underway, the major portion of West Cornhusker west of Interstate 180 is still a narrow and obsolete two-lane road.

In other action, the chamber board approved a "one-time" solicitation campaign asking major contributing members to roll back a chamber budget deficit of $55,000 to $60,000.

A general dues increase is not contemplated at this time, new President Paul Amen said.

Officers Are Installed By Lincoln Chamber

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce installed its 1975 slate of officers and directors Wednesday night at the traditional Christmas-time annual dinner at the Lincoln Country Club.

As a result of an election in September, Paul Amen, chairman of the board of the National Bank of Commerce, took over Wednesday night as chamber president. He succeeds John Olsson of Olsson and Associates.

Joining Amen as officers of the chamber board of directors were Leo Beck, Alexander and Alexander, first vice president; James W. Bradley, Beyer Distributing Co., second vice president; Jack Campbell, Massachusetts Mutual, third vice president and Miles Tommeraasen, vice chancellor for finance, University of Nebraska, treasurer.

John Fraker was re-elected executive vice president and secretary of the chamber board.

Amen appointed the following directors for one-year terms: John M. Campbell, Miller and Paine; Richard Chapin, Stuart Enterprises; George David, American Stores; Mrs. Elaine Hammer, League of Women Voters; E. Ross Martin, Peat, Marwick and Mitchell; Don Pegler, Pegler and Co.; Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf and Dr. Glenn Turner, county superintendent of schools.

Elected to the chamber board of directors for three-year terms were: James E. Geist, Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co.; Leland Holdt, president, Security Mutual Life Insurance Co.; James Kamas, Baker Printing Co.; Barbara Lautzenheiser, vice president, Bankers Life Nebraska; Corwin Moore, Miller and Moore; J. William Peterson, Lincoln Equipment Co. and Robert E. Peterson, Peterson Construction Co.

Youth Injured In Jack Mishap

A Lincoln youth was listed in "fair" condition at Bryan Memorial Hospital with injuries he received to his hands when a jack slipped while he was working on his car Wednesday afternoon.

Police said Edward Boyd, 17, of 5010 Walker, had jacked up his car and when it started to roll forward his hands were pinched between the jack, bumper and car

Saxbe To Be Envoy

MECHANICSBURG, Ohio (AP) — Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe is expected to be named within the next 48 hours as U.S. ambassador to India, The Associated Press learned Wednesday night.

Sources close to the attorney general said the appointment would be announced as soon as the Indian government approves it.

Saxbe, at a meeting of a private hunting club he helped organize, told fellow members and neighbors "I'll soon be leaving," but didn't tell them where he was going.

"He's going to India, you know," said one of Saxbe's quail-shooting associates. "He'll make a hell of an ambassador.

Questioned later by reporters, Saxbe said it was common practice in diplomatic circles for an ambassador-designate not to comment on his appointment until the country to which he was going had privately approved the selection.

Saxbe, 58, three-time Ohio attorney general and onetime speaker of the Ohio House, was elected to the Senate in 1968.

Before he finished his term, he resigned to become President Nixon's last attorney general

N. Ireland Churches Urge Peace

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland's four main religious faiths opened their first joint campaign Thursday for peace in the troubled province where more than 1,000 persons have died in sectarian violence since 1969.

The peace appeal by Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist and Episcopalian Church of Ireland leaders provides for prayers to be said in all churches next Sunday. The campaign will continue after that with newspaper advertisements, sermons and radio and television broadcasts.

"We aim to get something this Christmas season which may yet last when Christmas is gone," the churches' joint statement said.

The appeal is aimed chiefly at the feuding Catholic and Protestant communities. A spokesman for the church leaders said:

"They feel that there is such a sickening revulsion everywhere against violence, such a sense of unutterable shame on Ireland's name and such a grim foreboding of a drift into something worse still that their campaign is essential and urgently compelling."

Commons Rejects Call For Hangings

LONDON (AP) — The House of Commons, voting two hours after a terrorist bomb exploded in a club on Piccadilly Circus, on Wednesday night rejected calls to bring back hanging for terrorists who cause someone's death.

The lawmakers voted 369 to 217 against a proposal that had called for introducing the death penalty for terrorists such as those whose actions have killed 50 persons in bombings in England over the past two years.

No injuries were reported in the Wednesday night bombing.

Scotland Yard said two men tossed a bomb through a window into the bar of the Naval and Military Club in Piccadilly and escaped through the winding streets, firing two shots at a pursuing taxicab driver.

Ford To Visit West Germany

Bonn (UPI) — President Ford will visit West Germany and West Berlin, in reply to the visit West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt made to Washington 10 days ago, the German chief of government told parliament.

Health Bills To Be Modified resembling the administration proposal.

He said the compromise bill he later co-sponsored with Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, had undesirable provisions which would have made patients pay some doctor and hospital charges out of their own pockets.

Dr. Malcom Todd, AMA president, said the doctors organization plans to reintroduce its Medicredit health insurance plan next year "in its modified form."

The two appeared together at a National Town Meeting program before an overflow crowd of more than 1,000 persons in the Kennedy Center's Eisenhower theater.

Kennedy declined to discuss specifics of the bill he will sponsor next year, but said it will contain stiff cost controls to "deal effectively with inflation" and be comprehensive in coverage and benefits.

"We want a program to give the most to the most people at the lowest cost and with the least inflation," he said.

The first Kennedy bill would have provided a national health insurance system financed by Social Security payroll taxes and administered by the government. The Kennedy-Mills compromise would have required patients to pay coinsurance and deductibles out of their own pockets, with private insurance companies still playing a role.

Todd, whose responses to some questions were greeted with boos, jeers and groans from the audience, warned against funding health insurance with payroll taxes.

"Our Social Security taxes have reached just about the highest level they can go," he said and the time may soon come when Americans pay more for Social Security than they do for federal income taxes.

The AMA's Medicredit plan, which offers tax credits for health insurance premium payments, still has 123 congressional sponsors, more than any other bill, even through 54 others retired or were defeated last November, he said.

Senate OKs Frank G. Zarb To Head FEA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank G. Zarb was confirmed by the Senate Wednesday to be administrator of the Federal Energy Administration.

Approval was by voice vote and without debate.

Zarb succeeds John C. Sawhill, who was forced to resign as chief of FEA, the new agency created to implement U.S. energy policy.

Zarb was President Ford's second choice for the job. Ford earlier nominated Andrew E. Gibson but withdrew the nomination after it was disclosed that Gibson had received an $880,000 severance-pay arrangement when he quit as president of an oil-barge firm.

200-Mile Zone OKd By Senate

Washington (AP) — The Senate passed a bill Wednesday to extend federal jurisdiction over fish from 12 to 200 miles offshore, a move designed to protect endangered species of food fish from overfishing by foreign vessels.

The measure, sponsored by coastal states senators, was approved by a vote of 68 to 27.

It would give U.S. fishermen priority within the 200-mile zone and would expire upon completion of a multination international agreement on the law of the sea.

The bill now goes to the House.

The State Department maintains that unilateral action by the United States could jeopardize chances for international agreement and invite reciprocal action by other nations.

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, supported the Defense Department's contention that retaliatory action by other nations might include unilateral extension of territorial boundaries, restricting mobility of U.S. naval forces.

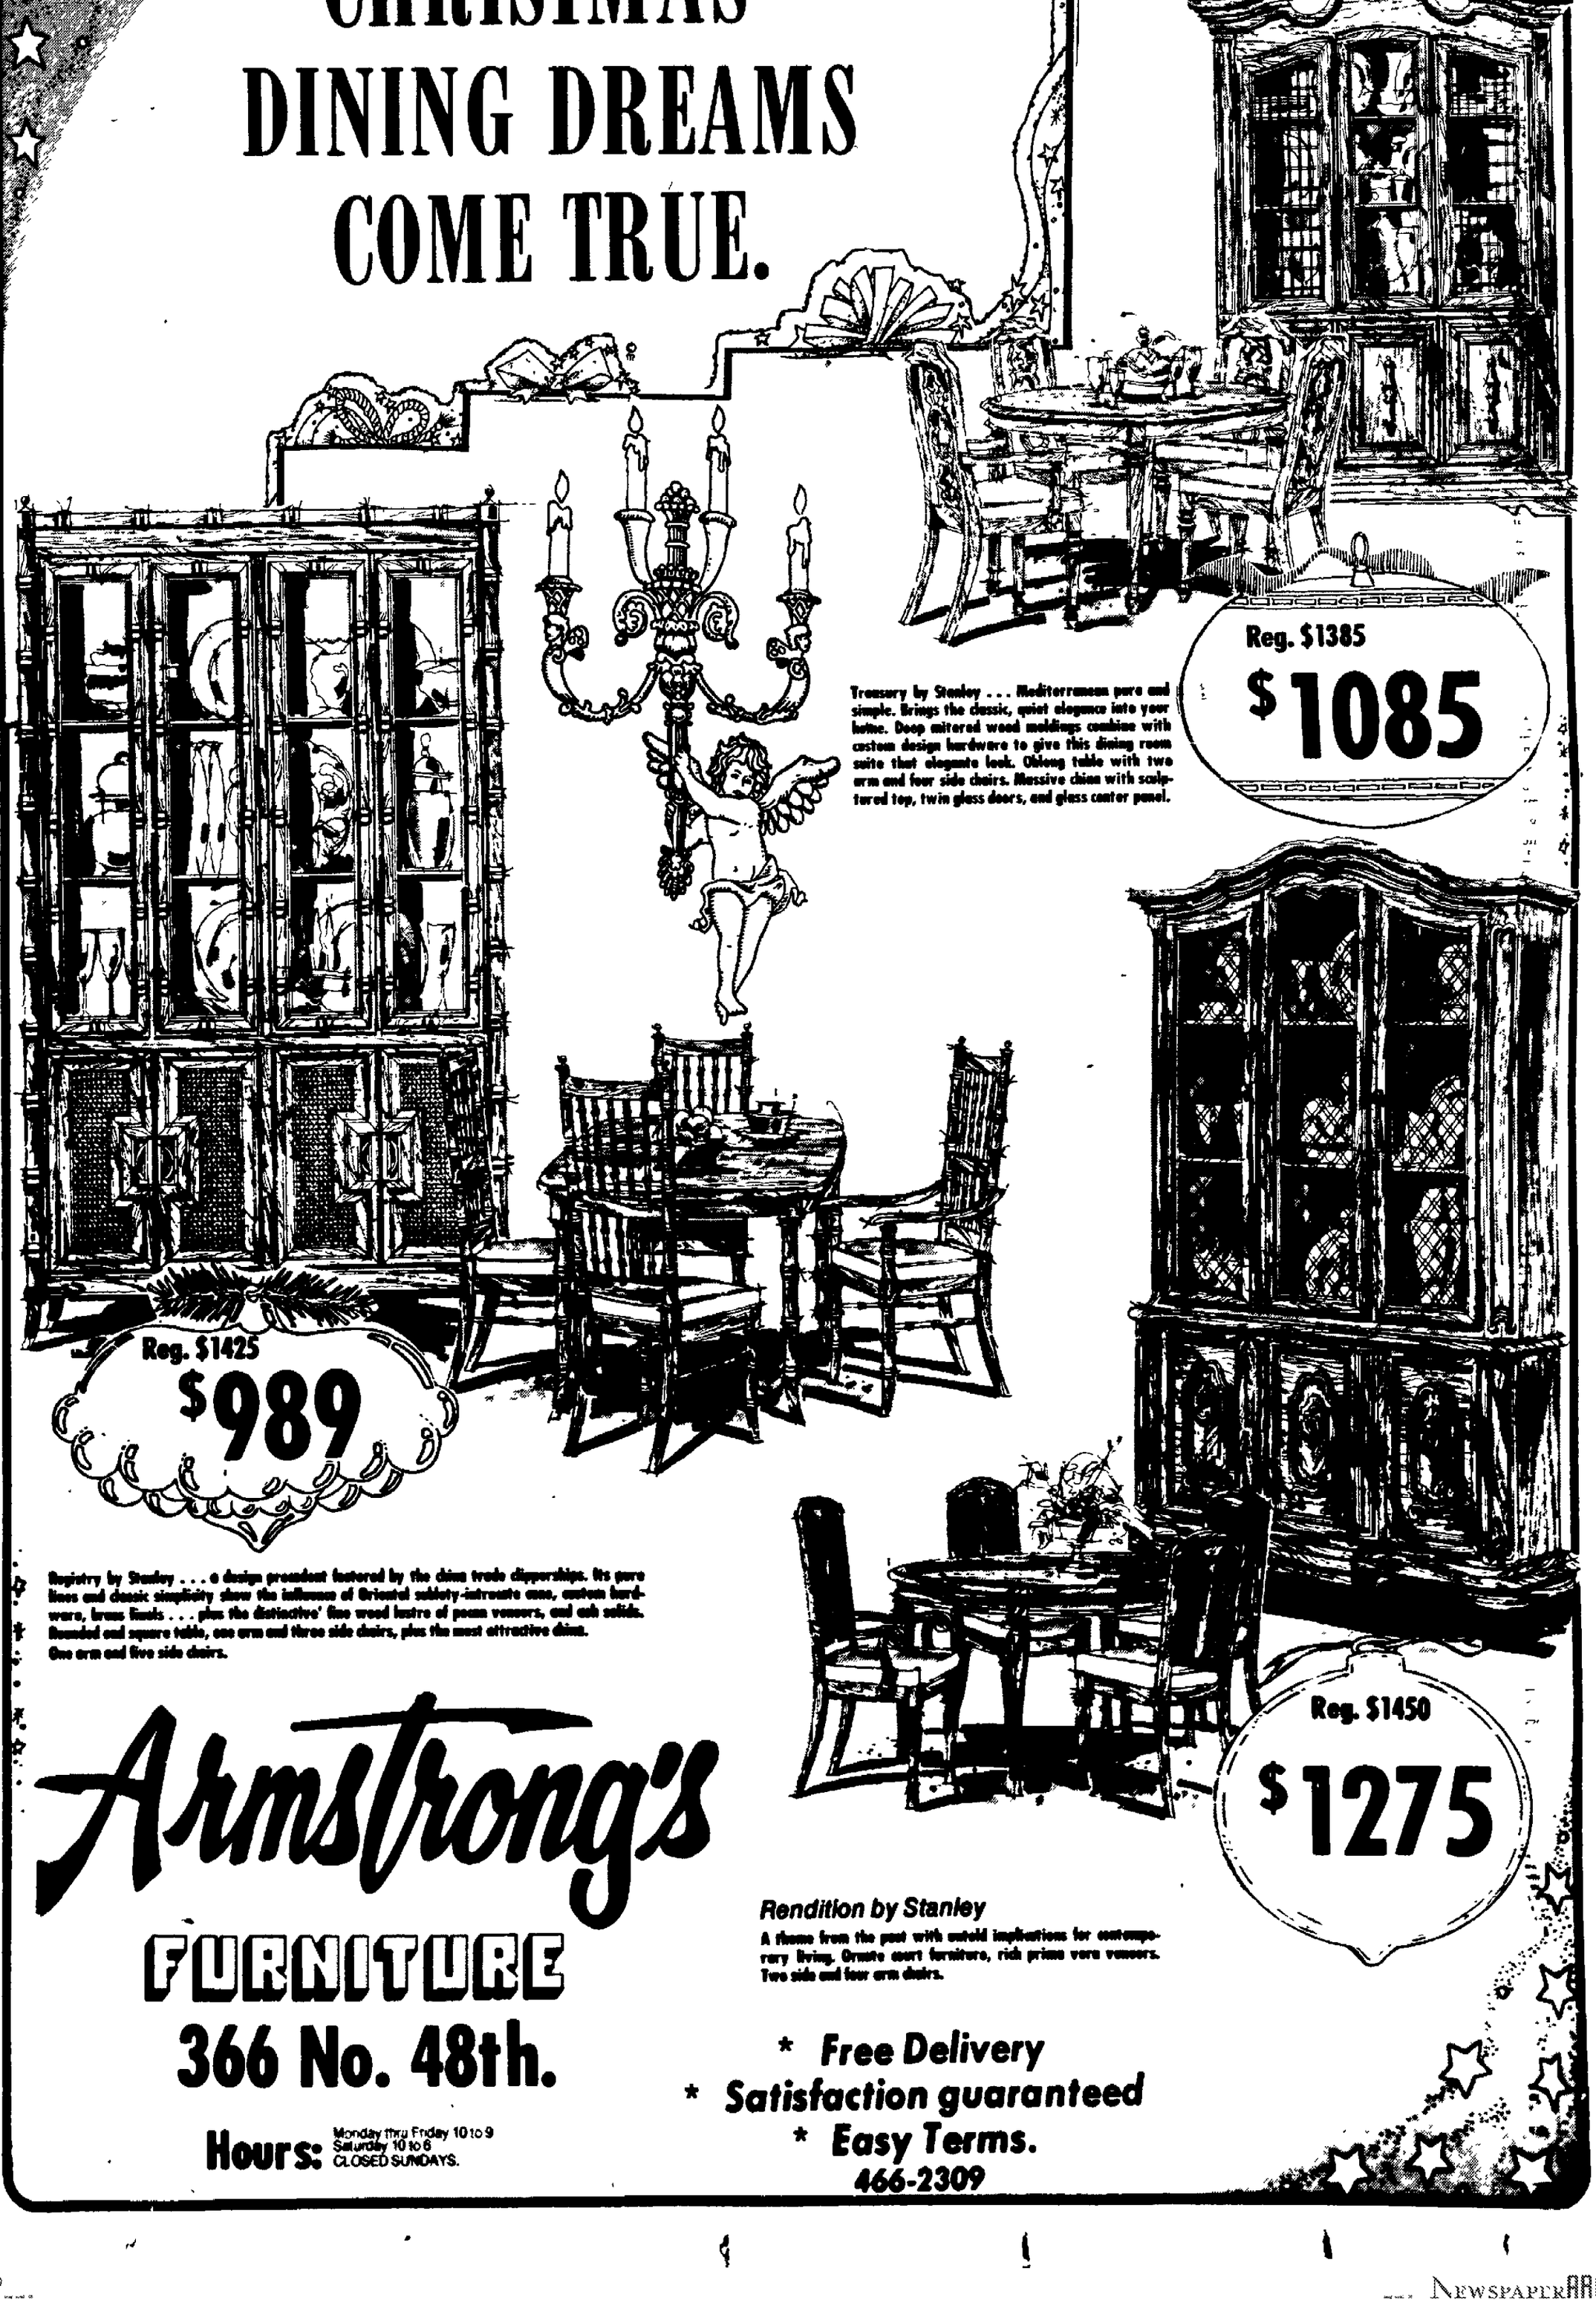

The Senate adopted by voice vote an amendment by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, to authorize interest-free federal loans to U.S. fishermen for the replacement of vessels or gear damaged or destroyed as a result of foreign fishing on the U.S. continental shelf

National Health Bills To Be Modified

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and the American Medical Association president indicated Wednesday that they are redrafting national health insurance bills to reflect a more liberal Democratic Congress next year.

Kennedy strongly supported the labor-backed "cradle to grave" insurance bill he introduced and then abandoned for a more moderate plan closely resembling the administration proposal.

He said the compromise bill he later co-sponsored with Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, had undesirable provisions which would have made patients pay some doctor and hospital charges out of their own pockets.

Dr. Malcom Todd, AMA president, said the doctors organization plans to reintroduce its Medicredit health insurance plan next year "in its modified form."

Saxbe To Be Envoy

MECHANICSBURG, Ohio (AP) — Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe is expected to be named within the next 48 hours as U.S. ambassador to India, The Associated Press learned Wednesday night.

Sources close to the attorney general said the appointment would be announced as soon as the Indian government approves it.

Saxbe, at a meeting of a private hunting club he helped organize, told fellow members and neighbors "I'll soon be leaving," but didn't tell them where he was going.

"He's going to India, you know," said one of Saxbe's quail-shooting associates. "He'll make a hell of an ambassador.

Questioned later by reporters, Saxbe said it was common practice in diplomatic circles for an ambassador-designate not to comment on his appointment until the country to which he was going had privately approved the selection.

Saxbe, 58, three-time Ohio attorney general and onetime speaker of the Ohio House, was elected to the Senate in 1968.

Before he finished his term, he resigned to become President Nixon's last attorney general.

N. Ireland Churches Urge Peace

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland's four main religious faiths opened their first joint campaign Thursday for peace in the troubled province where more than 1,000 persons have died in sectarian violence since 1969.

The peace appeal by Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist and Episcopalian Church of Ireland leaders provides for prayers to be said in all churches next Sunday. The campaign will continue after that with newspaper advertisements, sermons and radio and television broadcasts.

"We aim to get something this Christmas season which may yet last when Christmas is gone," the churches' joint statement said.

The appeal is aimed chiefly at the feuding Catholic and Protestant communities. A spokesman for the church leaders said:

"They feel that there is such a sickening revulsion everywhere against violence, such a sense of unutterable shame on Ireland's name and such a grim foreboding of a drift into something worse still that their campaign is essential and urgently compelling."

Commons Rejects Call For Hangings

LONDON (AP) — The House of Commons, voting two hours after a terrorist bomb exploded in a club on Piccadilly Circus, on Wednesday night rejected calls to bring back hanging for terrorists who cause someone's death.

The lawmakers voted 369 to 217 against a proposal that had called for introducing the death penalty for terrorists such as those whose actions have killed 50 persons in bombings in England over the past two years.

No injuries were reported in the Wednesday night bombing.

Scotland Yard said two men tossed a bomb through a window into the bar of the Naval and Military Club in Piccadilly and escaped through the winding streets, firing two shots at a pursuing taxicab driver.

Ford To Visit West Germany

Bonn (UPI) — President Ford will visit West Germany and West Berlin, in reply to the visit West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt made to Washington 10 days ago, the German chief of government told parliament.

Local Credit Experts Plan Program At High Schools

Next semester local credit experts will offer Lincoln high school students a chance to learn the advantages and dangers of buying on credit.

The educational program is being offered to public and parochial schools courtesy of the Lincoln Consumer Credit Association.

James D. Robbins, president of the association, said the group hopes to impress upon students the importance of knowing how to use credit wisely.

"Everybody must borrow money at some time in their life," Robbins said. "We hope to provide the students with a basis for making good judgments."

Robbins, the collection manager for First National Bank, said on occasion he has called people who are delinquent in their loan payments only to have the person have his son or daughter reply he is not home.

"There's no chance that son or daughter will have the right set of values," Robbins said.

The association's program offers experts from eight areas including bankruptcy, retail credit, real estate, bank credit cards and lending institutions.

Films will be supplied by First National, National Bank of Commerce and Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph as will approximately 700 workbooks.

The workbooks were prepared by the Continental Bank of Chicago, which has a similar education program, and have been paid for by the association.

Robbins said he has received complete cooperation from the schools and has found teachers anxious to have the experts discuss credit use in their classes.

"The schools' cooperation has impressed me," Robbins said.

He reported the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has also expressed some interest in getting a similar program.

Students See County In Action

Nebraska Sierra Club Backs Federal Regulation Of Platte

Omaha (AP) — The Nebraska Chapter of the Sierra Club has taken a stand in favor of a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers recommendation that the Platte River be declared a navigable waterway, according to Ted Hoffman of Omaha, chairman of the environmental group.

The recommendation would place the Platte under the control of the Corps, but is being opposed by Gov. J. James Exon and the entire Nebraska congressional delegation with the exception of Sen. Roman Hruska.

Hoffman said the state chapter approved resolution supporting the declaration during its recent state meeting in Hershey.

The group also supported a resolution encouraging the state to draft legislation to restore and preserve the environmental integrity of the Platte.

"Many of our state and national legislators have opposed this plan saying it should be done by the state, but the plain fact is the state has failed to do anything about the destruction of the river, and we support anyone's attempt to protect our rivers," Hoffman said explaining the club's stand.

"Some of our senators have also criticized the idea because the Platte is dry part of the year and not navigable, but I feel this is a red herring attempt to cloud the issue," Hoffman added.

Hoffman pointed out that the term navigable is a historic one, and the only tool available to the federal government to regulate what happens to a river.

Next semester local credit experts will offer Lincoln high school students a chance to learn the advantages and dangers of buying on credit.

The educational program is being offered to public and parochial schools courtesy of the Lincoln Consumer Credit Association.

James D. Robbins, president of the association, said the group hopes to impress upon students the importance of knowing how to use credit wisely.

"Everybody must borrow money at some time in their life," Robbins said. "We hope to provide the students with a basis for making good judgments."

Robbins, the collection manager for First National Bank, said on occasion he has called people who are delinquent in their loan payments only to have the person have his son or daughter reply he is not home.

"There's no chance that son or daughter will have the right set of values," Robbins said.

The association's program offers experts from eight areas including bankruptcy, retail credit, real estate, bank credit cards and lending institutions.

Films will be supplied by First National, National Bank of Commerce and Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph as will approximately 700 workbooks.

The workbooks were prepared by the Continental Bank of Chicago, which has a similar education program, and have been paid for by the association.

Robbins said he has received complete cooperation from the schools and has found teachers anxious to have the experts discuss credit use in their classes.

"The schools' cooperation has impressed me," Robbins said.

He reported the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has also expressed some interest in getting a similar program.

Students See County In Action

Some 300 Lancaster County high school students took a glimpse of county government at the annual County Government Day Wednesday. Nebraska Sierra Club Backs Federal Regulation Of Platte

Omaha (AP) — The Nebraska Chapter of the Sierra Club has taken a stand in favor of a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers recommendation that the Platte River be declared a navigable waterway, according to Ted Hoffman of Omaha, chairman of the environmental group.

The recommendation would place the Platte under the control of the Corps, but is being opposed by Gov. J. James Exon and the entire Nebraska congressional delegation with the exception of Sen. Roman Hruska.

Hoffman said the state chapter approved resolution supporting the declaration during its recent state meeting in Hershey.

The group also supported a resolution encouraging the state to draft legislation to restore and preserve the environmental integrity of the Platte.

"Many of our state and national legislators have opposed this plan saying it should be done by the state, but the plain fact is the state has failed to do anything about the destruction of the river, and we support anyone's attempt to protect our rivers," Hoffman said explaining the club's stand.

"Some of our senators have also criticized the idea because the Platte is dry part of the year and not navigable, but I feel this is a red herring attempt to cloud the issue," Hoffman added.

Hoffman pointed out that the term navigable is a historic one, and the only tool available to the federal government to regulate what happens to a river.

Demo Women Install C. Clark

Carolyn Clark has been installed chairman of the Lancaster County Democratic Women's Club.

Other new officers include Michaela Callahan, vice chairman; Eileen Novotny, secretary and LaRue Wunderlich, treasurer.

Plant Plans Layoffs

Coventry, R.I. (AP) — William Heller Inc., a textile dying and finishing division of Uniroyal, by mid-winter will lay off 550 workers by the end of Feb.

School Reopened For Retarded

By DEAN TERRILL

Harbine — It was five years ago that old Harbine District 87 closed its doors and divided its 24 pupils among Fairbury, Tri-County and Diller.

Still, those aren't ghosts which come busing here to classes every morning. They're kids, the very best commodity around for stuffing into a school.

Too much facility to sit idle, the spacious brick structure was resurrected soon after its closing under the apt and catchy name of "School of New Hope." It now serves 23 trainable retarded youngsters from 13 communities.

An attractive sign in front denotes the program as that of Educational Service Unit No. 5 (Gage, Jefferson and Thayer Counties). Otherwise, passersby would have no hint that anything but conventional classes are under way.

A peek inside would straighten out that misconception of any visitor. To a staff of eight headed by Supervisor of Classroom Instruction Charles Doyle, a theme of "individualized instruction" is almost reverent.

The emphasis is upon functional living skills — punctuality and personal grooming as well as basic math and reading. Since there are no grades, teaching is geared to "the specific needs and progress of each pupil."

"Generally we are looking at more than just workshop activities," said Doyle, a Kearney State graduate who formerly taught in the Hebron public schools. "Most of our students are at a higher functioning level than that of many other handicapped. We thus have a well-rounded program with considerable stress on vocational preparation."

For several years there were also "Schools of New Hope" at Fairbury, Beatrice and Holmesville. When the Harbine district dissolved and townspeople offered use of the school, it was gratefully accepted.

The school's central location was a key factor originally, although it happens that this year all but a handful of the pupils are from Gage County. Still advantageous, however, are the building's relative spaciousness, its gymnasium and its small-town seclusion.

A coordinated schedule with buses of other school districts makes it possible for driver Elmer Johnson to transport most of the pupils.

A similar but smaller program for the handicapped is also operated by ESU 5 in Hebron. Ten students, all from Thayer County, are enrolled there.

Harbine residents such as Mrs. Bill Wrigley, on New Hope's staff as a speech therapy aide, much prefer the school's reactivation to an empty building. An aura of pride had surrounded the structure ever since its erection about 1930 as a 10-grade high school.

About 1950 the facility dropped back to eight grades and declining enrollment gradually brought about the dissolution. Land in the district was divided among the Fairbury, Tri-County and Diller districts.

Staff teachers are Mrs. Merna Greer and Mrs. Fern Thomas of Beatrice and Mrs. Phyllis Wells of Hallam, assisted by several ESU specialists who divide their time throughout the area. Aides are driver Johnson and his wife, Hanna, of Beatrice. Mrs. Wrigley and Mrs. Darlene Evers of Filley.

Exon To Renew Request To Meet With President

By The Associated Press

Gov. J. James Exon says he will renew his request for a meeting with President Ford to discuss the plight of the nation's livestock industry.

Earlier Exon requests for a meeting with the chief executive were unsuccessful.

"The fact remains that nothing visible is being done to curtail imports, nor do we see any aggressive action being taken in the area of anti-trust investigation," Exon said. He referred to alleged manipulation of the livestock industry by chain stores which has resulted in at least two suits brought by cattle feeders.

Informed of Exon's request, a spokesman for Sen. Carl Curtis said the senator would be willing to "go to bat" to get Exon an appointment, if the governor would cite some specific recommendations he wished to make.

Exon noted "My contact (in seeking the meeting) will be directly with the individual member of the White House staff who indicated to me he would arrange a meeting with the President, the governor and other Nebraskans who have specific expertise in these matters."

Exon had not asked Curtis, the ranking GOP member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, for help. Curtis only responded when asked if he would, in light of the governor's intentions, offer assistance in setting up a meeting.

The agriculture committee is holding hearings in Washington this week. Some Nebraskans were to testify in those sessions, Curtis' office said.

Exon noted, as he had in the past, that if a meeting is arranged with Ford "Senator Curtis would be very welcome to attend." Exon is a Democrat, Curtis a Republican. They have disagreed on matters involving agriculture in the past.

Exon said he wanted the meeting with Ford because he felt a governor from a major livestock producting state could "bring home to the President the need for the administration to move aggressively," on problems confronting the industry.

Exon pointed to the alleged anti-trust violations by chain stores.

He said immediate action also is needed to stem "beef, poultry and dairy imports that are coming into the U.S. and depressing the market."

A reporter asked Curtis' office if the senator would assist Exon in getting the meeting, in light of Curtis' rank on the Agriculture Committee. Curtis' spokesmen said, in telephone interviews, that the senator would need specific Exon recommendations before initiating any action.

Later, Curtis released a statement which said "When any Nebraskan has something to present to the President, I try to help them get an appointment. These efforts are more apt to succeed if the person seeking the appointment has a specific proposal or expertise in the matter."

The question became moot however, in light of Exon's statement that his contact for the desired meeting was inside the White House.

Gage County Road Worker's Fall Is Fatal

Beatrice (AP) — A Gage County bridge foreman who was scheduled to retire next month died Tuesday evening in a hospital here after falling from a bridge under construction about eight miles southwest of here earlier in the day.

The victim, identified as Walter (Red) Maatch, 65, of Beatrice, apparently walked off the bridge, falling about 17 feet to the dry creekbed below.

Maatch, a 24-year veteran with the Gage County Roads Dept., was apparently not severely injured in the fall, initial reports indicating he suffered a fractured hip. However, after he was admitted to the hospital, he went into shock and died about seven hours after the fall.

Officials said workers were laying steel reinforcement bars in preparation for cement pouring when the accident occurred.

Injuries Claim Newcastle Man

Dakota City (AP) — Byren C. Anderson, 65, of Newcastle, has died in a hospital of injuries suffered May 14, 1973, in a traffic accident about three miles west of here on Neb. 35.

The State Patrol said Wednesday that Mr. Anderson apparently lost control of the truck he was driving as he was passing a car and the truck rolled. He died last Thursday.

Mr. Anderson's death will not be counted as a 1973 fatality because it did not occur within a year's time after the accident, according to the State Accident Records Bureau.

Prediction Retracted

Fort Lauderdale, Fla. (AP) — William J. Meyer, cochairman of President Ford's Citizen Action Committee, has retracted his prediction that gas rationing might take effect by Jan. 2.

School Reopened For Retarded

By DEAN TERRILL

Harbine — It was five years ago that old Harbine District 87 closed its doors and divided its 24 pupils among Fairbury, Tri-County and Diller.

Still, those aren't ghosts which come busing here to classes every morning. They're kids, the very best commodity around for stuffing into a school.

Too much facility to sit idle, the spacious brick structure was resurrected soon after its closing under the apt and catchy name of "School of New Hope." It now serves 23 trainable retarded youngsters from 13 communities.

An attractive sign in front denotes the program as that of Educational Service Unit No. 5 (Gage, Jefferson and Thayer Counties). Otherwise, passersby would have no hint that anything but conventional classes are under way.

A peek inside would straighten out that misconception of any visitor. To a staff of eight headed by Supervisor of Classroom Instruction Charles Doyle, a theme of "individualized instruction" is almost reverent.

The emphasis is upon functional living skills — punctuality and personal grooming as well as basic math and reading. Since there are no grades, teaching is geared to "the specific needs and progress of each pupil."

"Generally we are looking at more than just workshop activities," said Doyle, a Kearney State graduate who formerly taught in the Hebron public schools. "Most of our students are at a higher functioning level than that of many other handicapped. We thus have a well-rounded program with considerable stress on vocational preparation."

For several years there were also "Schools of New Hope" at Fairbury, Beatrice and Holmesville. When the Harbine district dissolved and townspeople offered use of the school, it was gratefully accepted.

The school's central location was a key factor originally, although it happens that this year all but a handful of the pupils are from Gage County. Still advantageous, however, are the building's relative spaciousness, its gymnasium and its small-town seclusion.

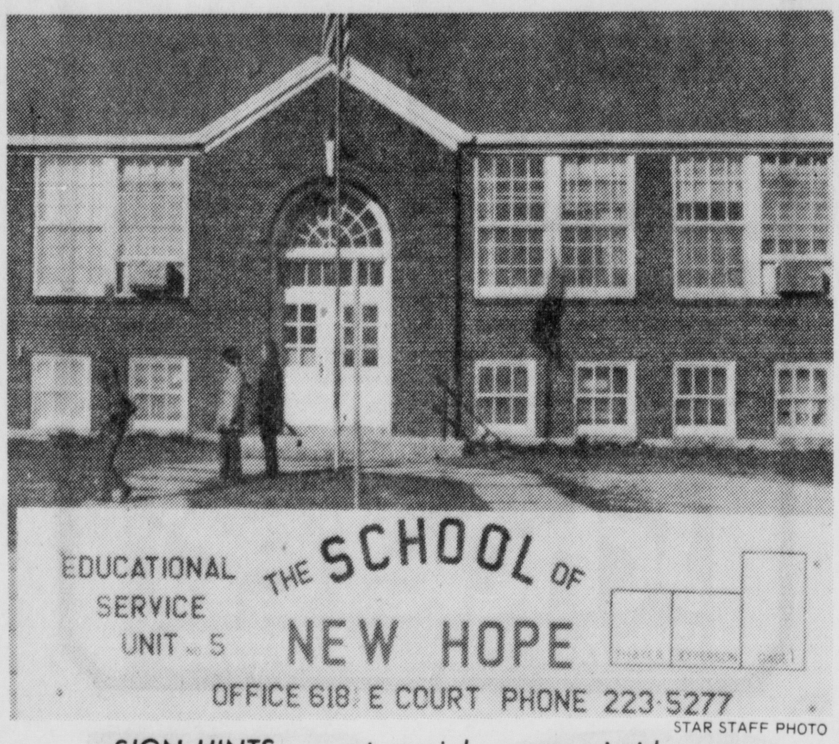

A coordinated schedule with buses of other school districts makes it possible for driver Elmer Johnson to transport most of the pupils.

A similar but smaller program for the handicapped is also operated by ESU 5 in Hebron. Ten students, all from Thayer County, are enrolled there.

Harbine residents such as Mrs. Bill Wrigley, on New Hope's staff as a speech therapy aide, much prefer the school's reactivation to an empty building. An aura of pride had surrounded the structure ever since its erection about 1930 as a 10-grade high school.

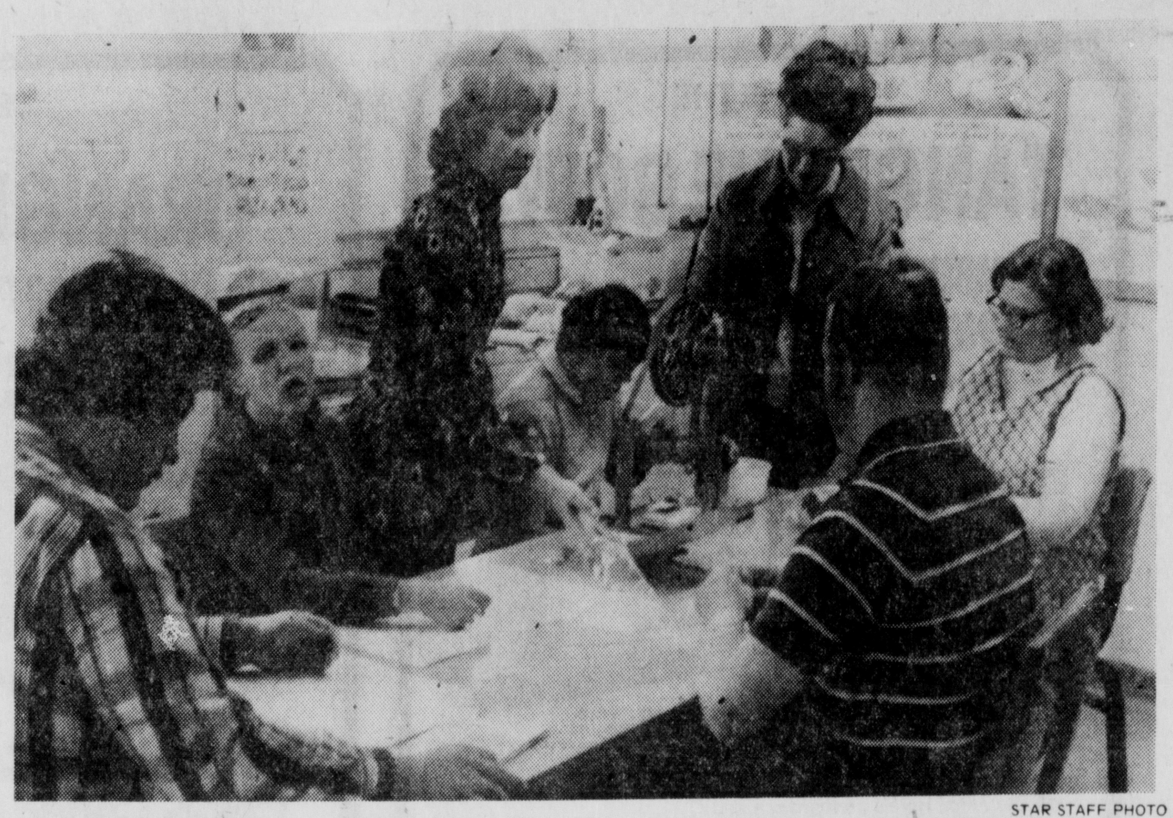

About 1950 the facility dropped back to eight grades and declining enrollment gradually brought about the dissolution. Land in the district was divided among the Fairbury, Tri-County and Diller districts.

Staff teachers are Mrs. Merna Greer and Mrs. Fern Thomas of Beatrice and Mrs. Phyllis Wells of Hallam, assisted by several ESU specialists who divide their time throughout the area. Aides are driver Johnson and his wife, Hanna, of Beatrice, Mrs. Wrigley and Mrs. Darlene Evers of Filley.

Exon To Renew Request To Meet With President

By The Associated Press

Gov. J. James Exon says he will renew his request for a meeting with President Ford to discuss the plight of the nation's livestock industry.

Earlier Exon requests for a meeting with the chief executive were unsuccessful.

"The fact remains that nothing visible is being done to curtail imports, nor do we see any aggressive action being taken in the area of anti-trust investigation," Exon said. He referred to alleged manipulation of the livestock industry by chain stores which has resulted in at least two suits brought by cattle feeders.

Informed of Exon's request, a spokesman for Sen. Carl Curtis said the senator would be willing to "go to bat" to get Exon an appointment, if the governor would cite some specific recommendations he wished to make.

Exon noted "My contact (in seeking the meeting) will be directly with the individual member of the White House staff who indicated to me he would arrange a meeting with the President, the governor and other Nebraskans who have specific expertise in these matters."

Exon had not asked Curtis, the ranking GOP member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, for help. Curtis only responded when asked if he would, in light of the governor's intentions, offer assistance in setting up a meeting.

The agriculture committee is holding hearings in Washington this week. Some Nebraskans were to testify in those sessions, Curtis' office said.

Exon noted, as he had in the past, that if a meeting is arranged with Ford "Senator Curtis would be very welcome to attend." Exon is a Democrat, Curtis a Republican. They have disagreed on matters involving agriculture in the past.

Exon said he wanted the meeting with Ford because he felt a governor from a major livestock producting state could "bring home to the President the need for the administration to move aggressively," on problems confronting the industry.

Exon pointed to the alleged anti-trust violations by chain stores.

He said immediate action also is needed to stem "beef, poultry and dairy imports that are coming into the U.S. and depressing the market."

A reporter asked Curtis' office if the senator would assist Exon in getting the meeting, in light of Curtis' rank on the Agriculture Committee. Curtis' spokesmen said, in telephone interviews, that the senator would need specific Exon recommendations before initiating any action.

Later, Curtis released a statement which said "When any Nebraskan has something to present to the President, I try to help them get an appointment. These efforts are more apt to succeed if the person seeking the appointment has a specific proposal or expertise in the matter."

The question became moot however, in light of Exon's statement that his contact for the desired meeting was inside the White House.

Gage County Road Worker's Fall Is Fatal

Beatrice (AP) — A Gage County bridge foreman who was scheduled to retire next month died Tuesday evening in a hospital here after falling from a bridge under construction about eight miles southwest of here earlier in the day.

The victim, identified as Walter (Red) Maatch, 65, of Beatrice, apparently walked off the bridge, falling about 17 feet to the dry creekbed below.

Maatch, a 24-year veteran with the Gage County Roads Dept., was apparently not severely injured in the fall, initial reports indicating he suffered a fractured hip. However, after he was admitted to the hospital, he went into shock and died about seven hours after the fall.

Officials said workers were laying steel reinforcement bars in preparation for cement pouring when the accident occurred.

Injuries Claim Newcastle Man

Dakota City (AP) — Byren C. Anderson, 65, of Newcastle, has died in a hospital of injuries suffered May 14, 1973, in a traffic accident about three miles west of here on Neb. 35.

The State Patrol said Wednesday that Mr. Anderson apparently lost control of the truck he was driving as he was passing a car and the truck rolled. He died last Thursday.

Mr. Anderson's death will not be counted as a 1973 fatality because it did not occur within a year's time after the accident, according to the State Accident Records Bureau.

Prediction Retracted

Fort Lauderdale, Fla. (AP) — William J. Meyer, cochairman of President Ford's Citizen Action Committee, has retracted his prediction that gas rationing might take effect by Jan. 2.

Insurance Bilks On 'Down Cycle'

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

A state official said Wednesday that despite a rash of insurance schemes designed to bilk the elderly in other states, Nebraska is on a "down cycle" for the time being.

However, said State Insurance Director James Jackson, should there be any question on the part of Nebraskans "I'd recommend they get in touch with us by letter, by phone or by personal visit."

The Insurance Department has a staff ready to move in such cases and "that is certainly one of our major functions," Jackson said.

Agents Eliminated

The last time there were any serious problems was about three years ago, the director said, which resulted in eight or 10 agents being eliminated from the industry ranks.

But he added the situation could change at any time and he noted Nebraska's neighbor to the west, Colorado, is one of those states now recording an outbreak of problems

"Colorado, for some reason or other, has been having some rather severe problems for the last year," Jackson said, adding that he could offer no explanation.

Asked if Nebraska's regulatory powers were somehow superior to those of Colorado, the director said he could not say. "we do the best we can," he said.

To Much Insurance

In other states, one of the recurring problems has been selling more health insufance to elderly persons that they really need.

Jackson said in the beginning of the federal Medicaid program there was a lot of confusion about coverage and some policies were issued which were unnecessary. But he said confusion was the major problem rather than intent to do something wrong.

The major problem in Nebraska, if anything, Jackson said, has been "the overly persistent salesman"

"These are the guys a person just can't seem to get rid of until you buy something," he said.

Jackson also said in dealing with cases involving the elderly, sometimes there are problems the State Insurance Department staff has to somehow work around

Difficult Problems

"Some of these are very difficult problems to solve because many times people who file a complaint with us are not the purchasers—they are nieces, daughters or even bankers," he said.

The difficulty arises in trying to get the facts from the purchaser, who sometimes simply doesn't quite realize the full impact of the situation, Jackson said.

However, he said, that by no means should be taken as an indication that he and his staff don't want to get legitimate complaints.

"We know that for every three to six complaints we do get there are a dozen ones we don't know about," he said. When we get a complaint, we try to react as quickly as possible so we can head problems before things get out of hand"

Hastings Man Bound Over On 2 Counts

Hastings (UPI) — William Henry Snell Jr., 19, Hastings, was bound over to Adams County District Court Wednesday on two counts of shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim.

Snell and a companion were charged with firing a rifle shot into the home of a junior high school teacher Nov. 25. The shot, according to police, narrowly missed the teacher.

Bound over earlier was John D Clancy, 18, Hastings. Clancy's bond remained at $25,000. However, Snell's was reduced from $25,000 to $1,000.

Clancy was granted a motion for psychiatric examination and further court action was postponed until the tests can be completed.

Snell and Clancy were arrested for running a stop sign with their headlights off moments after the shooting incident. Police then found the guns in the back seat of their car.

Valentine Man's Bond Continued In Arson Case

Valentine (UPI) — Nile Osterman, Valentine, charged with burning and looting a farm home near here last month was bound over to District Court Wednesday on charges of arson and grand larceny.

Osterman appeared before Cherry County Court Judge Samuel Ely. Ely continued bond at $10,000 and set Dec. 19 as the date of arraignment in District Court.

Osterman was charged with the burglarizing and burning of the Elmer Kyser home six miles northeast of here.

Insurance Bilks On 'Down Cycle'

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

A state official said Wednesday that despite a rash of insurance schemes designed to bilk the elderly in other states, Nebraska is on a "down cycle" for the time being.

However, said State Insurance Director James Jackson, should there be any question on the part of Nebraskans "I'd recommend they get in touch with us by letter, by phone or by personal visit."

The Insurance Department has a staff ready to move in such cases and "that is certainly one of our major functions," Jackson said.

Agents Eliminated

The last time there were any serious problems was about three years ago, the director said, which resulted in eight or 10 agents being eliminated from the industry ranks.

But he added the situation could change at any time and he noted Nebraska's neighbor to the west, Colorado, is one of those states now recording an outbreak of problems.

"Colorado, for some reason or other, has been having some rather severe problems for the last year," Jackson said, adding that he could offer no explanation.

Asked if Nebraska's regulatory powers were somehow superior to those of Colorado, the director said he could not say. "we do the best we can," he said.

To Much Insurance

In other states, one of the recurring problems has been selling more health insurance to elderly persons that they really need.

Jackson said in the beginning of the federal Medicaid program there was a lot of confusion about coverage and some policies were issued which were unnecessary. But he said confusion was the major problem rather than intent to do something wrong.

The major problem in Nebraska, if anything, Jackson said, has been "the overly persistent salesman."

"These are the guys a person just can't seem to get rid of until you buy something," he said.

Jackson also said in dealing with cases involving the elderly, sometimes there are problems the State Insurance Department staff has to somehow work around.

Difficult Problems

"Some of these are very difficult problems to solve because many times people who file a complaint with us are not the purchasers—they are nieces, daughters or even bankers," he said.

The difficulty arises in trying to get the facts from the purchaser, who sometimes simply doesn't quite realize the full impact of the situation, Jackson said.

However, he said, that by no means should be taken as an indication that he and his staff don't want to get legitimate complaints.

"We know that for every three to six complaints we do get there are a dozen ones we don't know about," he said. When we get a complaint, we try to react as quickly as possible so we can head problems before things get out of hand."

Yuletide Lighting Display Returning

Grand Island — After a blackout last year due to the energy crisis, yuletide lighting will be restored at Stuhr Museum here this year. Jack Learned, museum executive director, said the Christmas lighting display will be turned on Sunday. Nightly viewing hours will be from dusk until 9:30 p.m. through Jan. 2.

Superior Losing Physician

Superior — (AP) — Another Nebraska community is losing one of its doctors. Dr. R.R. Maixner of Superior has notified the Nuckolls County Hospital board that he will be leaving his practice. Dr. Maixner said he is moving to Missouri Valley, Iowa, for personal reasons. That will leave Superior with one physician and a new clinic with space for four doctors.

Shortages, Not Profits Blamed For High Food Costs

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Omaha — The basic cause of high food prices is a worldwide shortage in the supply of food and feed grains — not food chain profits, a spokesman for the National Association of Food Chains (NAFC) said in a press conference here Wednesday.

Clarence Adamy, president of the promotional and lobbying organization, headed a panel which also included Supermarkets Interstate president William Chisholm and Hinky Dinky vice president Allan Noddle.

The session was the first of a series of briefings slated by the NAFC nationwide to acquaint the press with the economics and operations of the food chain industry, Adamy said.

The NAFC represents over 200 corporate food chains operating 25,000 stores in the United States and Canada doing business which totaled $63 billion in 1973.

Profits Below Average

In a 40-minute slide presentation, Adamy pointed to the food chain industry's after-tax earnings to show that supermarkets make smaller profits than the overall average for American trade.

As a percentage of sales, he said, food chain after-tax (net) earnings have declined from 1.41% in 1966 to .56% today. In other words, the supermarket's profit on a $1 sale is just over half a penny, he said.

As a percentage of net worth, the profit figure has dropped from over 12% (near the all-industry average in 1966) to 7.5%, Adamy added.

Noddle of Hinky Dinky said his chain's net earnings are at .91% of sales, and about 9% of net worth.

Adamy cited increasing costs of labor and utilities, higher taxes, and inefficiency in food distribution resulting from government regulation and union control as factors taking the fastest-increasing bites out of the average supermarket's gross margin.

Cost-Push Inflation

Noddle noted that the relationship between raw and retail food prices doesn't tell the whole story. "We've had costs being pushed up on us from all aspects of the food distribution system," he said. "We are in a cost-push inflation to some extent."

Adamy was critical of the Agriculture Department's figures on the beef price spread between farmer and consumer. USDA's use of an outmoded cutting chart in computing the spread results in an error approximating 10¢ a pound, he said.

Adamy said "institutionalized waste" must be eliminated. Examples, he said, are federal regulations which prevent truckers from backhauling after delivering food, licensing provisions which require them to haul by devious routes, and union regulations which prevent everyone but highly paid meat cutters from cleaning and sweeping floors in meat-cutting areas.

Adamy said the food chain industry proposes to increase its efficiency by introducing electronic checkout systems using the universal product code, automated warehousing and inventory control, computerized labor scheduling, centralized meat cutting and standardized packaging.

Automation?

Asked whether automation will reduce employment, Adamy said he preferred the term "better utilization of labor." Unions have been cooperative in changing over to electronic checkout systems, but have been more "intransigent" in switching to centralized meat-cutting, he said.

Increased efficiency notwithstanding, the biggest factor in any future stabilization of prices will be the weather, Adamy said. With farm prices at all-time highs, farmers will be planting all-out next spring, he said, predicting a seven-billion-bushel corn crop if normal weather prevails.

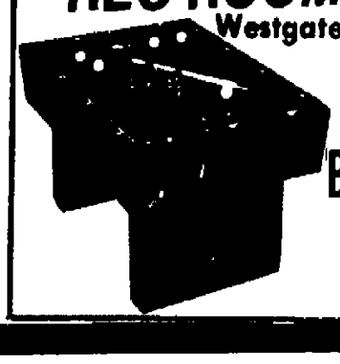

Adamy said he doesn't foresee widespread use of credit in grocery stores because of interest costs. But he expressed confidence in Hinky Dindy's controversial Transmatic Money System.

Douglas Contacted On Antitrust Unit

By United Press International

Paul Douglas, Nebraska attorney general-elect, said Wednesday four major industries have already contacted him to discuss the new antitrust division of the attorney general's office.

Douglas said he intends to utilize the division to its fullest extent and has already hired one new staff member to work exclusively in the division.

The division was created by the Legislature this year but retiring Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer decided to allow his replacement to get the division fully operational.

Douglas declined to reveal which industries contacted him but said he wished to emphasize that they made the initial move.

Paul Douglas

In addition, he said other attorneys have contacted him to discuss other areas the attorney general's office should get involved in when it comes to the antitrust division.

Douglas said it appears to him from the initial contacts that there will be self-policing going on within industrial circles.

"The lawyers in the state are very aware that we are going to be active and it looks like the lawyers that are representing the industries are already contacting us, so it looks like the industries themselves are policing each other," he said.

"That might be one of the first ways we get involved in antitrust matters," Douglas added.

Besides one new staff member hired to work with antitrust matters. Douglas said he has hired two others and is looking for a fourth addition to the staff.

Vacant Positions

The openings he is filling, he said, are not replacements for existing staff members but are positions which are now vacant.

In other words, Douglas said he is only attempting to bring the staff up to full strength. He said none of the present staff is planning to leave at the present time.

Douglas said Meyer "kept those vacancies for his successor to fill."

Douglas declined for the present to reveal who his newly hired staff members are. But he did say the one who will be working in the antitrust division is from outside Nebraska.

Of the other two, he said one is from Lincoln and the other is from Omaha.

Douglas said he has a number of people to choose from in filling the fourth position. In total, he said he has on file some 168 applications.

NARC's Director Foley Resigns

By The Associated Press

John Foley's resignation as executive director of the Nebraska Association for Retarded Citizens was announced Wednesday. He has accepted a post as a 10-state regional representative for the organization.

Foley will assume the new post in Madison, Wis., in January.

Foley said Nebraska had made significant strides during the past five years in service to the mentally retarded through community programs.

He said two unresolved service issues still face the state, and questioned the merits of continuing the Department of Public Institutions.

"I see no reason for the services to the mentally retarded to be under DPI anymore than the penal complex, and I believe the state would be better served if there was a separate division or at least one for the mentally retarded and other developmentally disturbed," Foley said.

He said steps should be taken to resolve problems centering on place ment of the retarded in community nursing homes, and said much remains to be dne tto

He said steps should be taken to resolve problems centering on placement of the retarded in community nursing homes, and said much remains to be done to ensure public schooling for all persons regardless of handicaps. He added that LB403 had done much in the direction of education for the handicapped, however.

Foley said the region he will represent includes Nebraska, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Iowa.

Employes Protest Rate Hike

Thirty-three Western Electric employes in Omaha say it's unfair for Northwestern Bell to ask for a 19% hike in phone rates when its employes only get a 10½% raise.

Western Electric, which manufactures phone sets, is a subsidiary of the Bell System.

The employes' protest was contained in a letter to the Nebraska Public Service Commission. The commission is considering a $16 million rate increase for Northwestern Bell.

The phone company said the increase is needed, in part, to cover wage increases recently negotiated with the Communications Workers of America.

In the letter, the employes said, "We the undersigned feel that the proposed rate increase of the Bell System is unjustified and inflationary.

"Considering an inflation rate of 11% and wage increases in the Bell System of only 10½%, an increase of nearly 19% is very unfair and (amounts to) profiteering on the part of the Bell System."

So far, the commission has received 110 protests to the Bell application. Besides the Western Electric employes, the protesters include the city of Wisner, the Loup City Chamber of Commerce, the Omaha Legal Aid Society, the Chadron City Council, the city of Grant and the village of Lyman.

Hearings will be held on the application.

Water Release Rate Reported At Winter Level

Omaha (AP) — The release rate of water from the Missouri River's main stem dam system reached the winter level out of Gavins Point, the lowermost dam, Nov. 30, the Corps of Engineers said Wednesday.

The engineers' Missouri River Division headquarters at Omaha said system storage at the end of November was 59.9 million acre-feet, 600,000 acre-feet more than this date a year ago.

"Stored water should continue to decrease until early next spring, when the reservoir system will approach its annual base of flood control," a division official said.

Hydropower generation totaled 804 million kilowatt hours, 47% more than last November's output, the official said. Total yearly generation through November has already surpassed total generation for 1973.

The corps said the last commercial towboat left the Missouri River Nov. 29. Preliminary figures show navigation this year passed 2.5 million tons, a 35% increase over 1973.

Sheep Producers Seek More Publicity

Sheep producers have approved a new agreement between the U.S. secretary of agriculture and the American Sheep Producers Council Inc. (ASPC).

The mail referendum held Nov. 4 through 15 resulted in a vote with 85.5% favoring the public relations, advertising and sales promotion activites of the Denver-based ASPC, which will be funded by a national checkoff program on lamb and wool.

Howard Derrick of Eldorado, Tex., president of ASPC, expressed the hope that the downward trend in sheep numbers for the past 14 years would be halted by the new program.

"We will expand our public relations efforts to explain the true facts about the domestic sheep industry to the consumer," he said.

"We also plan to work with the primary producer to provide information on new technology in sheep management, nutrition and other means for increasing the efficiency of the sheep business," he said.

The council will also maintain its activities with allied industries to improve the marketing of lamb and wool.

Baxter Declines Renomination

Grand Island (AP) — Tom Baxter of Grand Island,a director and former president of the National Livestock Feeders Association, has declined renomination to his post.

Asked Wednesday why he did so, Baxter would say only that "the people in the association are pretty well astride of why I resigned, so I think it's best to leave it that way."

He refused any further comment.

Association Executive Vice President Don Magdanz of Omaha said that Baxter declined renomination to the board at the group's convention in Norfolk last week. Baxter has been a director for three years and served as president in 1972, following his election to the presidency in December 1971.

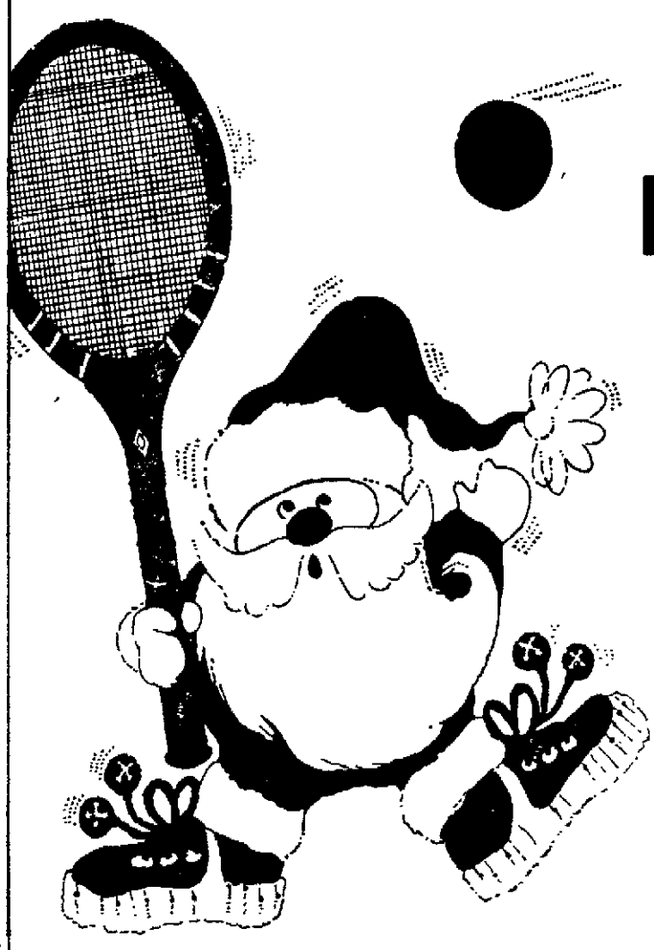

Magdanz said Baxter's action "came as a complete surprise." He said he did not know the reason behind it.

Wayne Hendrickson of Kearney was elected to replace Baxter on the board.

Douglas Contacted On Antitrust Unit

By United Press International

Paul Douglas, Nebraska attorney general-elect, said Wednesday four major industries have already contacted him to discuss the new antitrust division of the attorney general's office.

Douglas said he intends to utilize the division to its fullest extent and has already hired one new staff member to work exclusively in the division.

The division was created by the Legislature this year but retiring Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer decided to allow his replacement to get the division fully operational.

Douglas declined to reveal which industries contacted him but said he wished to emphasize that they made the initial move.

Paul Douglas

In addition, he said other attorneys have contacted him to discuss other areas the attorney general's office should get involved in when it comes to the antitrust division.

Douglas said it appears to him from the initial contacts that there will be self-policing going on within industrial circles.

"The lawyers in the state are very aware that we are going to be active and it looks like the lawyers that are representing the industries are already contacting us, so it looks like the industries themselves are policing each other," he said.

"That might be one of the first ways we get involved in antitrust matters," Douglas added.

Besides one new staff member hired to work with antitrust matters, Douglas said he has hired two others and is looking for a fourth addition to the staff.

Vacant Positions

The openings he is filling, he said, are not replacements for existing staff members but are positions which are now vacant.

In other words, Douglas said he is only attempting to bring the staff up to full strength. He said none of the present staff is planning to leave at the present time.

Douglas said Meyer "kept those vacancies for his successor to fill."

Douglas declined for the present to reveal who his newly hired staff members are. But he did say the one who will be working in the antitrust division is from outside Nebraska.

Of the other two, he said one is from Lincoln and the other is from Omaha.

Douglas said he has a number of people to choose from in filling the fourth position. In total, he said he has on file some 168 applications.

NARC's Director Foley Resigns

By The Associated Press

John Foley's resignation as executive director of the Nebraska Association for Retarded Citizens was announced Wednesday. He has accepted a post as a 10-state regional representative for the organization.

Foley will assume the new post in Madison, Wis., in January.

Foley said Nebraska had made significant strides during the past five years in service to the mentally retarded through community programs.

He said two unresolved service issues still face the state, and questioned the merits of continuing the Department of Public Institutions.

"I see no reason for the services to the mentally retarded to be under DPI anymore than the penal complex, and I believe the state would be better served if there was a separate division or at least one for the mentally retarded and other developmentally disturbed," Foley said.

He said steps should be taken to resolve problems centering on place ment of the retarded in community nursing homes, and said much remains to be dne tto

He said steps should be taken to resolve problems centering on placement of the retarded in community nursing homes, and said much remains to be done to ensure public schooling for all persons regardless of handicaps. He added that LB403 had done much in the direction of education for the handicapped, however.

Foley said the region he will represent includes Nebraska, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Iowa.

Employes Protest Rate Hike

Thirty-three Western Electric employes in Omaha say it's unfair for Northwestern Bell to ask for a 19% hike in phone rates when its employes only get a 10½% raise.

Western Electric, which manufactures phone sets, is a subsidiary of the Bell System.

The employes' protest was contained in a letter to the Nebraska Public Service Commission. The commission is considering a $16 million rate increase for Northwestern Bell.

The phone company said the increase is needed, in part, to cover wage increases recently negotiated with the Communications Workers of America.

In the letter, the employes said, "We the undersigned feel that the proposed rate increase of the Bell System is unjustified and inflationary.

"Considering an inflation rate of 11% and wage increases in the Bell System of only 10½%, an increase of nearly 19% is very unfair and (amounts to) profiteering on the part of the Bell System."

So far, the commission has received 110 protests to the Bell application. Besides the Western Electric employes, the protesters include the city of Wisner, the Loup City Chamber of Commerce, the Omaha Legal Aid Society, the Chadron City Council, the city of Grant and the village of Lyman.

Hearings will be held on the application.

Water Release Rate Reported At Winter Level

Omaha (AP) — The release rate of water from the Missouri River's main stem dam system reached the winter level out of Gavins Point, the lowermost dam, Nov. 30, the Corps of Engineers said Wednesday.

The engineers' Missouri River Division headquarters at Omaha said system storage at the end of November was 59.9 million acre-feet, 600,000 acre-feet more than this date a year ago.

"Stored water should continue to decrease until early next spring, when the reservoir system will approach its annual base of flood control," a division official said.

Hydropower generation totaled 804 million kilowatt hours, 47% more than last November's output, the official said. Total yearly generation through November has already surpassed total generation for 1973.

The corps said the last commercial towboat left the Missouri River Nov. 29. Preliminary figures show navigation this year passed 2.5 million tons, a 35% increase over 1973.

Sheep Producers Seek More Publicity

Sheep producers have approved a new agreement between the U.S. secretary of agriculture and the American Sheep Producers Council Inc. (ASPC).

The mail referendum held Nov. 4 through 15 resulted in a vote with 85.5% favoring the public relations, advertising and sales promotion activites of the Denver-based ASPC, which will be funded by a national checkoff program on lamb and wool.

Howard Derrick of Eldorado, Tex., president of ASPC, expressed the hope that the downward trend in sheep numbers for the past 14 years would be halted by the new program.

"We will expand our public relations efforts to explain the true facts about the domestic sheep industry to the consumer," he said.

"We also plan to work with the primary producer to provide information on new technology in sheep management, nutrition and other means for inereasing the efficiency of the sheep business," he said.

The council will also maintain its activities with allied industries to improve the marketing of lamb and wool.

Baxter Declines Renomination

Grand Island (AP) — Tom Baxter of Grand Island,a director and former president of the National Livestock Feeders Association, has declined renomination to his post.

Asked Wednesday why he did so, Baxter would say only that "the people in the association are pretty well astride of why I resigned, so I think it's best to leave it that way."

He refused any further comment.

Association Executive Vice President Don Magdanz of Omaha said that Baxter declined renomination to the board at the group's convention in Norfolk last week. Baxter has been a director for three years and served as president in 1972, following his election to the presidency in December 1971.

Magdanz said Baxter's action "came as a complete surprise." He said he did not know the reason behind it.

Wayne Hendrickson of Kearney was elected to replace Baxter on the board.

Bar Holds Off On Prepaid Services

By United Press International

A spokesman said Wednesday the State Bar Association won't be in a position to do anything about legislation on prepaid legal services plans until at least February.

Burton Berger, executive director of the State Bar Association, told UPI the national bar association is scheduled to meet in February and consider issues which would clear the way for such plans.

If the national association acts, Berger said the Nebraska Bar Committee already placed in charge of the concept would swing into action. The committee, headed by Ted Kessner of Lincoln, has been working on the idea for four years.

But Berger said the committee has run into roadblock after roadblock and as a result the decision was made to hold off not only for the national organization to act but to allow time to gather more information.

Not 'Dragging Feet'

"It isn't that we're dragging our feet," he said. "But we would hate to saddle the people of Nebraska with unnecessary costs if that appears to be a problem."

Berger said among the states which have already gotten into prepaid legal services plans are California and Oregon. But he said the data from those states and others is as yet a bit too sketchy to base conclusions on.

In other words, he said, "We want to make sure the plans are really useful and not just a bright idea."

But if the plans work, then Berger said he felt the Nebraska Bar would "do anything we can to expand legal services" in terms of availability and reasonable cost.

Changes In Code

The questions before the National Bar Association include changes in the code of professional responsibility.

Berger cited as an example of the kinds of issues involved the matter of advertising on the part of attorneys. The code doesn't allow it.

However, he added, just because the National Bar decides to clear up questions doesn't necessarily mean the reaction in Nebraska would be immediate.

In the first place, he said, the rules under which Nebraska attorneys work are those established by the State Supreme Court. Generally, Berger said, those rules conform with national standards.

But no matter what, Berger said, "we're certainly going to wait until February" before acting.

Going to move? Then notify the Circulation Dept. so you won't miss your paper. Be sure to give both old and new address.

Man's Death Due To Drugs

Superior (AP) — A former Caldwell, Idaho, resident, who had been living here with two step-brothers for the past two weeks, was found dead at his residence early Wednesday afternoon.

Initial reports indicated a drug overdose caused the death of Steve Gross, 21, but an autopsy was ordered to determine the exact cause of death, according to Deputy Nuckolls County Atty. Wayne L. Garrison.

Gross was last seen alive about 1 a.m. Wednesday. A friend found the body shortly before 1 p.m. Officials said Gross had been dead for several hours before the body was discovered.

Court Will Try New Bail Method

Omaha (UPI) — A new procedure for granting bail to a person who is already free on bond was announced Wednesday by District Court Judge James Buckley and Police Chief Richard Andersen.

Under the new policy, Andersen said, an arrest of a person who is free on bond will result in an appearance in district court for reconsideration of the earlier bond.

Previously, repeat offenses were treated as first offenses because of laws which provide that second offenses cannot be charged until all appeals are exhausted on the first offense.

The old policy, Andersen said, meant that "crime pros" with second and first offenses were free to walk the streets while a first offense was on appeal.

"I am tired of listening to the bleeding hearts who say they are going to rehabilitate some of these bums we arrest who have been in the pen five times," Andersen said. "I want them off the street."

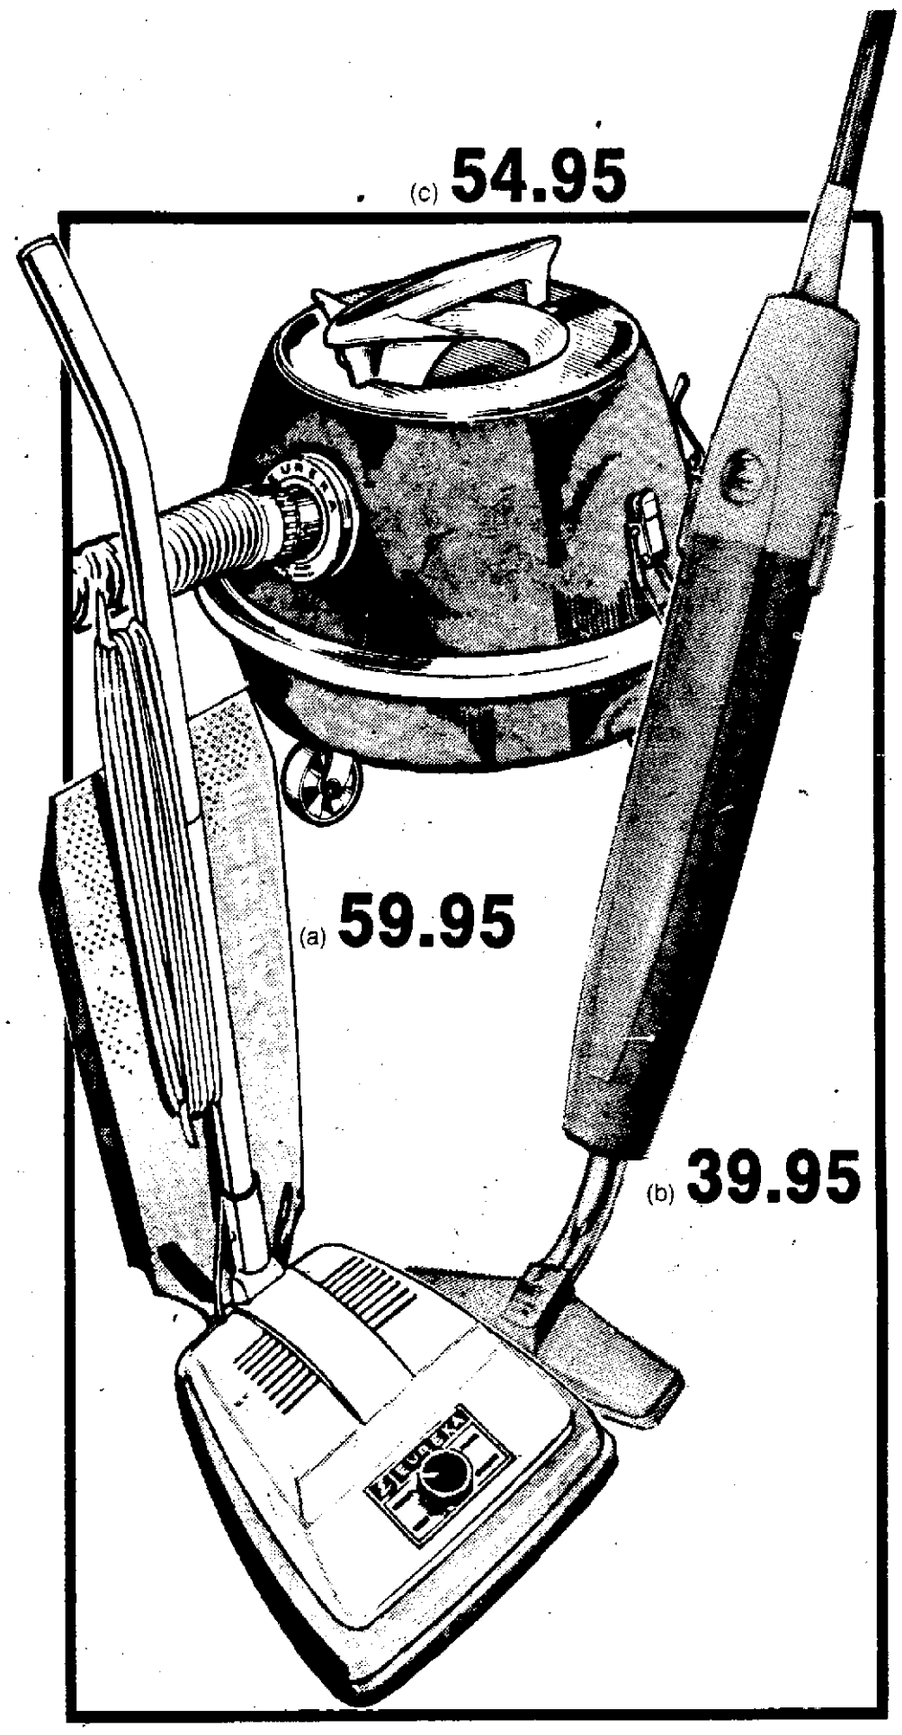

Buckley said the judiciary "is just as fed up as the citizenry with the crime rate. It is a abhorrent to us that any defendant on bail might use his freedom to commit a crime."

He said less than 10% of felony suspects freed on bond are charged with further crimes, but Andersen emphasized that the 10% is responsible for a disproportionate number of crimes.

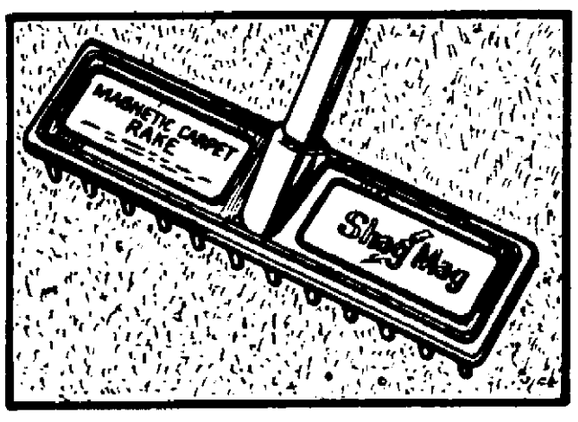

Reconsideration of the first offense could mean a higher cash bond or more strict conditions for release, Buckley said. The reconsideration will take place as soon as possible after the arrest, he said, in most cases the following afternoon.

Future Shopping Centers May Resemble Amusement Parks

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The lure of bargains at huge suburban shopping malls has faded in recent years, and last winter gasoline shortages cut their business. Michael Kolbensdhlag, chief of the McGraw-Hill World News Bureau in Chicago, reports on a new trend in shopping centers.)

By MICHAEL KOLBENSCHLAG

Chicago -- The shopping center you visit in the near future may look more like an amusement park than a shopping center because that's what it will be — an amusement park.

Hoping to capitalize on American interest in theme-type amusement parks like Disneyland, and trying to find profitable alternatives to mass-merchandising department stores and discount houses that no longer offer discounts, shopping center developers have hit upon the idea of drawing people out to shopping centers with fun rather than bargains.

The developers call it recreational retailing and centers now up or on the drawing boards feature giant enclosed malls with thousands of feet of space for corkscrew roller coasters and giant ferris wheels. What's more, large department stores are banned from the malls in favor of small, privately-owned shops.

According to Robert Brindle, president of Recreational Retail Builders, the California development firm that spawned the idea, conventional shopping centers built around large department stores have served only to make it harder for shoppers to find small privately owned shops that specialize. "The small businessman can't compete with the department store," said Brindle. "Even the shops in centers that appear to be intimate, and privately owned are in reality owned, backed, and supplied by major chains."

At the same time, Brindle says discount houses that 15 years ago did attract people with bonafide discounts on name brand items have proliferated to the point where they can no longer offer name brands at anything but embarrassingly high prices.

"We knew there had to be a way to build a shopping center that would attract both the people and the small businessman," said Brindle, "but what way, was the problem."

"First we noticed that theme-type amusement parks are doing better than ever," said Brindle, "and while Disneyland started out as an amusement park with restaurants and almost no retail, for the last two years retail sales of products at the famous park have surpassed food sales. Even Knott's Berry Farm, the old ghost town in California that provided the inspiration for Disneyland and other theme parks, has found that retail and rides go well together."

According to the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions (IAAPA) in Oak Park, Ill., more and more Americans are, in fact, switching off their TV sets and heading for an afternoon or evening at the nearest theme park. The IAAPA says that some 470 million Americans visit amusement parks each year producing an annual gross profit for the 900 parks in the U.S. of some $530 million and millions more for retailers located in the parks.

"We saw that we had stumbled upon something," said Brindle. "The rides would attract people so that we wouldn't need the large department stores, and without the large department store the small business man would have a chance to survive."

Brindle's first effort at recreational retailing is nearing completion in Chicago. Called "Old Chicago," the $40-million enclosed mall features a turn-of-the-century theme complete with cobblestone streets and double-globe light poles purchased from the city of Chicago's stores of obsolete items. The center portion of the dome-topped shopping mall will contain 31 major rides in a space that measures 545,000 sq. ft. or the size of six football fields.

Construction on an even bigger mall, Village '76, is scheduled to begin next spring in Mansfield Square, N.J. A $100-million mall will couple 210 retail stores with 291,600 sq. ft. of fairground — all enclosed under a mammoth peaked cable-suspension roof.

"We'll be building more of these centers, and we know other developers will too," said Brindle, "tomorrow's shopping centers are going to be fun places."

Survey: High Prices Are Biggest Worry

By LOUIS HARRIS

Louis Harris

The American people consider high prices their biggest worry these days. Eighty-two per cent of the public, up 25 percentage points in the last year, place economic troubles at the top of the list of "problems the government should do something about."

The next most pressing problem, according to the people, is honesty in government. A substantial 22% still believe restoring integrity to government should be first on the Ford administration's agenda, although this latest result is down from the 43% who thought so last year when Richard Nixon was still president and the Watergate investigations were still going on.

Recently the Harris Survey asked a cross section of 1,525 adults:

"What do you feel are two or three of the biggest problems the government should do something about? Any others?"

Integrity Is No. 2

ISSUES OF CONCERN

	1974 %	1973 %	1972 %
Economy (High cost of living —	82	72	57
(Recession, unemployment	44)
(Federal spending	20)

Alienation	3	7	10
Health care	2	8	1
Racial discrimination	2	3	5
		7	21

Note: Percentages add to more than 100% because some people cited more than one problem

— People are more worried about the chgh cost of living than recession or unemployment, which registered third in public concern. They are also becoming increasingly bothered about federal spending Yet only 9% see the need for tax reform, which 40% considered an important issue in 1972.

— Several issues that previously ranked high in public concern have dropped off sharply. Only 4% consider drug use a major problem, compared to 19% who thought so in 1972. Only 2% see racial discrimination as a pressing issue, down from 21% who believed it was in 1972. Welfare reform seems less urgent to most people than aid to the elderly.

— Public concern about the energy shortage is rising sharply. The Harris Survey registered no mention of it in 1972, 10% last year and 16% in 1974.

Since the end of direct U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war, Americans feel that international matters must wait until something is done about the economic troubles at home.

Retail Sales Volume Dips

Washington (AP) — The government reported Tuesday that retail sales dropped last month by 1%, despite the approach of the busy holiday shopping season.

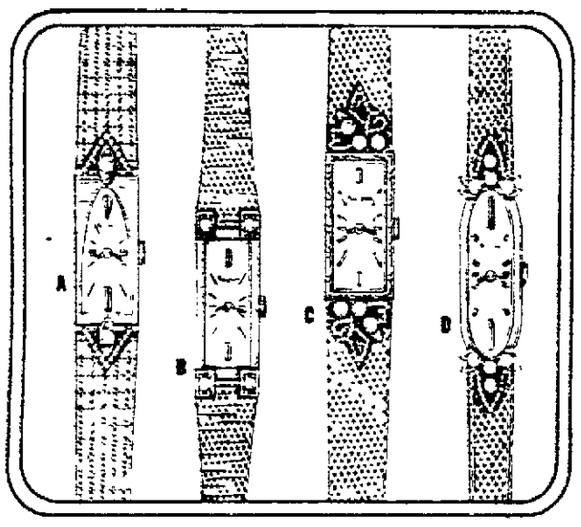

The Commerce Department computed total retail sales for November at an annual rate of $47.1 billion after adjustment for seasonal variation.

The biggest drop came in the durable goods category, which includes automobiles and home appliances. Durable goods sales totaled $13.3 billion, a 3% reduction from October and a 6% drop from November a year ago.

Total retail sales were up by 5% from a year ago. Since the increase was well below the 12% jump in consumer prices during that period, the indication was that actual volume of retail sales has actually declined.

Future Shopping Centers May Resemble Amusement Parks

By MICHAEL KOLBENSCHLAG

Chicago — The shopping center you visit in the near future may look more like an amusement park than a shopping center because that's what it will be — an amusement park.

Hoping to capitalize on American interest in theme-type amusement parks like Disneyland, and trying to find profitable alternatives to mass-merchandising department stores and discount houses that no longer offer discounts, shopping center developers have hit upon the idea of drawing people out to shopping centers with fun rather than bargains.

The developers call it recreational retailing and centers now up or on the drawing boards feature giant enclosed malls with thousands of feet of space for corkscrew roller coasters and giant ferris wheels. What's more, large department stores are banned from the malls in favor of small, privately-owned shops.

According to Robert Brindle, president of Recreational Retail Builders, the California development firm that spawned the idea, conventional shopping centers built around large department stores have served only to make it harder for shoppers to find small privately owned shops that specialize. "The small businessman can't compete with the department store," said Brindle. "Even the shops in centers that appear to be intimate, and privately owned are in reality owned, backed, and supplied by major chains."

At the same time, Brindle says discount houses that 15 years ago did attract people with bonafide discounts on name brand items have proliferated to the point where they can no longer offer name brands at anything but embarrassingly high prices.

"We knew there had to be a way to build a shopping center that would attract both the people and the small businessman," said Brindle, "but what way, was the problem."

"First we noticed that theme-type amusement parks are doing better than ever," said Brindle, "and while Disneyland started out as an amusement park with restaurants and almost no retail, for the last two years retail sales of products at the famous park have surpassed food sales. Even Knott's Berry Farm, the old ghost town in California that provided the inspiration for Disneyland and other theme parks, has found that retail and rides go well together."

According to the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions (IAAPA) in Oak Park, Ill., more and more Americans are, in fact, switching off their TV sets and heading for an afternoon or evening at the nearest theme park. The IAAPA says that some 470 million Americans visit amusement parks each year producing an annual gross profit for the 900 parks in the U.S. of some $530 million and millions more for retailers located in the parks.

"We saw that we had stumbled upon something," said Brindle. "The rides would attract people so that we wouldn't need the large department stores, and without the large department store the small business man would have a chance to survive."

Brindle's first effort at recreational retailing is nearing completion in Chicago. Called "Old Chicago," the $40-million enclosed mall features a turn-of-the-century theme complete with cobblestone streets and double-globe light poles purchased from the city of Chicago's stores of obsolete items. The center portion of the dome-topped shopping mall will contain 31 major rides in a space that measures 545,000 sq. ft. or the size of six football fields.

Construction on an even bigger mall, Village '76, is scheduled to begin next spring in Mansfield Square, N.J. A $100-million mall will couple 210 retail stores with 291,600 sq. ft. of fairground — all enclosed under a mammoth peaked cable-suspension roof.

"We'll be building more of these centers, and we know other developers will too," said Brindle, "tomorrow's shopping centers are going to be fun places."

Survey: High Prices Are Biggest Worry

By LOUIS HARRIS

Louis Harris

Integrity Is No. 2

The American people consider high prices their biggest worry these days. Eighty-two per cent of the public, up 25 percentage points in the last year, place economic troubles at the top of the list of "problems the government should do something about."

The next most pressing problem, according to the people, is honesty in government. A substantial 22% still believe restoring integrity to government should be first on the Ford administration's agenda, although this latest result is down from the 43% who thought so last year when Richard Nixon was still president and the Watergate investigations were still going on.

Recently the Harris Survey asked a cross section of 1,525 adults:

"What do you feel are two or three of the biggest problems the government should do something about? Any others?"

ISSUES OF CONCERN

	1974 %	1973 %	1972 %
Economy	82	72	57
(High cost of living)	44
(Recession, unemployment)	20
(Federal spending)	18
Integrity in government	22	43	5
Energy shortage	16	10
Crime	15	17	16
Pollution, ecology	9	11	13
Taxes	9	11	40
Welfare reform	8	13	15
Foreign policy	5	4	29
Housing	5	2	3
Drugs	4	14	19
Education	4	9	7
Older people	4	7	10
Alienation	3	8	1
Health care	2	3	5
Racial discrimination	2	7	21

Note: Percentages add to more than 100% because some people cited more than one problem.

— People are more worried about the chigh cost of living than recession or unemployment, which registered third in public concern. They are also becoming increasingly bothered about federal spending. Yet only 9% see the need for tax reform, which 40% considered an important issue in 1972.

— Several issues that previously ranked high in public concern have dropped off sharply. Only 4% consider drug use a major problem, compared to 19% who thought so in 1972. Only 2% see racial discrimination as a pressing issue, down from 21% who believed it was in 1972. Welfare reform seems less urgent to most people than aid to the elderly.

— Public concern about the energy shortage is rising sharply. The Harris Survey registered no mention of it in 1972, 10% last year and 16% in 1974.

Since the end of direct U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war, Americans feel that international matters must wait until something is done about the economic troubles at home.

Retail Sales Volume Dips

Washington (AP) — The government reported Tuesday that retail sales dropped last month by 1%, despite the approach of the busy holiday shopping season.

The biggest drop came in the durable goods category, which includes automobiles and home appliances. Durable goods sales totaled $13.3 billion, a 3% reduction from October and a 6% drop from November a year ago.

Butz Gives In, To Meet Beef Price Protesters

Washington (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz has agreed to meet with representatives of a cross-country "beef caravan" after they arrive outside his office with 43 head of cattle, a spokesman said Wednesday. Earlier, Butz refused to meet the protesters.

The caravan, which left South Dakota last week, was to arrive in Washington Thursday and conduct its protest on the mall outside the Agriculture Department.

Butz has scheduled a meeting in his office with the cattlemen's representative and consumer activists for 8:30 a.m., CST after he addresses the annual National Agricultural Outlook Conference across the street.

The caravan, with 10 cattle slated to be given to Butz, is designed to protest the price spread between what ranchers receive for live cattle and what shoppers pay for retail cuts of beef its organizers say.

A spokesman for Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., say a rally is planned on the mall.

The cattle will be slaughtered by members of the Amalgamated Meatcutters union and 5,000 pounds of beef - in 10-pound packages - will be donated to poor families in Washington for Christmas, he said.

A department spokesman said it has not been decided whether Butz will accept the cattle destined for him.

Life After 40:

High Cost Of Medical Care Eyed

By ROBERT PETERSON

It becomes more and more difficult for most of us to make ends meet. I'd like to make some constructive suggestions, but every now and then I read something that gets me so angry I want to lash out at someone. This time it's a doctor. He wrote in a recent column that his reader's ailment had been correctly diagnosed as catalepsy, but, he went on, since the symptoms are not lessening (as, apparently, they often do) the patient's wife, who had written in, should take the patient back to the doctor so he could prescribe some medication. What about the cost? Couldn't the doctor have told the patient and his wife, "If you don't get better in X number of days, call me and I'll give you a prescription that should help." Instead, he just sent them home saying everything would be all right, which, incidentally, it will in time. Now, however, the patient must return to the doctor, receive a prescription, and pay for a second office call, no small amount in today's inflated market for everything.

I'm not trying to "knock" doctors, for I am among their staunch admirers, but I do think, and from what I am reading lately, lots of them agree with me, it is time to think about what various items and services cost. Don't cut corners and give patients second-rate treatment, but, in a case like this, why not anticipate, and give the patient the prescription on the first visit, with the caution, "Don't get this filled unless you find after five or six days that you're not any better."

It's been quite a joke between my kids and me that my eye doctor does just that with me. I have excellent vision, but somehow the print in books and newspapers keeps getting smaller. Every year I check in with my ophthalmologist and so far so good. But two different times when I have been in he has said to me as he handed me a prescription, "Put this away until your arms get too short, again, then have these made." My optometrist laughs every now and then when he sees that the prescription was dated some months before I use it, but, so far all of us are content, and I have saved the cost to me of two visits and the time of the doctor.

We're all getting so conscious of costs for everything, and I believe it is a good thing on the whole. Why shouldn't the housewife learn to read the labels and see which package or brand gives her the lowest per unit cost?

But there's a big battle brewing about prescription drugs concerning generic vs. brand names, and I would like to hear from my readers about this one. I know that it does not really matter which brand of aspirin you buy, as long as it's the grain strength you are looking for.

I haven't found anyone arguing with me about buying the least expensive brand of vitamin C in the strength I use. But I have heard comments pro and con about some of the specialized drugs. Some act faster than others, some have longer lasting effects, some have more or less side effects than others.

My suggestion, in the interest of getting the most for your money is this: Ask the doctor about any prescription. Is it by generic or brand name, and if it is a brand-name item, can the generic-name pill do the same thing for you at less cost? You don't want your doctor to think you're trying to practice medicine, but it is not too soon to make him aware of the fact that you want the best care for the least money. And, sad to say, sometimes he has not had time to compare various brands of the same medicine, so you get the brand of the last salesman he talked to. Another way your doctor may help you save a little is for him to give you a few samples of the drug he is prescribing, enough to carry you over for a day or two, so you can see if that brand has any side effects on you. Most doctors will offer you a sample or two of the medicine they are prescribing for that very purpose, so don't be afraid to ask

Life After 40:

High Cost Of Medical Care Eyed

By ROBERT PETERSON

It becomes more and more difficult for most of us to make ends meet. I'd like to make some constructive suggestions, but every now and then I read something that gets me so angry I want to lash out at someone. This time it's a doctor. He wrote in a recent column that his reader's ailment had been correctly diagnosed as catalepsy, but, he went on, since the symptoms are not lessening (as, apparently, they often do) the patient's wife, who had written in, should take the patient back to the doctor so he could prescribe some medication. What about the cost? Couldn't the doctor have told the patient and his wife, "If you don't get better in X number of days, call me and I'll give you a prescription that should help." Instead, he just sent them home saying everything would be all right, which, incidentally, it will in time. Now, however, the patient must return to the doctor, receive a prescription, and pay for a second office call, no small amount in today's inflated market for everything.

I'm not trying to "knock" doctors, for I am among their staunch admirers, but I do think, and from what I am reading lately, lots of them agree with me, it is time to think about what various items and services cost. Don't cut corners and give patients second-rate treatment, but, in a case like this, why not anticipate, and give the patient the prescription on the first visit, with the caution, "Don't get this filled unless you find after five or six days that you're not any better."

It's been quite a joke between my kids and me that my eye doctor does just that with me. I have excellent vision, but somehow the print in books and newspapers keeps getting smaller. Every year I check in with my ophthalmologist and so far so good. But two different times when I have been in he has said to me as he handed me a prescription, "Put this away until your arms get too short, again, then have these made." My optometrist laughs every now and then when he sees that the prescription was dated some months before I use it, but, so far all of us are content, and I have saved the cost to me of two visits and the time of the doctor.

We're all getting so conscious of costs for everything, and I believe it is a good thing on the whole. Why shouldn't the housewife learn to read the labels and see which package or brand gives her the lowest per unit cost?

But there's a big battle brewing about prescription drugs concerning generic vs. brand names, and I would like to hear from my readers about this one. I know that it does not really matter which brand of aspirin you buy, as long as it's the grain strength you are looking for.

I haven't found anyone arguing with me about buying the least expensive brand of vitamin C in the strength I use. But I have heard comments pro and con about some of the specialized drugs. Some act faster than others, some have longer lasting effects, some have more or less side effects than others.

My suggestion, in the interest of getting the most for your money is this: Ask the doctor about any prescription. Is it by generic or brand name, and if it is a brand-name item, can the generic-name pill do the same thing for you at less cost? You don't want your doctor to think you're trying to practice medicine, but it is not too soon to make him aware of the fact that you want the best care for the least money. And, sad to say, sometimes he has not had time to compare various brands of the same medicine, so you get the brand of the last salesman he talked to. Another way your doctor may help you save a little is for him to give you a few samples of the drug he is prescribing, enough to carry you over for a day or two, so you can see if that brand has any side effects on you. Most doctors will offer you a sample or two of the medicine they are prescribing for that very purpose, so don't be afraid to ask.

NU's 5-Year Plan Called Incomplete As Proposed

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The University of Nebraska five-year plan "Toward Excellence," Prof. Richard E. Gilbert testified Wednesday, "cannot really be a planning document unless something is said about priorities and budgets."

Gilbert, president of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate, was one of 22 UNL faculty members who addressed the proposed revision of the plan. It was adopted orighally by the NU Board of Regents in January 1973.

The Faculty Senate in April approved procedures for its participation in detailed evaluation of selected UNL programs, consistent with the campus "Essential Functions" document.

Gilbert, chemical engineering, said the recommendations in the proposed revision appear to have come from a source other than the Faculty Senate academic planning committee. That body, he said, should have a significant part in ranking, evaluating and attaching priorities to UNL programs.

Not By Saturday

Gilbert acknowledged his recommendations will not be incorporated into the five-year plan revision "between now and Saturday," when the regents will act on it. They then will submit it to the Legislature and governor, as required by a law tying the plan revision to the NU budget.

"We don't know exactly what the purpose of this document is," Gilbert said, recommending that it should be "budget-specific." He added that "priorities are going to change," underscoring the need for Faculty Senate participation in an ongoing revision process.

The senate resolved that the proposed revision is "unsatisfactory," and went on record showing non-concurrence with it. In a second resolution, the senate said the five-year plan "should be recast," standardizing the format for all three NU campuses and their attendance figures, describing clearly NU's mission, and assigning priorities to proposals.

Teachers College Dean Robert L. Egbert said it "would be counterproductive" to exclude the academic planning committee in long-range strategies to develop NU.

Educational psychology department chairman Kenneth D. Orton and philosophy department chairman Robert Audi also supported Gilbert's statements.

'Less Objectionalbe'

Prof. Audi said if the UNL plan were "consistent with the 'Essential Functions' document," then it would be "less objectionable to the faculty."

He said the regents must insure that "the kind of emphasis referred to" in the proposed update "will not be at the expense of sound existing programs, and will not be budgeted" from funds designated for quality programs.

Audi and about half those testifying supported statements by Arts and Sciences College interim dean Max D. Larsen that conditions for designating further "Areas of Excellence" are deleted from the revised plan, and should be inserted. He said the academic planning committee's participation should be inserted.

Music Prof. Larry H. Lusk said because of the plan's "overemphasis on regional needs" to be served by NU, "the Legislature could use that document against us." He said the five-year plan should "state more strongly" NU's commitment to "shore up" UNL programs, "which we have cut drastically," and to "support the fine programs already in existence."

Lusk objected to proposals in the revised plan for expensive graduate programs, such as art history, computers,, and chemistry, at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Business Administration College Dean Ronald L. Smith said he supports, but with more consideration, selected programs for inter-campus cooperation. An administrative sciences doctorate program has been proposed for UNO, to serve Offutt Air Force Base.

'Dilution' Feared

Management Prof. William D. Torrence objected to that proposal for UNO, saying the idea of duplicating graduate programs "has never been adequately discussed." He expressed fears that they will result in "dilution" of already limited funds. Prof. Orton said the five-year plan should set up methods for faculty and administration cooperation among the "three competing" campuses, for program reviews and priority-setting.

Architecture College Dean W. Cecil Steward appealed for the "planning process to use (and encourage) more effective interdisciplinary instructional means."

English Prof. Paul A. Olson said the five-year plan should include a section on evaluation of administrators, with faculty and student participation.

Olson also said the plan should acknowledge a need to increase the "number of minority people in professional schools on UNL," in which enrollment is "99.6% white."

Steven B. Sample, NU executive vice president for academic affairs, conducted the hearing. He said afterward there are "points of honest disagreement" about proposed revisions.

Sample said he and Hans Brisch, academic affairs assistant vice president; Adam Breckenridge, acting UNL vice chancellor for academic affairs, and Herbert Garfinkel, Breckenridge's UNO counterpart, will discuss editorial changes and additions to the document Thursday, subject to approval from the three campus chancellors.

The regents, Sample said, may accept the revision verbatim, or accept it in "substance and principle," allowing administrators to make final changes.

Recorder Yanked By Buffalo County

Kearney (AP) — The Buffalo County Board of Supervisor has ordered that a recording system installed on the county switchboard by Sheriff Vern Newbold be removed.

In a meeting Wednesday afternoon, the board discussed the situation with representatives of General Telephone Co., county judges, the clerk of the district court and the sheriff.

Sheriff Newbold told the board he ordered the recording system installed only for demonstration purposes and the system had not been purchased.

Newbold said the purpose of the system was not to monitor any conversations, but for protection for his office on emergency calls. Newbold said a dispatcher could log any time for receipt of a call, but a recording system would ensure an accurate record of the time any particular call was received.

The specific need for the system, Newbold said, was to protect his office against charges that it did not respond immediately to emergency situations.

Presiding County Judge J. Carr Taylor said when he learned of the system, he contacted the U. S. District Attorney's office because, "the recorder could be used without warning." Taylor also contacted General Telephone Co.

Taylor added that he was not charging the system had been used, but even the possibility of recording calls to or from his office was "illegal, unexcusable and unjustifiable."

As a result of the contact with the U. S. Attorney's office, an FBI investigation was initiated.

An angry Newbold told the board Wednesday he was quite upset since this is the third time he has been investigated since being in office, twice by the FBI and once by the State Patrol.

Newbold said the system could not be used to record conversations within the county complex, but could only record from the switchboard operation.

K. N. Bauman, district manager of General Telephone Co., said when he was informed of the system by Judge Taylor, he ordered an investigation. He said upon location of the device, he reported back to County officials.

District Court Clerk Verne Freeman said District Court Judge S. S. Sidner had objected to the switchboard system itself for some time and had a private line installed when the switchboard went into operation some two years ago.

"When the judge found out about the recording system," said Freeman, "he hit the ceiling and said to get off the system immediately."

Bauman said similar switchboards are operational in a number of governmental and other offices throughout General's system, and "to my knowledge we have not before had the problem of worry over possible monitoring of calls."

Newbold said the system had been disconnected before the Wednesday afternoon meeting and reiterated that the only time it was used had been for demonstration purposes.

County Atty.-elect Gary Hogg said he was unaware of any violation of federal statutes and added that for any state action, recordings would have to be produced.

Hogg said there would not be county liability for the action because Newbold "was not acting within the realm of his authority as a county official.

Lincoln School Kids Urged To Harness Solar Energy

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln school kids are being urged to join students across the nation in proving that solar energy can be used to heat homes, cook dinner and boil water.

And not in 1990, but in 1975.

So asserts educator Rosalyn Switzen, who stopped in Lincoln Wednesday on her nationwide tour promoting Solar Energy Year 1975.

'Nobody Dreams'

"Nobody dreams that a 100 million school youngsters can help solve the energy crunch," said Switzen, a chemistry teacher for 30 years in New York and California.

Switzen is the head of a nonprofit organization called Mass Educational Resources Institute of Technics, Inc.

Pollution free energy from the sun can be harnessed now, she argued, "not in 50 years from now."

Recycled materials, such as a modular device welded together out of black panel ends from photo-copying rolls, can be converted into a solar "oven."

By covering the metal trays with a clear plastic bag, students can warm soup, heat rolls and learn how the sun can be turned into heat.

Teach Youngsters

Switzen hopes Lincolnites will be interested in urging the school system to teach students, from kindergarten on up, how to use solar energy.

One of the teacher's pet projects is a one-day "teach-in" next fall in which students in every school in the country will hook into a nationally televised program on solar energy.

Students also can heat classrooms by installing heat-absorbing panels along the walls, she said.

Although some sun-powered homes have been built, most are experimental. The initial cost of construction is high and some say the public has not been interested in pushing for investment in solar energy programs.

"Nobody was really interested in it until the gasoline crunch last year," she said.

Federal Aid Urged

Switzen, who first proposed the nation's Head Start programs in the 1960's, said her organization is urging school systems to seek federal dollars for solar energy research and teaching.

"We're trying to cut through the red tape," she said, so that energy from the sun can be harnessed before 1990

Although Switzen did not talk to Lincoln Public Schools officials about the project, she urged interested teachers, administrator and students to make Lincoln one of the leaders in solar energy use.

For more information, people should mail a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Rosalyn Switzen, 8705 Highgate Rd., Alexandria, Va.

Forecast For Thursday

"Astrology is one of the most important fields for scientific research today." — John J. O'Neill (Pulitzer Prize-winning science editor.)

AIRES (March 21-April 19): Accent in on how you view your own potential. Key is to be confident, independent, innovative. Means heed your own counsel — dance to your own tune. Leo, Aquarius individuals could be in picture. Your philosophical concepts may undergo radical change. Don't fight it!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The mysterious, the occult, the inexplicable — all come together. You don't have all the answers — but, most important, you realize it. What you need will come together. Aquarius, Leo figure prominently. You're on the way!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may find that what starts as a "friendly discussion" climaxes in serious disagreement. Highlight versatility. Be willing to laugh at your own foibles. You are in process of expanding personal horizons. Mate, partner is not feeling up to par.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight frankness. If you tell the truth — under fire — you emerge victorious. Know it and respond accordingly. Some pressure is to be expected. But in long run this can work in your favor. Scorpio person figures in unique manner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some of your desires are subject to revision. Changes occur, largely due to emotional reactions of others. One whom you are attracted to returns the favor — but suffers feelings of doubt. Take it in stride. Don't be drawn into foolish dispute.

VIRGO Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Concern with family affairs could dominate. Some conflict is indicated. If you are diplomatic, the "storm" blows over. Keep track of budget; take inventory. Basic conclusions are reached but may not be what they appear.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Trying to bring chaos out of confusion could prove a fruitless task. Key is to wait, to defer direct action. Neighbors, relatives deliver conflicting messages, instructions. Persons who issue threats do so now out of fear. Know it and maintain balance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Protect valuables. Conserve assets. Some persons would like to be careless — at your expense. Be aware of it and keep guard in place. Accent is on collections, payments and recovery of losses. One in authority will lend support.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be drawn in two directions. Key is to choose path which permits greatest degree of personal freedom. Refuse to carry burden not rightly your own. Aries, Libra could be involved. Remember that you have life of your own to live. Live it!

CAPRICORN (DEc. 22-Ja. 19): Some may be scheming — behind your back. Key is to assert yourself, to show you are not without allies. Make clear that you have strength and will not take the count without doing battle. This could cause some to change their plans — in your favor. Do it!

AQUARIUS (Jan.20-Feb. 18): Two friends, one introspective and the other aggressive, may make separate requests. Refuse to be caught in middle — accent your own self-esteem. The one who really cares will understand. Don't be concerned about the other!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Policies are subject to change. Don't feel you are painted into corner. Break loose. One in authority will understand and actually be grateful. This is period of transition. Know it and act accordingly.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have sense of humor, more so than most persons. You are completing a cycle — next year you will begin project and be more independent. July will be your most significant month. You are fond of travel, have wit and are capable of communicating through advertising, publishing. Gemini persons play important roles in your life.

Medicare Officials Say Check Your Bill

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

If you or a family member is on Medicare, you may be paying more than required by law as your portion of payment on the total claim.

This is the belief of several Medicare officials, including Frank Kram of the Federal Bureau of Health Insurance regional office in Kansas City.

Kram said there is still a considerable amount of abuse involved with Medicare payments but that the abuse is on the decline, partly because fewer doctors are now accepting direct payment from Medicare.

Medicare, a health insurance program for persons 65 or older, pays the major portion of doctors' bills whether treatment is in a hospital, clinic, doctor's office, home or elsewhere.

Medicare Pays 80%

Under provisions of the health insurance, Medicare pays 80% of the allowable amount of the bill, with the patient required to pay the remaining amount of the total bill unless the physician has accepted assignment

If a doctor accepts assignment, the patient is required to pay only the remaining 20% of the amount which was allowable by Medicare. That amount may not be the total bill.

For example, under direct payment, if the bill is $100 and the allowable amount by Medicare is $80, then Medicare pays 80% of the $80 ($64) and the patient need pay only the difference between $64 and $80, or $16.

If the doctor does not accept assignment and Medicare payments are made directly to the patient, the patient must pay the full amount of the bill not paid by Medicare

Thus means the patient would be required to pay the full $36 difference between the $64 paid by Medicare and the initial bill of $100.

Richard Bath of Mutural of Omaha, which handles Nebraska Medicare, said that about 40% of the claims filed are those for which physicians have accepted assignment.

Regional Figure Down

Kram said that the rate of claims for which assignment was accepted by doctors had run as high as 70% to 80% but the regional figure is now about 40%.

Both Bath and Kram expressed concern that individuals may be paying more than necessary in cases for which the doctors have accepted assignment.

Most of these errors where the patient is billed for the full remaining amount after Medicare payment is made to the doctor are "oversights," Bath said.

He noted that frequently the billing clerk in a physician's office neglects to note that the bill is a Medicare claim and that the patient need pay only 20% of the allowable amount.

He said that whenever the Medicare office finds a case where the patient has paid the entire amount when the doctor accepted assignment, "we contact the physician."

"There have been a few instances where it hasn't been a strict office oversight," he said, noting that he could remember only two instances where the physician refused to cooperate once a contact was made regarding an overcharge.

Kram also said "the physicians have trouble with their own people in bookkeeping" in connection with Medicare.

People Must Check

However, he emphasized the need for people to check their billings with the information sent by Medicare on the amounts allowed by Medicare and the amounts paid to the doctor in cases where assignment was accepted.

Unless the patient or a family member finds an error, it could go unnoticed that the patient paid more than necessary by law.

According to Don Hogg, chief of the division of medical services of the State Welfare Department, physicians are required to accept assignment in welfare cases. Doctors sign statements that they will not claim additional fees above the allowable amount by Medicare.

He said there have been a few occasions when physicians had not read the statement and additional billings were made

'Shakti': Seeking The Inexplicable

"Shakti is the mystery of mysteries . . . It is the unique center, the void of all religions All the incarnations, prophets, initiates, and enlightened ones have drunk from this source and drink there constantly They have known or they know oneness, and they share with us what they are able to express of their bliss Their accounts and their teachings are almost identical even though their disciples, after having analyzed the sensations resulting from their own experience, give mental explanations that become dogmas"

And dogmas, at least for the Western/Christian mind, are easy to grasp. We like to have things neat, tidy, defined.

So God is anthropomorphized, creeds are written and recited, and we all get together on Sunday mornings and enjoy the comfort of certainty.

How unlike the seekers described in Luzelle Reymond's "Shakti A Spiritual Experience" (Knopf) we are, in our hour-a-week Sunday-morning regularity.

But, how like them we are, as well.

We are all searching after essentially the same thing. We, who take our cues from the Judeo-Christian heritage: and they, the Hindu teachers and disciples who mediate in the silence of the lofty Himalayas.

We are searching for Shakti, a concept which lies at the heart of the Hindu experience.

Shakti cannot be adequately captured on the printed page. Ms. Reymond — who has studied extensively in India — admits that time and again.

No theories have been set forth, no dogma dealing with either the practice or concept of Shakti. It must be experienced, first-hand, by each seeker who may, for a time, seek the guidance of a teacher; but who must ultimately understand that "To meditate in Shakti is to abandon all forms, all dogmas, and all gurus."

Ms. Reymond has attempted in "Shakti A Spiritual Experience" to do what all human beings seem to have a compulsion to do: To describe, define, to share their spiritual perceptions with other human beings.

And, to a great extent, she succeeds — not in packaging a concept (though some will undoubtedly wish that she had), but in interpreting a universal impulse.

Shakti is described by Ms. Reymond as something that cannot be explained by logic or reason. It is "life itself," a means and an end, a spiritual vibration transmitted through the silence of meditation. It is the unification of spirit and matter

"Shakti is . . . that which links the dancer to the music. It is that which establishes a link between all things . . . It is the Presence, invisible and constant, which sustains the world, linking form and name. Life is born in its vibration. God creates ceaselessly, delighting in His creation, in harmony known to Him alone. Shakti is His power and His essence."

In her brief and artistically rendered book, Ms. Reymond is much like a musician attempting to describe to us a symphony. The tonal gradations, the harmonies, the tempo can be analyzed and, more or less, explained.

But only those who have heard, who have been transported out of themselves by experiencing the symphony in its immediate totality, will understand.

However, he emphasized the need for people to check their billings with the information sent by Medicare on the amounts allowed by Medicare and the amounts paid to the doctor in cases where assignment was accepted.

Unless the patient or a family member finds an error, it could go unnoticed that the patient paid more than necessary by law.

According to Don Hogg, chief of the division of medical services of the State Welfare Department, physicians are required to accept assignment in welfare cases. Doctors sign statements that they will not claim additional fees above the allowable amount by Medicare.

He said there have been a few occasions when physicians had not read the statement and additional billings were made.

'Shakti': Seeking The Inexplicable

"Shakti is the mystery of mysteries . . . It is the unique center, the void of all religions. All the incarnations, prophets, initiates, and enlightened ones have drunk from this source and drink there constantly. They have known or they know oneness, and they share with us what they are able to express of their bliss. Their accounts and their teachings are almost identical even though their disciples, after having analyzed the sensations resulting from their own experience, give mental explanations that become dogmas."

And dogmas, at least for the Western/Christian mind, are easy to grasp. We like to have things neat, tidy, defined.

So God is anthropomorphized, creeds are written and recited; and we all get together on Sunday mornings and enjoy the comfort of certainty.

How unlike the seekers described in Lizelle Reymond's "Shakti: A Spiritual Experience" (Knopf) we are, in our hour-a-week Sunday-morning regularity.

But, how like them we are, as well.

We are all searching after essentially the same thing. We, who take our cues from the Judeo-Christian heritage: and they, the Hindu teachers and disciples who mediate in the silence of the lofty Himalayas.

We are searching for Shakti, a concept which lies at the heart of the Hindu experience.

Shakti cannot be adequately captured on the printed page. Ms. Reymond — who has studied extensively in India — admits that time and again.

No theories have been set forth, no dogma dealing with either the practice or concept of Shakti. It must be experienced, first-hand, by each seeker who may, for a time, seek the guidance of a teacher; but who must ultimately understand that "To meditate in Shakti is to abandon all forms, all dogmas, and all gurus."

Ms. Reymond has attempted in "Shakti: A Spiritual Experience" to do what all human beings seem to have a compulsion to do: To describe, define, to share their spiritual perceptions with other human beings.

And, to a great extent, she succeeds — not in packaging a concept (though some will undoubtedly wish that she had), but in interpreting a universal impulse.

Shakti is described by Ms. Reymond as something that cannot be explained by logic or reason. It is "life itself," a means and an end, a spirtiaul vibration transmitted through the silence of meditation. It is the unification of spirit and matter.

"Shakti is . . . that which links the dancer to the music. It is that which establishes a link between all things . . . It is the Presence, invisible and constant, which sustains the world, linking form and name. Life is born in its vibration. God creates ceaselessly, delighting in His creation, in harmony known to Him alone. Shakti is His power and His essence."

In her brief and artistically rendered book, Ms. Reymond is much like a musician attempting to describe to us a symphony. The tonal gradations, the harmonies, the tempo can be analyzed and, more or less, explained.

But only those who have heard, who have been transported out of themselves by experiencing the symphony in its immediate totality, will understand.

O Christmas Tree . . .
Still As Popular As Ever

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

One thing Lincolnites aren't giving up this Christmas is the traditional tree, if local tree sales are true indicators.

While some folks might keep an artificial fir or pine hibernating 11 months of the year in an attic corner in anticipation of its annual airing, most spend a seasonal sum on the real thing.

Whether shoppers prefer to cut their own from several local tree farms, or pick the cream of the crop from nursery stock or supermarket parking lot selections, they'll find the price they'll pay is pretty close to what it was last year. Or perhaps a shade higher.

Tiny Trees Available

For those who are counting pennies, there are small trees to be found for as low as $1.98. At the other end of the spectrum big spenders (mostly businesses) have paid close to $300 for that giant Christmas greenery.

Some prefer the flocked look, and the snowy spraying in white, pale pink or blue will at least double the cost.

"People are always looking for the perfect tree," said Tom Day, assistant manager at Earl May Garden Center, 71st and O. The fuller look is definitely in, he added.

Day said the best-selling household trees — Scotch and Norway pines in the 5½ to 7-foot range — are up a dollar in price from last year. For those who go for trees in a big way, Day says 14-foot Douglas firs are available.

Dick Campbell of Campbell's Nursery said people seem to be selecting taller trees these days. Seven footers are more popular than their five-foot counterparts, he indicated.

While the price of pines shipped in from tree plantations is in the $2 per foot range, trees cut from the nursery's own fields start at $4 per foot. The more perfect the shape, the higher the price, Campbell said.

In Natural Setting

Choose and cut operations offer Christmas tree buyers a chance to see the greenery in its natural setting.

Walter Bagley, who runs the Prairie Pines tree farm east of Lincoln, thinks there's a greater interest in locally grown trees each year because people are more concerned about the freshness of the tree they buy.

Professor of horticulture and forestry at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Bagley said if a tree is fresh enough and kept in water, it should not deteriorate for a month to six weeks in the average home.

After the holiday season, Bagley advocates using the tree as a winter decoration in the backyard. Depending on the weather, a tree should stay fresh for another month or two, Bagley said. He feels extending the use of the tree helps "take the sting out of the expense."

While giving up the smell of fresh evergreen in the air, artificial tree owners are saved the annual search for the perfect tree, as well as the post-holiday clean-up of needles.

Nothing Is Forever

And what seems like a one-time expense is not always so, according to Dick Campbell, whose nursery also sells artificial greenery.

People who buy an artificial tree are usually tired of it after three years, even if it isn't worn out, Campbell said. Campbell's sales run in cycles, with a steady two-year business followed by an extremely heavy third year.

Shoppers should check artificial or plastic trees for an approved laboratory label indicating fire retardant approval. Only indirect lighting should be used on metallic trees.

Care For Your Tree

Unless you've swung the ax that felled the tree or witnessed the falling by someone else's hand, you can't tell by looking exactly how fresh your Christmas tree really is.

Since appearances can be deceiving, check to see if your evergreen is wearing a new coat of green dye.

Don't baby your tree: Tug on the needles to see if they're firmly attached to the bough. Bend the needles to see if they're pliant. Tap the tree on the ground to see if it's springy and if the needles stay on.

Satisfied that your tree is fresh, follow some simple steps at home to preserve the freshness.

Check to see if clotted resins at the base of the tree are preventing it from absorbing water. If so, saw off an inch or two on the diagonal from the tree trunk to allow water absorption.

Place the tree in a bucket of water, adding water daily as needed. Make sure the tree is securely in its stand.

Don't place the tree near a heat source which may cause it to dry out.

Do not block passageways or exits, in case of fire.

Check that tree decorations are noncombustible or flame retardant. Electric cords and lights should be Underwriter Laboratory-approved (UL).

Pack Cookies Well

To avoid cookie breakage during mailing, place crumpled paper on bottom of box to cushion. Arrange cookies in rows with layer of crushed wax paper or folded paper towel between and on top of cookies. Fill each crevis with puffed cereal or popcorn. If the cookies aren't being sent overseas, the cereal and popcorn can be eaten, too! Bar and drop cookies are best for mailing.

2♥	Dble	Pass	2♠
3♣	Pass	4♥

Opening lead—queen of spades.

There are hands where you can't deviate one iota from perfect defense or you may wind up getting carted off to the hospital.

Consider this deal from a team match where West led the queen of spades, which was ducked all around. West continued with the jack and declarer took the ace, ruffed a spade, cashed the A-Q of hearts, and led a low diamond to the nine.

West cashed two diamonds but was then thoroughly end-played. He had to lead a club or a diamond, and either play would hand South the contract.

At the second table, the bidding went:

South	West	North	East
1♥	Dble	Pass	1♠
3♥	Pass	4♥

Again West led the queen of spades, ducked in dummy, but here East overtook the queen with the king and returned a diamond. West cashed two diamonds and reverted to spades, thus putting the contract out of reach. South later lost a club trick and went down one.

East performed exceptionally well to defeat the contract. Overtaking the queen of spades was not particularly difficult, as West was marked by the bidding and declarer's first play with the Q-J-x.

But shifting to a diamond rather than a club was an absolutely necessary move. It was a well-aimed bull's-eye that quickly cut declarer down to size.

Let's say East had returned a club at trick two. In that case, South could make the contract with careful play.

He wins with the ace, plays a spade to the ace, ruffs a spade, draws trumps, and exits with the queen of clubs. West takes the king but is helpless. He must establish the ten of clubs or king of diamonds as a trick, and so hand South his tenth trick.

Local Grocery Prices Show Slight Downturn

Here we are, about to embark on a new year with high hopes that the 1975 economy will be an improvement over the 1974 situation.

And if this month's grocery prices are any indication, there may be a gradual turn for the better.

A monthly survey, conducted by Lincoln Star staff members in three chain stores and one locally owned store in Lincoln, has revealed a slow but steady downward trend in grocery prices during the last three months: There was a six-cent decrease from September to October (from $13.06 to $13), a slight dip to $12.96 in November and December"s average total for the 17 food items is $12.71 or 26¢ below the November price.

Prices Up Over Year

Yet, although the prices have declined, it should be noted that this December's prices are up 4.5% from last December's $12.16 total.

However, 1974 has been a year of fluctuating grocery prices. For example, in January of this year alone, prices on the surveyed items took an approximate 4% jump ($12.64) over the December 1973 total. And by September the average price for the items cost $13.06, comprising a 9% rise over last December.

An itemization of the foods and their prices shows that eggs have decreased from an average of 81¢ one year ago to 74¢ this month. In addition, this month's price of ground beef showed a 12¢ per pound decline from last December's price, and pork chops too followed the welcome trend (down 35¢ per pound) due to an advertised special.

Nevertheless, the remainder of the listed items revealed higher prices since last December and many of these can be considered substantial increases.

Those items displaying a nine-cent increase over last December were flour ($1.08 for five pounds), peanut butter (now 64¢ for a 12-ounce jar) and frozen peas (selling for 50¢ a package).

Flour Hike Snowballs

Reflecting the increased flour prices were spaghetti, which is currently being sold at 51¢ a pound — a six-cent rise over last December's 45¢ — and bread, which is sporting a 59¢ price tag, as opposed to last year's 39¢

Pork and beans are selling at the going rate of 39¢ for a 16-ounce can (18¢ over last December) and ketchup is sporting a 14¢ increase.

And, according to the survey, this year's increases also include 12¢ on tuna, four cents on peaches, five cents on green beans, four cents per pound on round steak, one cent per pound on chicken and two cents on milk.

Although not included in store totals, wholesale sugar prices also have ranked high on the list of grocery price increases. One brand of cane sugar showed a $1.09 increase per five-pound bag from September to December, while beet sugar showed a $1.21 rise for a five-pound bag.

Consumers Unable To Guess Grocery Prices

(c) Chicago Daily News

Consumers are always complaining about high prices at the supermarket. No doubt about it.

But there is doubt about whether consumers really know what the prices of grocery products are.

Progressive Grocer, an industry trade journal, recently tested 600 shoppers and found that most of them couldn't accurately guess the prices on a variety of popular items.

The publication picked a list of 44 items and gave shoppers a leeway of 5% above or below the marked price. Consumers, however, were able to average a score of only 29%.

Only three products — Marlboro cigarets, Land O' Lakes butter and Scott paper towels — registered scores of better than 50%. The price-guessing on other products was considerably lower.

Only 24% of the consumers could guess the approximate price of Tide XK detergent; Ken-L-Ration dog food drew 17%; Pillsbury flour 14%; Crest toothpaste 10%; Maxwell House instant coffee 9%, and Saran Wrap 8%.

One could say that rapid inflation has caused prices to change from week to week. That's true, but the range of prices guessed on some items seems to indicate that many consumers don't have the foggiest notion of how much a grocery product should cost.

Consumers guess the price of Green Giant Niblets (which were 26 cents at the time), ranging from 13 cents to 63 cents. Heinz Ketchup (36 cents) ranged from 19 cents to 79 cents. Kellogg's Corn Flakes (41 cents) ranged from 27 cents to 99 cents, and an eight-pack of Coca-Cola ($1.72) ranged from 99 cents to $2.00.

Drink Less That Others May Eat

©The New York Times

New York — White Americans are being urged to eat less grain-fed meats in order to free grain for the world's hungry millions, a companion grain-saving measure has been suggested that hits at another American institution — alcohol.

The idea is that a cutback in the billions of gallons of grain-based alcoholic beverages — beer and most hard liquors — that Americans drink each year could theoretically provide food for millions of people.

The leading proponent of this view, Dr. Jean Mayer of Harvard, one of the country's most prominent nutritionists, has even coined a slogan to raise the consciousness of imbibing Americans — "Have a drink and starve a child."

Although Mayer proposed this slogan half in jest, he was dead serious about his suggestion to "limit yourself to one drink per occasion, unless you drink wine." This approach, he says would help to reduce alcohol-induced strain on health and pocketbook as well as free grain for the hungry.

Not New Idea

Curbing alcohol to obtain grain to feed people is not a new idea. In 1946 President Harry S. Truman closed the distilleries for three months to make grain available on an emergency basis for war-torn Europe.

What effect might a cutback now in alcohol productin have on the ability of the world to feed itself? The primary beverages in question are beer, made from barley, corn, rice, wheat and soybeans; bourbon from corn; Scotch and Irish whiskey from barley and other grains; rye and Canadian whiskey from rye; gin and vodka from corn, wheat and other cereal grains.

Last year, according to data provided by the United States Departments of Agriculture and Commerce and the respective industries, American distillers used 1.1 million tons of grain to produce 183 million gallons of whiskey and American brewers used 3 million tons of grain to produce 4.6 billion gallons of beer.

While the total of 4.1 million tons of grain used in 1973 to produce alcoholic beverages represents only 1.6% of the total food and feed grains grown in the United States last year, it is still enough food for one year for more than 20 million people living on a minimal adequate diet.

25 Million People

Looking at American consumption of alcoholic beverages — 402 million gallons of distilled spirits and 4.2 billion gallons of beer a year — it might be said that Americans annually drink up the amount of grain that could feed 25 million people a year.

In fact, however, Americans do not drink this quantity of grain, because it is only the sugar and starch in the grain that is fermented into alcohol, which is then distilled off to make whiskey. The remainder of the grain, representing a third of the original weight and virtually all the protein, is "recycled" as a highly nutritious feed for livestock, according to the Distilled Spirits Council and the United States Brewers Association, Washington-based industry organizations.

"This fact may make one feel a little better about the grain used to make alcohol," remarked Lester Brown, agricultural economist with the Overseas Development Council, "but it still represents a less efficient use of grain than if it were fed directly to people."

Because grain-fed animals use from four to eight pounds of grain to produce one pound of meat, the resulting meat represents a significant loss of the grain's original "food power" for man.

Type of Grain

Industry sources point out that the type of grain used in making alcoholic beverages must also be considered in assessing the human food value of a production cutback. Corn is overwhelmingly the major ingredient in making whiskeys (primarily bourbon), representing more than half the total grain input of 1.1 million tons used annually in these beverages. For beer, the major ingredient is barely at 2 million tons a year, with corn the next most important ingredient at 750,000 tons a year.

Neither of these grains, the distillers say, are the ones commonly eaten in those countries where food shortages are now most acute. Wheat and rice, the major foodstuffs in the hungriest parts of the world, represent relatively minor inputs in making alcoholic beverages, industry sources note.

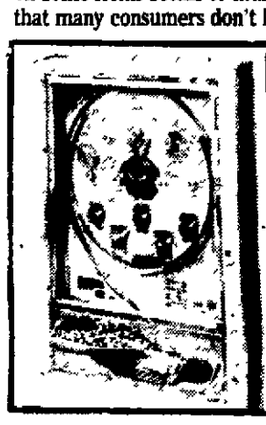

But Brown calls this a "spurious argument raised by those who don't want to do anything."

"If there's a will to make adjustments, they can be made," he insisted.

Brown added that virtually all the grains used in making alcohol — rye and sorghum as well as corn, barley, wheat and rice — are now used as human foods in different parts of the world, and that the land on which barley grows is well-suited for the production of more popular food grains.

Local Grocery Prices Show Slight Downturn

Here we are, about to embark on a new year with high hopes that the 1975 economy will be an improvement over the 1974 situation.

And if this month's grocery prices are any indication, there may be a gradual turn for the better.

A monthly survey, conducted by Lincoln Star staff members in three chain stores and one locally owned store in Lincoln, has revealed a slow but steady downward trend in grocery prices during the last three months: There was a six-cent decrease from September to October (from $13.06 to $13), a slight dip to $12.98 in November and December"s average total for the 17 food items is $12.71 or 26¢ below the November price.

Prices Up Over Year

Yet, although the prices have declined, it should be noted that this December's prices are up 4.5% from last December's $12.16 total.

However, 1974 has been a year of fluctuating grocery prices. For example, in January of this year alone, prices on the surveyed items took an approximate 4% jump ($12.64) over the December 1973 total. And by September the average price for the items cost $13.06, comprising a 9% rise over last December."

An itemization of the foods and their prices shows that eggs have decreased from an average of 81¢ one year ago to 74¢ this month. In addition, this month's price of ground beef showed a 12¢ per pound decline from last December's price, and pork chops too followed the welcome trend (down 35¢ per pound) due to an advertised special.

Nevertheless, the remainder of the listed items revealed higher prices since last December and many of these can be considered substantial increases.

Those items displaying a nine-cent increase over last December were flour ($1.08 for five pounds), peanut butter (now 64¢ for a 12-ounce jar) and frozen peas (selling for 50¢ a package).

Flour Hike Snowballs

Reflecting the increased flour prices were spaghetti, which is currently being sold at 51¢ a pound — a six-cent rise over last December's 45¢ — and bread, which is sporting a 59¢ price tag, as opposed to last year's 39¢.

Pork and beans are selling at the going rate of 39¢ for a 16-ounce can (18¢ over last December) and ketchup is sporting a 14¢ increase.

And, according to the survey, this year's increases also include 12¢ on tuna, four cents on peaches, five cents on green beans, four cents per pound on round steak, one cent per pound on chicken and two cents on milk.

Although not included in store totals, wholesale sugar prices also have ranked high on the list of grocery price increases. One brand of cane sugar showed a $1.09 increase per five-pound bag from September to December, while beet sugar showed a $1.21 rise for a five-pound bag.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes (41 cents) ranged from 27 cents to 99 cents, and an eight-pack of Coca-Cola ($1.72) ranged from 99 cents to $2.00.

Drink Less That Others May Eat

©The New York Times

New York — White Americans are being urged to eat less grain-fed meats in order to free grain for the world's hungry millions, a companion grain-saving measure has been suggested that hits at another American institution — alcohol.

The idea is that a cutback in the billions of gallons of grain-based alcoholic beverages — beer and most hard liquors — that Americans drink each year could theoretically provide food for millions of people.

The leading proponent of this view, Dr. Jean Mayer of Harvard, one of the country's most prominent nutritionists, has even coined a slogan to raise the consciousness of imbibing Americans — "Have a drink and starve a child."

Although Mayer proposed this slogan half in jest, he was dead serious about his suggestion to "limit yourself to one drink per occasion, unless you drink wine." This approach, he says would help to reduce alcohol-induced strain on health and pocketbook as well as free grain for the hungry.

Not New Idea

Curbing alcohol to obtain grain to feed people is not a new idea. In 1946 President Harry S. Truman closed the distilleries for three months to make grain available on an emergency basis for war-torn Europe.

What effect might a cutback now in alcohol productin have on the ability of the world to feed itself? The primary beverages in question are beer, made from barley, corn, rice, wheat and soybeans; bourbon from corn; Scotch and Irish whiskey from barley and other grains; rye and Canadian whiskey from rye; gin and vodka from corn, wheat and other cereal grains.

Last year, according to data provided by the United States Departments of Agriculture and Commerce and the respective industries, American distillers used 1.1 million tons of grain to produce 183 million gallons of whiskey and American brewers used 3 million tons of grain to produce 4.6 billion gallons of beer.

While the total of 4.1 million tons of grain used in 1973 to produce alcoholic beverages represents only 1.6% of the total food and feed grains grown in the United States last year, it is still enough food for one year for more than 20 million people living on a minimal adequate diet.

25 Million People

Looking at American consumption of alcoholic beverages — 402 million gallons of distilled spirits and 4.2 billion gallons of beer a year — it might be said that Americans annually drink up the amount of grain that could feed 25 million people a year.

In fact, however, Americans do not drink this quantity of grain, because it is only the sugar and starch in the grain that is fermented into alcohol, which is then distilled off to make whiskey. The remainder of the grain, representing a third of the original weight and virtually all the protein, is "recycled" as a highly nutritious feed for livestock, according to the Distilled Spirits Council and the United States Brewers Association, Washington-based industry organizations.

"This fact may make one feel a little better about the grain used to make alcohol," remarked Lester Brown, agricultural economist with the Overseas Development Council, "but it still represents a less efficient use of grain than if it were fed directly to people."

Because grain-fed animals use from four to eight pounds of grain to produce one pound of meat, the resulting meat represents a significant loss of the grain's original "food power" for man.

Type of Grain

Industry sources point out that the type of grain used in making alcoholic beverages must also be considered in assessing the human food value of a production cutback. Corn is overwhelmingly the major ingredient in making whiskeys (primarily bourbon), representing more than half the total grain input of 1.1 million tons used annually in these beverages. For beer, the major ingredient is barely at 2 million tons a year, with corn the next most important ingredient at 750,000 tons a year.

Neither of these grains, the distillers say, are the ones commonly eaten in those countries where food shortages are now most acute. Wheat and rice, the major foodstuffs in the hungriest parts of the world, represent relatively minor inputs in making alcoholic beverages, industry sources note.

But Brown calls this a "spurious argument raised by those who don't want to do anything."

"If there's a will to make adjustments, they can be made," he insisted.

Brown added that virtually all the grains used in making alcohol — rye and sorghum as well as corn, barley, wheat and rice — are now used as human foods in different parts of the world, and that the land on which barley grows is well-suited for the production of more popular food grains.

Farm Bureau Delegates Complete List Of Resolutions

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Some 800 Nebraska Farm Bureau state convention delegates headed home Wednesday after electing officers and completing their list of resolutions they want the state delegates to take up at the national convention in New Orleans, La., in January.

Four new members were elected and one present board member was re-elected to the organization's state board of directors.

The new board members include Mrs. Bert Jensen of Long Pine, John Claassen of Beatrice, Irven Forbes of Atkinson, Stanley Neel of McCook and the re-elected member, Wayne Hansen of Dorchester. All will serve three-year terms.

Eighty-two of the state's 87 county farm bureau organizations had delegates at the convention. The delegates decided to hold their 1975 convention in South Sioux City at the Marina Inn.

The delegates put together a list of recommendations for the organization's delegation to the national convention in the hope that their resolutions will become a part of the national policy of the Farm Bureau.

The list included:

— a proposal for a national law prohibiting Congress from attaching a rider to bills, — opposition to any increase in federal gasoline taxes,

— opposition to government held grain reserves,

— a request that the national organization add information and educational programs to their marketing organizations,

— support for livestock and poultry indemnification programs to cover losses caused by diseases but not by improper use of chemicals,

— a request that all imported foods be of the same quality standards as that required for domestic foods,

— support for labeling of imported foods as imported,

— support for an investigation of the farm-retail price spread,

— a statement that farmers must maintain control of funds collected for promoting their products,

— support for a balanced federal budget,

— a request that Congress cut pya of its members by 10%,

— support for tax changes that would eliminate tax loss farming,

— opposition to tax funds being used in political campaigns, and support for a shorter period for political campaign,

— a call for tighter rules on tax exemptions for foundations,

— support for several revisions in tax laws to ease the problem of parents selling their farm to their children,

— opposition to automatic pay raises for government employes, but a proposal for a system of merit pay raises as an alternative,

— support for transfer of school lunch and food stamp programs to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare,

— a call for several changes in the Federal Reserve System to make it truly a central bank for the U.S.,

— a request that the Internal Revenue Service be subjected to an annual audit.

— suggested a long list of changes in agricultural export and import laws to increase farm trade in world markets.

— offered many suggestions related to making trade a two-way street and to tightening and enforcing various trade regulations now on the law books.

— suggested a long list of comments on foreign aid, including support for Food for Peace programs, encouragement of private enterprise economic systems, aid in various agricultural production efforts in developing countries, — opposition to the lending of money to other nations at less than the current prime rate of interest in the U.S.,

— the expression of reservations about the value of the United Nations as a forum for settling international disputes,

— a call for a general strengthening of property rights,

— a call for local land use laws in preference to federal laws,

— a statement that water resources should be managed at local or state level, — encouragement for the construction of small dams and ponds instead of larger ones,

— support for better predator control,

— backing for railroad mergers if it will improve service to rural areas,

— a call for the repeal of the Occupational Safety and Health Act,

— opposition to licensing of firearms,

— a request for a clarification of the law governing ownership of property for the contribution made by women on a farm.

Final Plans For Manor Ordered

Lancaster Manor Advisory Board members Wednesday directed Architect Bill Fenton to submit final plans by Jan 30 for remodeling of the south wing of the nursing home.

Plans call for remodeling the south wing, which will complete the third phase of remodeling the facility.

According to Administrator Jerry Gibson, the estimated $300,000 project must be under contract by March 11 in order for the facility to comply with state regulations.

Remodeling plans also call for renovation of the kitchen and demolition of the paint shop at the Manor.

It was reported that the county-operated facility is running at capacity and turnover in personnel is at the lowest point (4%) since the nursing facility opened.

Student-Built House Auctioned For $20,100

"My husband said he'd buy it if it was a bargain," Mrs. Larry Schildt of rural Pleasant Dale said Wednesday.

Schildt thought $20,100 was a bargain, so he bought the house build by some 60 students at the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Milford campus.

"He thought it would go higher than that," Mrs. Schildt said. SeTech construction program chairman Larry Kness said if the house was sitting in Lincoln with a lot, basement and utilities hook-ups, it would be worth $35,000 to $40,000.

Competition Outbid

Schildt outbid the public auction competition of 25 to 30 other bidders. Mrs. Schildt said they'll move the house onto their farm three miles northwest of the I-80 Pleasant Dale exchange and move into it.

Their present two-story home is about 70 years old, she said. It had been moved too, and remodeled, but Mrs. Schildt said they'll trade its troublesome basement walls happily for the new 1,410-square-foot house.

The Schildt's three children "are kind of up in the air" about it, she said, and laughed. "They're claiming every room that's in it."

The house is the annual result of students' work in the SeTech Milford Campus departments of building construction, air conditioning and electrical technologies. Dick Divis serves as instructor in the program more than two decades old.

Divis said last month the materials for the house the Schildt's bought cost about $18,000, reinforcing Schildt's belief he got a bargain. The profits from the sale go into a campus general fund, divided among the three departments for instructional uses.

The student-built homes are made of quality materials and furnishings and are built to legal code specifications. In the past, each has drawn from $18,000 to $20,000.

Asked what they'll do with their old home, Mrs. Schildt replied, "I don't know, I hope we can sell it." They ought to get enough money from it to pay for the student labor on their new house.

"If we had to build one, I don't think we could have built it, at least at that price," she said.

Meeting To Be Asked To Eye Carpenter's Protest

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said Wednesday he would mail a letter to the Unicameral's committee chairmen asking them to meet to decide how to handle Terry Carpenter's protest of the 48th District Unicameral race.

Carpenter was defeated by William Nichol of Scottsbluff after Secretary of State Allen Beermann threw out a number of his write-in votes.

Chambers said the chairmen should meet to determine what aspects of the election would be considered. Chambers said confusion and disorganization would result if the Legislature did not set up machinery for Carpenter's protest.

He said he believed ballots should be counted where the only mistake was spelling

NU Foundation Accepts College

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The University of Nebraska Foundation's board of directors announced Wednesday it has accepted Pershing College as an unconditional gift.

The campus consists of 69 acres and five buildings in Beatrice, and has an estimated value of $2.5 million.

The Beatrice National Bank and Trust Co., serving as trustee, is transfering the property.

Foundation President Harry R. Haynie said, "As is the practice with all gifts received by the foundation, the college will be offered to the University of Nebraska for its use."

Regents Unanimous

The NU Board of Regents on Nov. 22 voted unanimously to ask the foundation to accept the Beatrice property for educational uses, to be determined by the regents.

"However," Haynie said, "if the university, after studies, decides it has no use for the college, then the foundation will be free to sell the property, including any unwanted furnishings and equipment, to any suitable buyer for any purpose."

The directors "felt that the foundation could not refuse to accept a gift of this value, which will ultimately be of benefit to the university, whether in converted dollars or in actual physical property," Haynie explained.

"If the university does decide to use the property, then the foundation will sign a lease" with NU, he said.

The physical property includes three dormitories, an academic building, and a fourth structure used as a library, student union and bookstore.

Earlier values placed on Pershing College, closed in 1971, ranged as high as $5.5 million Trustee William W Cook, banker, offered NU the campus in June. NU President D.B. Varner said last month the state would incur no costs in accepting it.

Varner said the experimental State University of Nebraska (SUN) project, which offers college courses at home through various media, could use Pershing as the distribution center for SUN learning materials.

SUN is a member of the four-state University of Mid-America (UMA) open-learning consortium, which would also be served by the distribution center for SUN- and UMA-developed course materials.

Varner also mentioned the possibility of using Pershing as a center for short-term residencies for SUN students. Regent Robert Prokop of Wilber said agricultural and ag extension groups, and an educational service unit have expressed interest in using part of Pershing.

Omaha State Sen. John Cavanaugh has said the regents' action on Pershing was improper and possibly illegal, because the board did not conduct a public hearing 30 days before accepting the gift, as required by law. If it's determined no hearing was required, Cavanaugh has said, then the regents tried to circumvent the law.

Cavanaugh has requested Eldin Ehrlich, legislative fiscal analyst, for a report on the regents action. The senator said even though the gift was free, it will eventually cost the taxpayers money.

GOP State Committee Will Meet

Omaha (AP) — The Republican State Central Committee will meet in Omaha Saturday to consider an $80,000 budget for 1975.

The GOP Executive Committee formulated a preliminary draft of the budget last month.

A total of $112,568 was budgeted for 1974.

The proposed 1975 budget includes $30,000 for salaries, a drop of $7,150 from 1974.

Glenn Wilson, executive director and head of the state party headquarters in Lincoln, is the major paid official in the Nebraska Republican organization. He said his current salary is $8,000.

Rep. Dave Martin of Kearney, retiring Third District congressman, last month criticized state Republican spending. He said the party did not give enough money to GOP candidates and urged an 80% reduction in the Central Committee's budget.

Swearing In Of Students Set Today

Student body presidents of the three University of Nebraska campuses will be sworn in Thursday as non-voting members of the University of Nebraska Board of Regents, it was announced.

Voters narrowly approved a constitutional amendment at the Nov. 5 general election which places the three student body presidents on the board.

They will be given the oath of office by Secretary of State Allen Beermann Thursday afternoon, Beermann's office said.

The student board members and the campuses they will represent were identified by Beermann as:

Ronald H. Clingenpeel, University of Nebraska-Lincoln; James D. Sherrets, University of Nebraska-Omaha; Gregory Kent Sorensen, University of Nebraska Medical Center-Omaha.

Blood Test Idea May Go Statewide

Omaha (AP) — The plan of Omaha firemen to offer free blood pressure checks may become part of a program being prepared by the Nebraska Heart Association.

The high blood pressure committee of the association hopes to have community-based programs throughout Nebraska in May as part of a national effort to counter high blood pressure, which can lead to heart attacks, strokes and other complications.

Fire Chief Vernon Van Scoy said he wants to work with medical authorities and is agreeable to waiting for the association's proposal, expected in about a month.

Dr. Gerald Wolf, a member of the Heart Association committee, said a blood pressure program should include initial screening, efforts to get people with elevated readings to physicians and followup to evaluate what's accomplished.

Ansley Wins District Crop Judging Title

Grand Island — An Ansley FFA team and a Henderson youth took top placings in a district FFA crops judging contest here Wednesday.

The Ansley FFA team No. 3 scored 1,562 of a possible 1,800 points to take top billing. Team members Roy Gehrt, Neil Ostrand, and Dan Woolstrum won out over teams from Henderson, 1,496 points; Ansley FFA team No. 1, 1,431; Genoa, 1,375; and York, 1,342 points.

In individual competition, Eugene Thiesten of Henderson FFA gathered 564 of a possible 600 points to win. He was followed by Neil Ostrand, Ansley FFA, Mason City, 556; Roy Gehrt, Ansley FFA, Mason City, 550; James Johnson, Ansley FFA, Mason City, 513, and Ron Makovicka, York FFA, 505 points.

By winning first place in the contest, the Ansley FFA team No 3 is now in contention for state honors with the first place winners of contests held in Lincoln, Dec 4; North Platte, Dec. 10; and Norfolk, Dec. 17. Of the district contests, the first place team with the highest score will be the state winners

Six FFA chapters entered a total of 15 teams and 50 individuals in the contest. Plaques and certificates of merit were awarded the top teams and individuals by the Nebraska Grain Improvement Association.

Med Center Child Abuse Funds Sought

Omaha (AP) — The University of Nebraska Medical Center's pediatrics department is requesting more than $1 million in federal funds over a three-year period for a child abuse program.

The request will be one of six evaluated by the Health Planning Council of the Midlands at its Dec. 19 meeting.

Jerry Dykstethuis, director of the family services section, said it is hoped that by the end of the three-year period there would be a coordinated system throughout Nebraska for identifying abused and neglected children and seeing that they and their families get help.

In individual competition, Eugene Thieszen of Henderson FFA gathered 564 of a possible 600 points to win. He was followed by Neil Ostrand, Ansley FFA, Mason City, 556; Roy Gehrt, Ansley FFA, Mason City, 550; James Johnson, Ansley FFA, Mason City, 513; and Ron Makovicka, York FFA, 505 points.

By winning first place in the contest, the Ansley FFA team No. 3 is now in contention for state honors with the first place winners of contests held in Lincoln, Dec. 4; North Platte, Dec. 10; and Norfolk, Dec. 17. Of the district contests, the first place team with the highest score will be the state winners.

Six FFA chapters entered a total of 15 teams and 50 individuals in the constest. Plaques and certificates of merit were awarded the top teams and individuals by the Nebraska Grain Improvement Association.

Med Center Child Abuse Funds Sought

Omaha (AP) — The University of Nebraska Medical Center's pediatrics department is requesting more than $1 million in federal funds over a three-year period for a child abuse program.

The request will be one of six evaluated by the Health Planning Council of the Midlands at its Dec. 19 meeting.

Jerry Dyksterhuis, director of the family services section, said it is hoped that by the end of the three-year period there would be a coordinated system throughout Nebraska for identifying abused and neglected children and seeing that they and their families get help.

Nebraskans Can View Sky Events

Nebraskans will be able to view an expected meteor shower beginning around midnight Friday, according to authorities.

Nebraska Wesleyan Astronomy Prof. Carroll Moore said about 6 to 10 meteors an hour would be visible at that time.

The shower will peak at about 4 a.m. Saturday over Lincoln, with 50 to 60 meteors visible an hour, he said.

Moore advised stargazers to watch the eastern sky Friday evening, and the western skies in the early morning hours Saturday.

Moore said Nebraska's sun will rise partially blocked in an eclipse Friday morning. He said the sun would be about 50% covered at 9 a.m. The eclipse will last about three hours, he said.

He warned that no attempt should be made to look directly into the eclipse.

Moore added that most of the meteors Nebraskans will see will burn up before entering the atmosphere, but noted there was a slight chance one could have enough substance to reach earth.

If that occurs, Moore said witnesses should contact an astronomer at Nebraska Wesleyan, the University of Nebraska or the Smithsonian Institution Meteorite Recovery Project in Lincoln.

Police Report Arrests Clear Nine Burglaries

Nine burglaries have been cleared with the arrest of three women and two men, according to Lincoln police. Police said the arrests were made on the basis of information from a confidential informant.

Police said two television sets, an electric calculator, a flag and two flagpoles have been recovered.

Police said the burglaries occurred at Kissler Office Equipment Co., 1125 N. 10th; Hydrozo Coating Co., 855 W; Faith United Church of Christ, 915 Charleston; Capitol Bridge Co., Capitol Steel, Co. and Century Bridge and Lumber Co., all of 1001 N. 9th; Greens Standard Station, 1201 N. 10th, and the Naval Reserve Training Center, 1625 N. 10th, which was burglarized twice.

Two of those arrested were referred to juvenile authorities, police said. Police said others may be arrested in connection with the burglaries.

State Historical Society Sets Up Yuletide Exhibit

A one-horse spring sleigh, Christmas tree ornaments from the 1880's and an 1883 Humpty Dumpty bank toy are just a few of the Yuletide exhibits from the past, now on display at the Nebraska State Historical Society Museum.

Other gifts on display range from penwipers to hand-painted china. More elaborate gifts include pearl inlaid opera glasses and a petit silver coffee server.

The Nebraska Statehood Memorial at 1617 H has been decorated by historical society members in the style of the 1870's. Cookie cutters from early Nebraska homes are in the kitchen. The front parlor contains a native grown cedar decorated with paper chains, candles and ornaments.

The memorial is open to the public from 9-4 Tuesday through Saturday and from 2-5 Sunday.

The museum's hours are 8-5 daily and 1:30-5 Sundays. Both places will be closed on Christmas day.

Saxbe Blames Much Of Crime On Young People

Atlanta, Ga. (AP) — U.S. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe blames much of the nation's crime on young people who don't work and find their law violations "rewarding emotionally and financially."

"Youthful offenders are on the increase, and this is particularly true of violent crime," Saxbe told newsmen during a tour of law enforcement agencies in this area.

With him was Richard Velde, administrator of the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. He said half the serious crimes reported last year were committed by persons under 18, most of them from homes where the father was not present.

Mrs. Ford, Mickey Greet Children

The White House was taken over by 500 children of diplomatic corps families Wednesday as Santa Claus, Mickey Mouse and a magician joined First Lady Betty Ford with entertainment. It was the first party of the holiday season given by the presidential family and it strained the White House kitchens with the demand on cookies. The staff had planned for four cookies per child but it was far from enough and the fruit punch was consumed by the gallon. Mickey Mouse is portrayed by Harvin Weems.

Alleged Kidnaper Bound Over To District Court

A Tennessee man charged in connection with a double kidnaping Nov. 21 waived preliminary hearing in Lancaster County Court Wednesday and was bound over to Lancaster District Court.

Larry Louis Roddy, 24, of Alcoa, Tenn., is specifically charged with kidnaping former State Sen. John Romans of Ord and Darlene Guthrie, a desk clerk at a local motel.

Roddy, who was unable to post the $25,000 bond, is also charged with assault with intent to rape in connection with the Nov. 21 incidents.

Romans, newly elected member of the Nebraska Public Service Commission, was checking into the motel when the alleged kidnaping occurred.

He and Guthrie were released a few hours later when authorities found near Waverly the vehicle containing Roddy, Romans and Guthrie.

Prediction Made

Philadelphia (AP) — University of Pennsylvania economists predict the recession will worsen through the middle of next year but by 1976 the economy should be good again.

Nebraskans Can View Sky Events

Nebraskans will be able to view an expected meteor shower beginning around midnight Friday, according to authorities.

Nebraska Wesleyan Astronomy Prof. Carroll Moore said about 6 to 10 meteors an hour would be visible at that time.

The shower will peak at about 4 a.m. Saturday over Lincoln, with 50 to 60 meteors visible an hour, he said.

Moore advised stargazers to watch the eastern sky Friday evening, and the western skies in the early morning hours Saturday.

Moore said Nebraska's sun will rise partially blocked in an eclipse Friday morning. He said the sun would be about 50% covered at 9 a.m. The eclipse will last about three hours, he said.

He warned that no attempt should be made to look directly into the eclipse.

Moore added that most of the meteors Nebraskans will see will burn up before entering the atmosphere, but noted there was a slight chance one could have enough substance to reach earth.

If that occurs, Moore said witnesses should contact an astronomer at Nebraska Wesleyan, the University of Nebraska or the Smithsonian Institution Meteorite Recovery Project in Lincoln.

Police Report Arrests Clear Nine Burglaries

Nine burglaries have been cleared with the arrest of three women and two men, according to Lincoln police. Police said the arrests were made on the basis of information from a confidential informant.

Police said two television sets, an electric calculator, a flag and two flagpoles have been recovered.

Police said the burglaries occurred at Kissler Office Equipment Co., 1125 N. 10th; Hydrozo Coating Co., 855 W; Faith United Church of Christ, 915 Charleston; Capitol Bridge Co., Capitol Steel, Co. and Century Bridge and Lumber Co., all of 1001 N. 9th; Greens Standard Station, 1201 N. 10th, and the Naval Reserve Training Center, 1625 N. 10th, which was burglarized twice.

Two of those arrested were referred to juvenile authorities, police said. Police said others may be arrested in connection with the burglaries.

State Historical Society Sets Up Yuletide Exhibit

A one-horse spring sleigh, Christmas tree ornaments from the 1880's and an 1883 Humpty Dumpty bank toy are just a few of the Yuletide exhibits from the past, now on display at the Nebraska State Historical Society Museum.

Other gifts on display range from penwipers to hand-painted china. More elaborate gifts include pearl inlaid opera glasses and a petit silver coffee server.

The Nebraska Statehood Memorial at 1617 H has been decorated by historical society members in the style of the 1870's. Cookie cutters from early Nebraska homes are in the kitchen. The front parlor contains a native grown cedar decorated with paper chains, candles and ornaments.

The memorial is open to the public from 9-4 Tuesday through Saturday and from 2-5 Sunday.

The museum's hours are 8-5 daily and 1:30-5 Sundays. Both places will be closed on Christmas day.

Saxbe Blames Much Of Crime On Young People

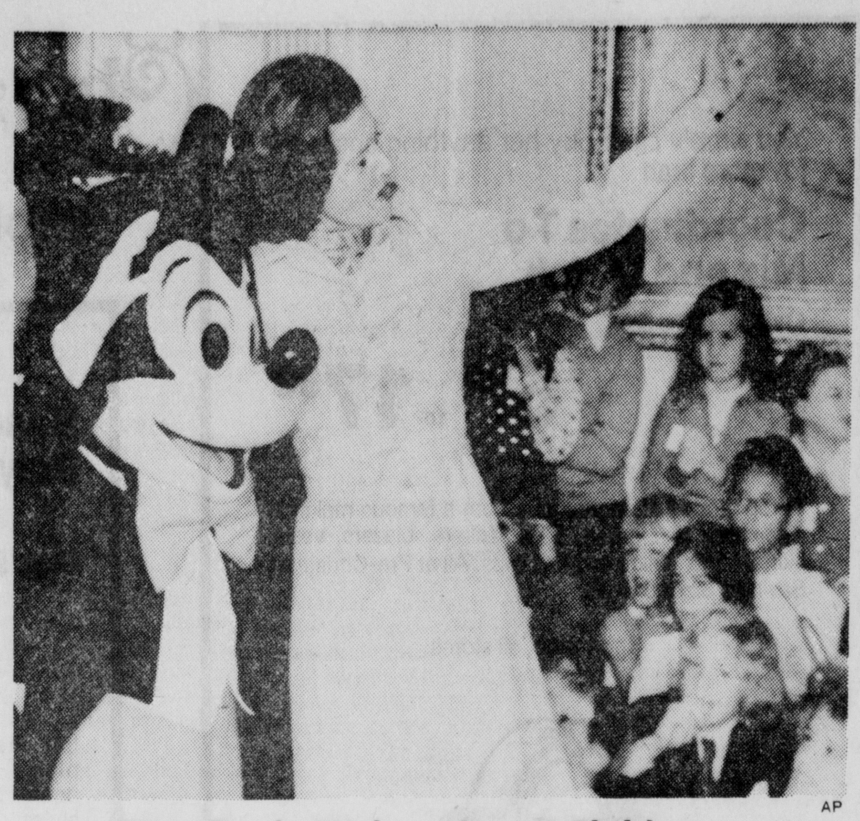

Atlanta, Ga. (AP) — U.S. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe blames much of the nation's crime on young people who don't work and find their law violations "rewarding emotionally and financially."

"Youthful offenders are on the increase, and this is particularly true of violent crime," Saxbe told newsmen during a tour of law enforcement agencies in this area.

With him was Richard Velde, administrator of the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. He said half the serious crimes reported last year were committed by persons under 18, most of them from homes where the father was not present.

Mrs. Ford, Mickey Greet Children

The White House was taken over by 500 children of diplomatic corps families Wednesday as Santa Claus, Mickey Mouse and a magician joined First Lady Betty Ford with entertainment. It was the first party of the holiday season given by the presidential family and it strained the White House kitchens with the demand on cookies. The staff had planned for four cookies per child but it was far from enough and the fruit punch was consumed by the gallon. Mickey Mouse is portrayed by Harvin Weems.

Alleged Kidnaper Bound Over To District Court

A Tennessee man charged in connection with a double kidnaping Nov. 21 waived preliminary hearing in Lancaster County Court Wednesday and was bound over to Lancaster District Court.

Larry Louis Roddy, 24, of Alcoa, Tenn., is specifically charged with kidnaping former State Sen. John Romans of Ord and Darlene Guthrie, a desk clerk at a local motel.

Roddy, who was unable to post the $25,000 bond, is also charged with assault with intent to rape in connection with the Nov. 21 incidents.

Romans, newly elected member of the Nebraska Public Service Commission, was checking into the motel when the alleged kidnaping occurred.

He and Guthrie were released a few hours later when authorities found near Waverly the vehicle containing Roddy, Romans and Guthrie.

Masaryk Memory Attacked

BONN, Germany (AP) — Czech Communists have begun a new campaign to downgrade the influence and work of Thomas G. Masaryk, funder and first president of Czechoslovakia.

This most recent effort is viewed by some observers in the West as reflecting a strengthening of the Soviet influence on Prague's policy at home and abroad.

Masaryk, who led the Czechs to independence in 1918 and became the country's first president, has undergone several reversals of historical fortune at the hands of Communist theoreticians and writers. The alternating attacks and praise indicate the strength of Masaryk's posthumous influence on Czech life.

The Communists once dubbed him "the unforgettable president-liberato" and a fighter for social justice. But recently, Communist party historians and journalists have drummed up another campaign to erase his legend and emphasize the influences of the Russian Revolution and the Czech working class in the founding of Czechoslovakia after World War I.

One recent Czech magazine article seen in the West said Masaryk "deserved the greatest credit for undermining the revolutionary struggle for power right after World War I" and accused him of shedding "the workers' blood" in putting down labor strikes.

Masaryk, also a well-known social philosopher, wrote against the violence of the Russian Revolution and the theory of the class struggle.

For this and for his tendency to look to the West, Masaryk has been a barometer of his own attitude towards Moscow.

Before the 1948 Communist coup, Czech Communists refrained from attacking Masaryk, possibly for fear of alienating the mass of people. And even after the coup, the official party newspaper Rude Pravo said, "We are continuing his work rather than destroying it. We have adopted and support Masaryk's humanist ideas in a new way."

But during the 1950s and early '60s "the Masaryk legend and Masarykism" were targets of defamation. Numerous statues of the former president were torn down and he became a skimmed-over figure in Czech history books.

Corresponding to the political thawing of the mid-1960s the anti-Masaryk campaign slackened, a movement which culminated in the reform year of 1968 when President Ludvik Svoboda placed a bouquet of flowers on his grave

"Only a few nations would exclude their outstanding personalities from their own history so often and so easily as we do," one newspaper wrote. " ... what basis for development has a nation if it wipes out the founder of its independence."

But the Soviet invasion of 1968 which put an end to the "Prague spring" halted the rehabilitation and Masaryk now became "the model rightist-opportunist and revisionist."

The most recent campaign indicates, according to observers, that Masaryk still represents a real or imagined threat to the Czech regime and mirrors its solidly pro-Moscow stance.

The still unresolved death of Masaryk's son, Jan, who was foreign minister after the 1948 coup, is part of the family mystique.

The younger Masaryk died in a fall from his foreign office window in 1948. The Communists said then — and still maintain — he committed suicide. But there is a remaining body of opinion which says he was murdered by the new rulers of the nation.

Prisoner Says He Was Beaten Before Hearing

Buffalo, N.Y. (AP) — A prisoner charged with slaying a guard during the 1971 Attica prison revolt staggered into a courtroom Tuesday and claimed he was beaten unconscious by guards at the Erie County Holding Center.

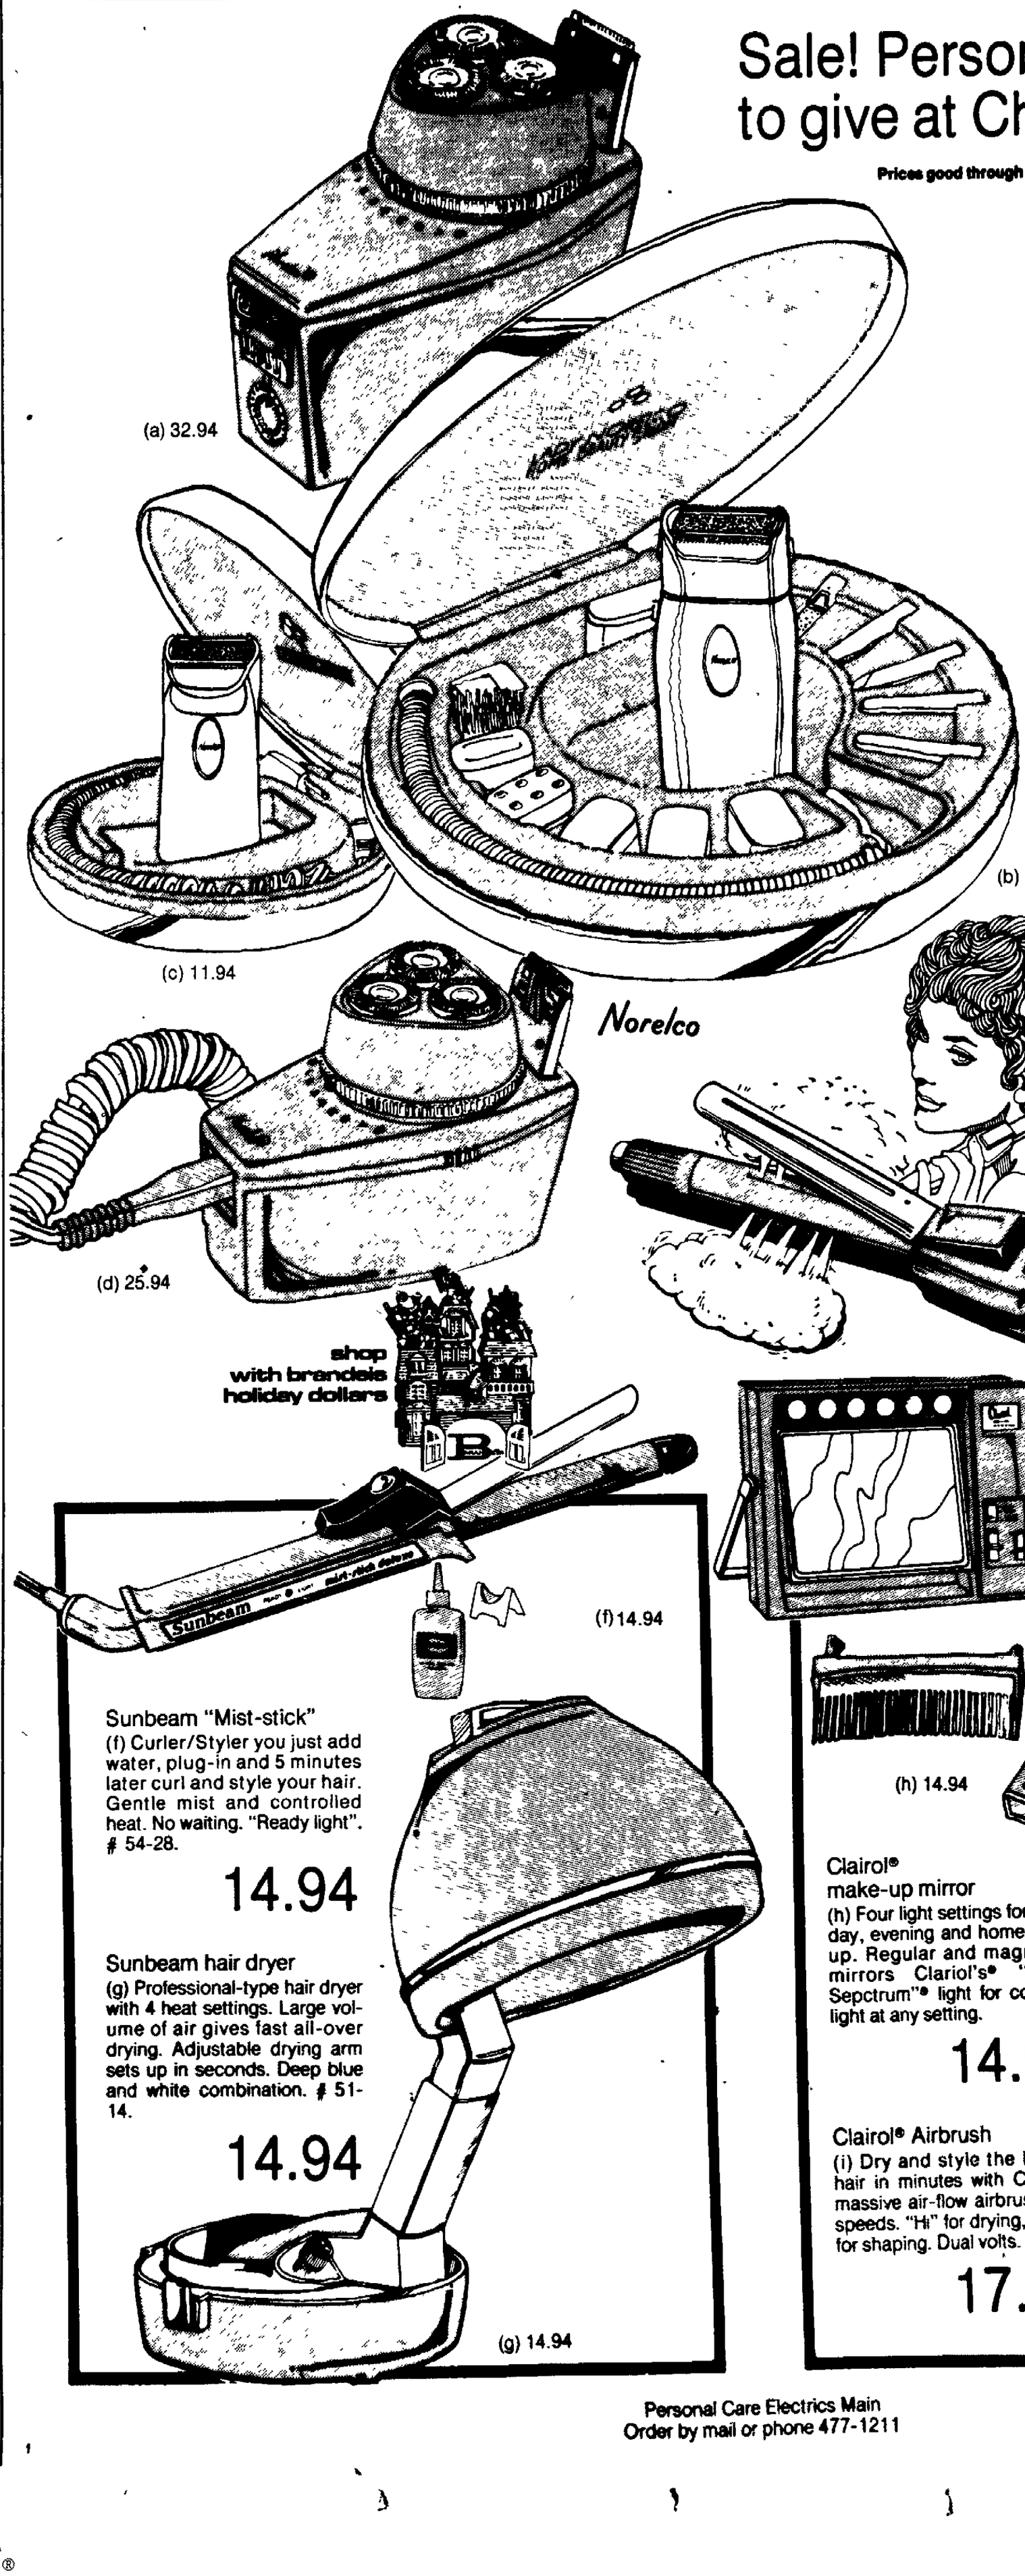

Charles Pernasilice, 22, of Syracuse testified at a pretrial hearing that he was beaten only about a half hour before the hearing was to start.

Pernasilice and John Hill, 22, of Buffalo are charged with murder in the fatal beating of guard William Quinn on the first day of the Sept. 9-13, 1971, Attica prison rebellion.

Job Loss Piles Anguish Onto Financial Problems

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Losing your job is not just a financial problem. Unemployment can put deadly strains on personal relationships — disturbing communications between husband and wife, parents and children, family and neighbors. If left to fester, these anxieties can add enormously to a family's burdens, piling emotional anguish onto financial stress.

As a warning of what you might be up against, I asked a number of psychiatrists to describe the psychological problems that can afflict a family when a breadwinner loses his or her job. This column and the next one will explore the range of problems people are likely to encounter, and the weapons they have at their disposal to beat the terrors back.

Whenever a man or woman loses his accustomed role as provider, "a large chunk of his identity and self-esteem go down the drain," says Dr. Perry Ottenberg, psychoanalyst and associate clinical professor at the University of Pennsylvania. He feels that he's a failure, even though unemployment is not his fault. Job loss is not only a blow to his dignity, it burdens him with guilt.

Severity Varies

He will probably suffer from anxiety, anger and depression, with the severity of his reaction depending on such things as his own resilience, his past history with unemployment and his financial alternatives.

As time wears on, he may become quick to find fault or take offense. He may take his anxieties out on one of the children — "scapegoating" a particular child by criticizing everything he does. Tempers will flare.

If the unemployed is a man, he may feel keenly that he's lost status in his community (since he has no honorable household role to retreat to). Just meeting a neighbor in the daytime might humiliate him. Neighbors, in turn, might feel uneasy with him — he's a daily reminder that they, too, could be thrown out of work. (This kind of stress is less severe if a mass layoff affects an entire community.)

Anxious And Insecure

The wife of an unemployed man, even if she works, will probably grow anxious and insecure. If she's a woman who feels entitled to be taken care of, she may also become angry, says a New York psychiatrist, Dr. Donald J. Mayerson. A second paycheck or high level of savings can delay the onset of marital tension — but eventually a good relationship may fall prey to nagging, complaining and general edginess.

The simple fact that there's less money around makes everyone tense, Dr. Mayerson adds. "People can't have the things they've been used to, and don't know when they'll get them again. This scares them, but also makes them angry. They feel deprived."

Children may find it upsetting that the father they prehaps perceived as all-powerful suddenly seems unable to protect them from need. They also may feel humiliated in the presence of friends whose fathers haven't lost their jobs. Whatever the family's level of anxiety, the children will reflect it.

Guilt Feelings

Middle-class parents are especially apt to feel guilty about unemployment, according to Dr. James P. Cattell, New York psychiatrist and psychiatric consultant to the Berkshire County (Mass.) District Court: "It's a smudge on the family escutcheon," he says. Families that have had more exposure to layoffs can take it a little less personally.

Unemployment is most damaging to people who believed they were protected from it, either by seniority or education, says Dr. Barbara Hills, psychologist and chairman of the psychological education department at Salem College in North Carolina. "Losing their job threatens not only their self-esteem but their personal value system."

"The people I worry about most," Dr. Hills adds, "are those who are just establishing themselves. Perhaps a divorced woman with children who just started back to work, or someone trained in one of the Great Society programs who has successfully held a job for three or four years. These people are just getting their first full sense of confidence and worth. They've bought houses, perhaps, and started real lives for themselves. Losing their jobs could just wipe them out."

British Pound Hits Lowest Value Ever

By The Associated Press

The British pound dropped to its lowest value ever and the London stock market to a 20-year low Wednesday as oil exporting nations prepared to consider raising oil prices again.

Acting on reports that Saudi Arabia will no longer accept oil payments in British sterling, oil companies set off a wave of selling to exchange pounds for dollars. The Bank of England was reported buying sterling in an "aggressive" attempt to halt its fall.

Foreign exchange dealers feared serious implications for the pound in the days to follow.

The decline in the stock market was blamed on the currency drop, plus reports that Arab investments were being transferred from Britain to Paris and the expectation that Britain's monthly trade figures, to be released Thursday, will show a deficit of $1 billion.

The Financial Times index of 30 leading London industrial stocks had plunged 5.2 points to 151.9 near the close of rather light trading.

In relation to the dollar, the pound fell to $2.3170 from $2.3243 the day before. It dropped nearly nine centimes to 10.5075 French francs.

The franc has been rising steadily for the past few days. Against it, the dollar slipped to 4.5050 francs from Tuesday's 4.5350 in London. The West German mark, worth 1.8425 francs Tuesday, was down to 1.83 francs Wednesday.

The Bank of England said the pound had declined more than 21 per cent from its level of three years ago, compared to the trade-weighted average of 14 major currencies. In relation to the dollar alone, however, it has sometimes been lower.

Council Bluffs Outlet Eyed By Brandeis

Omaha (AP) — The J. L. Brandeis Co. of Omaha apparently plans to locate in Council Bluffs, Iowa, whether industrial revenue bonds are issued or not.

John Diesing, vice president and secretary, said Brandeis has deep roots in Council Bluffs and has felt there is a need for a retail outlet in southwest Iowa.

He said at a news conference Tuesday he can't understand why there is any opposition to Brandeis' request for approval of industrial revenue bonds to construct a new store in Council Bluffs' Midland Mall.

A new Iowa law authorizing retail stores to request such bonds became effective in July.

Diesing said Brandeis will move into the mall with or without industrial bonds. He called it a $2.5 million project and said the new store would employ 100 persons.

Shackelford Is President Of Hovland's

Louis T. Shackelford has been elected by the Hovland-Swanson board of directors to replace the late James Swanson as president.

Shackelford, a member of the company for 16 years, is formerly a member of the board and executive vice president.

The appointment is effective immediately.

Shackelford is a member of the City-County Planning Commission, Lincoln Chamber of Commerce and Lincoln Promotion Council. He is former president of the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra board of directors and is a member of the Bryan Memorial Hospital board.

Other Hovland-Swanson officers include: William T. Farr, vice president; Merwyn A. Nyquist, secretary-treasurer; and Kathryn Druliner, assistant treasurer.

Western Electric Slates Layoff Of 146 Workers

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Friday the 13th will be an unlucky day for 146 workers at the Western Electric Omaha Works.

Western Electric officials have notified those workers that they will be getting their "pink slips."

The layoffs will reduce the workforce at the plant to 5,500, down about 800 from the first of the year.

The reduction is necessary because of a downturn in business, a spokesman said, adding that further layoffs are possible.

At its peak in 1970, the plant which manufactures telephone switching equipment and cable, employed about 7,700 workers.

Rally Try Fades In Market

New York (AP) — The stock market turned tail on an early rally try Wednesday, settling instead for a small gain in moderate trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials added 1.48 to 595.35, retreating steadily through the afternoon from a buying spree that had pushed the index up 9 points at its peak.

Gainers on the New York Stock Exchange maintained a nearly 8-to-5 lead over losers, however, among the 1,822 issues traded.

NYSE volume was a moderate 15.7 million shares, almost identical to Tuesday's 15.69 million.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stock gained 0.22 to 35.75.

Analysts said early buying stemmed from Wall Street's hopes for a strong, innovative economic speech from President Ford scheduled for Wednesday night. Those hopes apparently were dimmed, and the morning rally fizzled, shortly after word from the White House that the speech was not likely to unveil any new economic approaches.

The impression the speech might not be as major as hoped was further heightened by news the three television networks were not going to carry it live.

Analyst Lucien Hooper said the market had difficulty keeping its gain because of a growing volume of end-of-year tax selling.

"The market is showing good resistence to declines, but it has to work hard to rally," he commented. He said that demand for stocks is still weak and the supply situation, while not as large as before, is still "fairly persistent."

Auto stocks continued to climb for a second consecutive day in heavy trading, on the belief the government may move to perk up the recession-strapped economy.

General Motors led Big Board actives, gaining ¾ to 31¼. Ford Motor was up ⅝ to 32⅝ and Chrysler ½ to 8⅛.

Glamors also numbered among the gainers. Minnesota Mining was up 2⅛, Bausch & Lomb 1⅛, Merck 1¾ and Philip Morris 1⅜.

UAL, Inc., parent company of United Airlines, dropped ¼ to 14⅜. The company said it lost $5.3 million in November, and said a December loss is likely.

Oil issues generally advanced. Getty Oil rose 1½ to 126, Standard of Indiana 1¼ to 84¼ and Exxon ¾ to 61⅝.

Gold stocks lost ground, reflecting a drop in bullion prices overseas. ASA, Ltd., and Dome Mines each fell 1¼, and Campbell Red Lake ½.

Commodities Mostly Lower

Chicago (AP) — A selloff in the last few minutes turned farm commodity futures mostly lower on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

Profit-taking by professional traders was one reason for the selling. It appeared too, that chartists were in the selling move when the major pits failed to penetrate highs in the last hour.

The losses in wheat, corn and soybeans ranged from 2 to 7½ cents, although prices in oats, corn and wheat were uneven at the close.

CHICAGO RANGE OF PRICES

Government reports indicate corn and wheat acreage will be increased in 1975. The outside markets were mixed.

Hog Prices Rise Again

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Hogs continued their upward surge on the Omaha livestock market Wednesday.

Trading on barrows and gilts was fairly active, and the trend mostly 50-to 75 cents higher, except on weights over 290 pounds, which were termed steady to 50-cents higher.

After Tuesday's reduced cattle supply, marketings increased, and prices skidded mildly.

Slaughter steers and heifers saw moderately active trade, steers running 25-cents to mostly 50-cents lower, heifers were largely 25 cents off. The cow trade was slow, utility and commercials trending weak to 50-cents lower, cutters and canners dropping 50-cents to as much as $1.00.

The sheep runs were light again, possibly a reaction to the sharply lower prices earlier this week.

Job Loss Piles Anguish Onto Financial Problems

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — Losing your job is not just a financial problem. Unemployment can put deadly strains on personal relationships — disturbing communications between husband and wife, parents and children, family and neighbors. If left to fester, these anxieties can add enormously to a family's burdens, piling emotional anguish onto financial stress.

Jane Bryant Quinn

As a warning of what you might be up against, I asked a number of psychiatrists to describe the psychological problems that can afflict a family when a breadwinner loses his or her job. This column and the next one will explore the range of problems people are likely to encounter, and the weapons they have at their disposal to beat the terrors back.

Whenever a man or woman loses his accustomed role as provider, "a large chunk of his identity and self-esteem go down the drain," says Dr. Perry Ottenberg, psychoanalyst and associate clinical professor at the University of Pennsylvania. He feels that he's a failure, even though unemployment is not his fault. Job loss is not only a blow to his dignity, it burdens him with guilt.

Severity Varies

He will probably suffer from anxiety, anger and depression, with the severity of his reaction depending on such things as his own resilience, his past history with unemployment and his financial alternatives.

As time wears on, he may become quick to find fault or take offense. He may take his anxieties out on one of the children — "scapegoating" a particular child by criticizing everything he does. Tempers will flare.

If the unemployed is a man, he may feel keenly that he's lost status in his community (since he has no honorable household role to retreat to). Just meeting a neighbor in the daytime might humiliate him. Neighbors, in turn, might feel uneasy with him — he's a daily reminder that they, too, could be thrown out of work. (This kind of stress is less severe if a mass layoff affects an entire community.)

Anxious And Insecure

The wife of an unemployed man, even if she works, will probably grow anxious and insecure. If she's a woman who feels entitled to be taken care of, she may also become angry, says a New York psychiatrist, Dr. Donald J. Mayerson. A second paycheck or high level of savings can delay the onset of marital tension — but eventually a good relationship may fall prey to nagging, complaining and general edginess.

The simple fact that there's less money around makes everyone tense, Dr. Mayerson adds. "People can't have the things they've been used to, and don't know when they'll get them again. This scares them, but also makes them angry. They feel deprived."

Children may find it upsetting that the father they prehaps perceived as all-powerful suddenly seems unable to protect them from need. They also may feel humiliated in the presence of friends whose fathers haven't lost their jobs. Whatever the family's level of anxiety, the children will reflect it.

Guilt Feelings

Middle-class parents are especially apt to feel guilty about unemployment, according to Dr. James P. Cattell, New York psychiatrist and psychiatric consultant to the Berkshire County (Mass.) District Court. "It's a smudge on the family escutcheon," he says. Families that have had more exposure to layoffs can take it a little less personally.

Unemployment is most damaging to people who believed they were protected from it, either by seniority or education, says Dr. Barbara Hills, psychologist and chairman of the psychological education department at Salem College in North Carolina. "Losing their job threatens not only their self-esteem but their personal value system."

"The people I worry about most," Dr. Hills adds, "are those who are just establishing themselves. Perhaps a divorced woman with children who just started back to work, or someone trained in one of the Great Society programs who has successfully held a job for three or four years. These people are just getting their first full sense of confidence and worth. They've bought houses, perhaps, and started real lives for themselves. Losing their jobs could just wipe them out."

British Pound Hits Lowest Value Ever

By The Associated Press

The British pound dropped to its lowest value ever and the London stock market to a 20-year low Wednesday as oil exporting nations prepared to consider raising oil prices again.

Acting on reports that Saudi Arabia will no longer accept oil payments in British sterling, oil companies set off a wave of selling to exchange pounds for dollars. The Bank of England was reported buying sterling in an "aggressive" attempt to halt its fall.

Foreign exchange dealers feared serious implications for the pound in the days to follow.

The decline in the stock market was blamed on the currency drop, plus reports that Arab investments were being transferred from Britain to Paris and the expectation that Britain's monthly trade figures, to be released Thursday, will show a deficit of $1 billion.

The Financial Times index of 30 leading London industrial stocks had plunged 5.2 points to 151.9 near the close of rather light trading.

In relation to the dollar, the pound fell to $2.3170 from $2.3243 the day before. It dropped nearly nine centimes to 10.5075 French francs.

The franc has been rising steadily for the past few days. Against it, the dollar slipped to 4.5050 francs from Tuesday's 4.5350 in London. The West German mark, worth 1.8425 francs Tuesday, was down to 1.83 francs Wednesday.

The Bank of England said the pound had declined more than 21 per cent from its level of three years ago, compared to the trade-weighted average of 14 major currencies. In relation to the dollar alone, however, it has sometimes been lower.

Shackelford Is President Of Hovland's

Louis T. Shackelford has been elected by the Hovland-Swanson board of directors to replace the late James Swanson as president.

Shackelford, a member of the company for 16 years, is formerly a member of the board and executive vice president.

The appointment is effective immediately.

Shackelford is a member of the City-County Planning Commission, Lincoln Chamber of Commerce and Lincoln Promotion Council. He is former president of the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra board of directors and is a member of the Bryan Memorial Hospital board.

Other Hovland-Swanson officers include: William T. Farr, vice president; Merwyn A. Nyquist, secretary-treasurer; and Kathryn Druliner, assistant treasurer.

Western Electric Slates Layoff Of 146 Workers

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Friday the 13th will be an unlucky day for 146 workers at the Western Electric Omaha Works.

Western Electric officials have notified those workers that they will be getting their "pink slips."

The layoffs will reduce the workforce at the plant to 5,500, down about 800 from the first of the year.

The reduction is necessary because of a downturn in business, a spokesman said, adding that further layoffs are possible.

At its peak in 1970, the plant which manufactures telephone switching equipment and cable, employed about 7,700 workers.

Council Bluffs Outlet Eyed By Brandeis

Omaha (AP) — The J. L. Brandeis Co. of Omaha apparently plans to locate in Council Bluffs, Iowa, whether industrial revenue bonds are issued or not.

John Diesing, vice president and secretary, said Brandeis has deep roots in Council Bluffs and has felt there is a need for a retail outlet in southwest Iowa.

He said at a news conference Tuesday he can't understand why there is any opposition to Brandeis' request for approval of industrial revenue bonds to construct a new store in Council Bluffs' Midland Mall.

A new Iowa law authorizing retail stores to request such bonds became effective in July.

Diesing said Brandeis will move into the mall with or without industrial bonds. He called it a $2.5 million project and said the new store would employ 100 persons.

Rally Try Fades In Market

New York (AP) — The stock market turned tail on an early rally try Wednesday, settling instead for a small gain in moderate trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials added 1.48 to 595.35, retreating steadily through the afternoon from a buying spree that had pushed the index up 9 points at its peak.

Gainers on the New York Stock Exchange maintained a nearly 8-to-5 lead over losers, however, among the 1,822 issues traded.

NYSE volume was a moderate 15.7 million shares, almost identical to Tuesday's 15.69 million.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stock gained 0.22 to 35.75.

Analysts said early buying stemmed from Wall Street's hopes for a strong, innovative economic speech from President Ford scheduled for Wednesday night. Those hopes apparently were dimmed, and the morning rally fizzled, shortly after word from the White House that the speech was not likely to unveil any new economic approaches.

The impression the speech might not be as major as hoped was further heightened by news the three television networks were not going to carry it live.

Analyst Lucien Hooper said the market had difficulty keeping its gain because of a growing volume of end-of-year tax selling.

"The market is showing good resistence to declines, but it has to work hard to rally," he commented. He said that demand for stocks is still weak and the supply situation, while not as large as before, is still "fairly persistent."

Auto stocks continued to climb for a second consecutive day in heavy trading, on the belief the government may move to perk up the recession-strapped economy.

General Motors led Big Board actives, gaining ¾ to 31¼. Ford Motor was up ⅝ to 32⅝ and Chrysler ½ to 8⅛.

Glamors also numbered among the gainers. Minnesota Mining was up 2⅛, Bausch & Lomb 1⅛, Merck 1¾ and Philip Morris 1⅜.

UAL, Inc., parent company of United Airlines, dropped ¼ to 14⅜. The company said it lost $5.3 million in November, and said a December loss is likely.

Oil issues generally advanced. Getty Oil rose 1½ to 126, Standard of Indiana 1¼ to 84¼ and Exxon ¾ to 61⅝.

Gold stocks lost ground, reflecting a drop in bullion prices overseas. ASA, Ltd., and Dome Mines each fell 1¼, and Campbell Red Lake ½.

Commodities Mostly Lower

Chicago (AP) — A selloff in the last few minutes turned farm commodity futures mostly lower on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

Profit-taking by professional traders was one reason for the selling. It appeared too, that chartists were in the selling move when the major pits failed to penetrate highs in the last hour.

The losses in wheat, corn and soybeans ranged from 2 to 7½ cents, although prices in oats, corn and wheat were uneven at the close.

Hog Prices Rise Again

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Hogs continued their upward surge on the Omaha livestock market Wednesday.

Trading on barrows and gilts was fairly active, and the trend mostly 50-to 75 cents higher, except on weights over 290-pounds, which were termed steady to 50-cents higher.

After Tuesday's reduced cattle supply, marketings increased, and prices skidded mildly.

Slaughter steers and heifers saw moderately active trade, steers running 25-cents to mostly 50-cents lower, heifers were largely 25 cents off. The cow trade was slow, utility and commercials trending weak to 50-cents lower, cutters and canners dropping 50-cents to as much as $1.00.

The sheep runs were light again, possibly a reaction to the sharply lower prices earlier this week.

Cipriano Praises Willis As NU Return Home

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Everyone knows Jerry Fort is an all-Big Eight conference guard. But Nebraska just may have another all-conference guard beside him.

"Steve Willis really played outstanding for us on the road trip," said NU basketball coach Joe Cipriano, who arrived in Lincoln with the Huskers for the first time since last Thursday. "Not only is he a fine playmaker, but he's been really playing great defense.

"He always give us a great effort," he added. "We've been real pleased with him."

Willis, a junior transfer from North Idaho College, was the Huskers' leading scorer in a 69-56 victory Tuesday night at North Texas State. More importantly, he was the driving force in Nebraska's rallying from a 50-46 deficit.

The 5-11 playmaker from Indianapolis tallied 10 of NU's final 23 points as Nebraska improved its season's record to 3-1. The Huskers host Wichita State at the NU Coliseum at 7:35 p.m. on Saturday.

Cipriano also praised sophomore forward Rickey Harris for his efforts on the three-game trip which saw NU down Long Beach State and lose to Arizona State in the Sun Devil Classic.

"I was pleased with Harris' effort especially in the second half against North Texas," Cipriano said. "He had some key rebounds for us and he's definitely going to see more action for us."

Cipriano, however, was less than pleased with certain aspects of the trip.

"We didn't play very consistenly at Arizona State," he said. "We looked all right the second half (In an 83-62 defeat in the Sun Devil championship game to ASU). We scored better and gave a better effort in the second half against ASU and against North Texas.

"Mentally, we didn't seem ready to play against Arizona State," he said. "I'm sure winning that big game against Long Beach (67-55) had something to do with it. And ASU put a lot of pressure on us since they're a real good club (still undefeated and bidding for a high national ranking).

"Still, our team is improving and we will keep improving as the season goes along," he said.

Nevertheless, Cipriano is glad the Huskers have two straight home games (San Jose State invades the NU Collsuem next Tuesday night) before participating in the Indiana Classic.

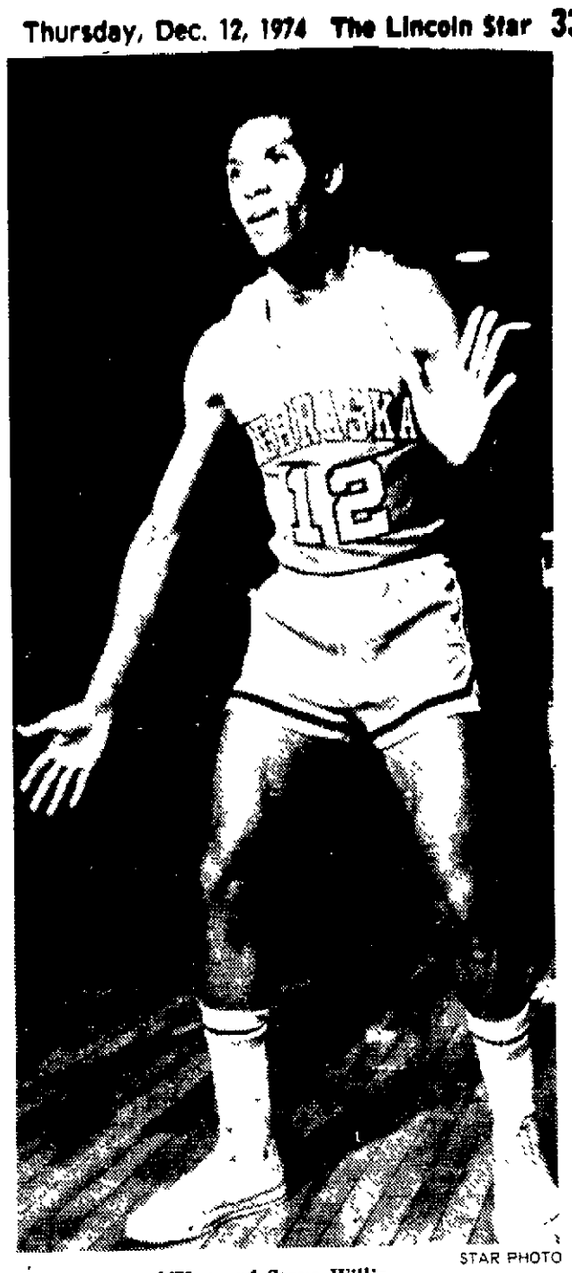

"Sure, we're glad to be home after spending so much time on the road," he said. "But you know we really didn't play very well when we were home (in downing South Dakota State 87-72 on Nov. 30).

"We ought to play a little more relaxed when we're at home, but it's hard to know how this club will react," he added.

Despite owning only a 2-2 record, Wichita State has been most impressive. In fact, cautions Cipriano, the Shockers may be as good or even better than Vanderbilt (a Dec. 23 Lincoln visitor).

"They were ahead of Arizona State by 16 at one point (before losing, 72-70, at home on Monday night)," he said. "And they were only five down with four minutes to play with UCLA before a controversial call helped UCLA (which went on to an 85-74 victory on Nov. 29 at Los Angeles)."

Bailey Proves With Unanimous Decision

By RANDY EICKHOFF
Star Sports Writer

There was only one question still remaining after the amateur fights at Pershing Auditorium Wednesday night: When will Lou Bailey, Jr. turn pro?

Bailey, Midwest Golden Gloves champion, met Southeast District Golden Gloves titlist Ben Berry and thrilled the crowd of 706 fans with a superlative boxing demonstration en route to winning an unanimous decision over his heavier foe.

Akers Said Pick

LARAMIE, WYO. (UPI) — Fred Akers, the top assistant to University of Texas coach Darrell Royal, is to be named head football coach at the University of Wyoming Thursday.

Berry, 182, tried to carry the fight to the dancing Bailey, 176, but was stymied time and time again with lightening-like jabs and left hooks that steadily-piled up points for the Omahan throughout the first and second rounds. Then in the third, thunder struck.

Cautiously, Berry tried to work inside of Bailey where he could use his weight to greater advantage, but suddenly Bailey countered with a left hook that dropped Bailey for an eight-count. Dazed, the local fighter tried to comeback, but Bailey richoceted around the ring, savagely pounding Berry in the process.

"He's one of the toughest fighters I've faced," Berry said after the bout. "I've beaten him before, but he's really improved. Yes, that was a knock down . . . he caught me with a left hook.

"He's hitting harder now, I think," he continued. "He's hard to catch in that ring." Then he walked over to Bailey and shook his hand. "I want a rematch for the next smoker," he said.

Bailey, who electrified the crowd with his Ali shuffle, laughed when questioned about the fight.

"He's not good enough," he said mischieveously, thrilling the fans surrounding him. "He's too wild and doesn't hit hard enough. I'm too fast, too good and too much for him to handle.

"No," he said. "He didn't give me any trouble at all in there. I did pretty much what I wanted. I wanted to use my left book and I guess you could say I did pretty good with it. I dropped him didn't I?" He laughed and threw his robe at his father, famous heavyweight contender Lou, Sr. "How about that, huh?"

Bailey said he would probably turn professional in two years and grinned when his following clamored for an earlier date.

"No, I'll need a couple more years," he said. "But I'll fight anybody who comes along in the meantime. He (Berry) wants a rematch on the 28th (next smoker) but it'll go the same way. I'm not too sure if it'll go three rounds though."

In the final bout, No. 20 of the evening, Ron Stutzman won a decision from Stan Holan of Norfolk in a roundly-booed decision. Stutzman fought the last 1½ rounds at a great disadvantage — he reportedly snapped a tendon in his right arm when he caught Holan's elbow in a clinch.

The pre-matched feature bout between Don Johnson and Bruce Strauss of Omaha was canceled when Strauss received a cut under his eye during training and was refused by the ring doctor.

Klatt Leads Knights To Win

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Bill Klatt scored his second hat trick of the season as the Omaha Knights surged to their eighth straight Central Hockey League victory Thursday night, 6-4, at the expense of the Tulsa Oilers.

The Knights salted away the victory with a three-goal burst in 3½ minutes at the start of the final period. Klatt tallied his third off the night between goals by linemate Guy Chouinnard.

After Klatt scored the only goal of the first period, Tulsa rallied to tie the game three times in 6½ minutes in a hectic second period.

Don Liesemer's Tulsa goal was followed 52 seconds later by Klatt's second, on an Omaha power play.

Black Hills Hits Chadron State

Spearfish, S.D. (AP) — Black Hills College of Spearfish led throughout the game and defeated Chadron State College Wednesday night, 81-74.

The Eagles, whose record fell to 1-3, trailed 37-30 at the half. Black Hills record is now 4-3.

Non-Lincoln Schools Challenge In East I-80

Move over Lincoln, here comes the rest of the Eastern I-80 Conference, particularly Ralston.

When the Eastern I-80 whisked off the launching pad this fall in football, Lincoln made Ralston, Millard and Papillion virtual pushovers.

The four Capital City schools won 11 of their 12 league games against the three suburban Omaha schools.

The question thus was raised: Do the three non-Lincoln teams belong? Can they compete with any consistency?

Although that question remains to be resolved in basketball, the suburban Omaha schools intend to turn things around in the Eastern I-80.

Ralston, Papillion and Millard opened their respective basketball seasons last weekend with a pair of victories apiece.

That, coupled with disappointing debuts for Lincoln Southeast, Lincoln High and Lincoln East, could signal a change in trend for Eastern I-80 basketball.

Ralston coach Gary Johnson hopes so. His Rams were the most impressive, securing a 48-46 win at Columbus and a 43-39 triumph at North Platte.

Johnson espouses the power of positive thinking. On his preseason basketball information sheet, he predicted his team would win both the Eastern I-80 and Apollo Conference championships.

"I did because I think we're good enough to win both leagues," says Johnson. "The way we kept our poise at North Platte gave our kids a bunch of confidence. They think they can beat anyone."

Johnson claims that Ralston's holding North Platte to 14 second half points on the road "was as good a performance as I've gotten from a team in 16 years of coaching."

The former Imperial and McCook coach has preached confidence and poise to his troops since they finished 9-11 last season.

"It was a very disappointing season for us," admits Johnson. "We didn't improve. We lost a lot of close games or we could have been 15-5.

"So we decided to work as hard as we could and as much as we could during the off season," adds Johnson.

Ralston players competed in an Omaha-area college league on Sunday nights and in a Metro prep league on Thursday nights during the summer.

"We learned to get physical from those experiences. It's made a world of difference," maintains Johnson. "We're not heavy, but we're around 190 pounds, strong for our size and real aggressive."

The Rams, however, are tall. Starters include 6-6½ Gary Grobeck, 6-6 Greg Craft, 6-4 Mike Rea, 6-1½ Mike Kealy and 6-0 Mark Hiner. All except Kealy are returning starters.

In addition to playing in the summer leagues, 10 of Ralston's current 12-man varsity team went to California Lutheran College in Thousand Oaks last July and August to participate in a UCLA basketball camp.

"Johnny Wooden was there every day all day long, conducting a lot of mass fundamental drills," relates Johnson.

"Our players raffled off sides of beef and sold concessions at the Metro All-Star game to help earn their way," points out Johnson. "They learned and grew closer from the experience."

Johnson also expects Papillion to offer a strong challenge against Lincoln in the Eastern I-80. The Monarchs opened the season with a 30-point victory over South Sioux City (84-54) and a 13-point triumph at Kearney (80-67).

Millard's wins were 65-64 over Grand Island and 49-31 over Omaha Bryan. Ralston plays Omaha South Saturday night, then hosts Lincoln East the following Friday. It could be a key battle for conference laurels.

In games involving Lincoln teams this weekend, it's:

Kearney (0-2) v. Lincoln Northeast (1-0), Friday night, East High Gym — The Rockets need this one to set up an early-season showdown at Papillion the following Friday.

Omaha Central (2-0) at Lincoln East (0-1), Saturday night — The Spartans shelled Central at East two years ago. The defending state Class A champions still remember it.

Fairbury (2-0) at Lincoln Pius X (1-0), Saturday night — The Bolts rate the home court edge, but they'll have to play a bunch better than they did against Milford.

Lincoln Southeast (0-1) at Fremont (1-0), Saturday night — The Knights have to be better than they showed against Northeast last week.

Lincoln High (0-2) v. Omaha Benson (1-0), Saturday night at Omaha Northwest — The Bunnies own a 27-point win over Council Bluffs TJ. They may have too much height and too much offense for the Links to handle.

Dickey, Studenski Top Gymnasts

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

A "blue chipper" in gymnastics is a top high school performer that has natural talent and exhibits a promising skill in the sport.

Neither Pete Studenski nor Steve Dickey were "blue chippers" when they were graduated from high school. But the two Nebraska gymnasts are tops in the nation now.

Studenski, one of two Husker seniors is considered "one of the most innovative ring men in the U.S.," according to Husker coach Francis Allen.

"He does things that others talk about. If I say let's try this or that, he will. He firmly believes in the gymnastics theory that there is always a better way to do something, given the opportunity," Allen continued.

"Last year he came into his own and this year he has been on his routines all season. It's rewarding for us, because all the high school kids now idolize him," Allen said.

Studenski finished first in the still rings with the meet's highest score in the Windy City Invitational at Chicago last week in both the compulsories and optionals after winning the Big Eight title just two weeks before.

Studenski feels that a basic change in his routines has made the difference in his performances this year. "I use more straight arm work, for the big swings, but I've been doing the same routine since my junior year in high school six years ago, when I took up the sport," said Studenski.

Steve Dickey

"It's just a matter of doing the same things over and over," Studenski added. "Until you get all the mistakes out and do it right."

"I'd never do anything in a meet that I hadn't done in practice, but I never do the exact same thing twice," he said.

Dickey, a junior side horse specialist agrees, "You make the mistakes in practice. I've become familiar with my routine so now I'm in a position to progress."

Dickey, who finished first in the side horse in the Midwest Open in Chicago two weeks ago and fourth at the Windy City Invite last week, has consistently defeated Oklahoma's Goeff Rieder, a high school all-American and Iowa State's Don Young, a highly touted performer.

"It takes a long time to develop. A little natural ability helps but most of the success comes with hard work," said Dickey.

"When you've been around a couple of years you've seen just about every trick that can be done. But the difference comes in how they are done according to style and technique," said Dickey.

Both quickly added that the improved mental attitude has been a major factor in Nebraska's recent success.

"I was around when we weren't so good," Studenski said," And then about Slick's (Dickey) freshman year, we started to become a team. Before that we were just a collection of individuals."

"The difference is incredible," added Dickey, "People started coming up to us after the Midwest Open and asking about our workouts." People are starting to show an interest and it is really great."

"We used to get maybe five people and a dog walking through on their way to somewhere. But now we have a real following. It's good to know somebody's watching." Studenski said.

Studenski and Dickey are both national caliber competitors but some of their stiffest competition comes from the NU squad.

Freshman Larry Gerard, who is an all-arounder and strong in the rings, and freshman Mike Cosgrove is a sidehorse specialist with great potential are both scoring just behind Dickey and Studenski.

"We have kind of a friendly competition between us but we also have different styles. So we learn from each other while improving our team scores," Studenski said.

Klatt Leads Knights Win

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Bill Klatt scored his second hat trick of the season as the Omaha Knights surged to their eighth straight Central Hockey League victory Thursday night, 6-4, at the expense of the Tulsa Oilers.

The Knights salted away the victory with a three-goal burst in 3½ minutes at the start of the final period. Klatt tallied his third off the night between goals by linemate Guy Chouinnard.

After Klatt scored the only goal of the first period, Tulsa rallied to tie the game three times in 6½ minutes in a hectic second period.

Don Liesemer's Tulsa goal was followed 52 seconds later by Klatt's second, on an Omaha power play.

Non-Lincoln Schools Challenge In East I-80

Move over Lincoln, here comes the rest of the Eastern I-80 Conference, particularly Ralston.

When the Eastern I-80 whisked off the launching pad this fall in football, Lincoln made Ralston, Millard and Papillion virtual pushovers.

The four Capital City schools won 11 of their 12 league games against the three suburban Omaha schools.

The question thus was raised: Do the three non-Lincoln teams belong? Can they compete with any consistency?

Although that question remains to be resolved in basketball, the suburban Omaha schools intend to turn things around in the Eastern I-80.

Ralston, Papillion and Millard opened their respective basketball seasons last weekend with a pair of victories apiece.

That, coupled with disappointing debuts for Lincoln Southeast, Lincoln High and Lincoln East, could signal a change in trend for Eastern I-80 basketball.

Ralston coach Gary Johnson hopes so. His Rams were the most impressive, securing a 48-46 win at Columbus and a 43-39 triumph at North Platte.

Johnson espouses the power of positive thinking. On his preseason basketball information sheet, he predicted his team would win both the Eastern I-80 and Apollo Conference championships.

"I did because I think we're good enough to win both leagues," says Johnson. "The way we kept our poise at North Platte gave our kids a bunch of confidence. They think they can beat anyone."

Johnson claims that Ralston's holding North Platte to 14 second half points on the road "was as good a performance as I've gotten from a team in 16 years of coaching."

The former Imperial and McCook coach has preached confidence and poise to his troops since they finished 9-11 last season.

"It was a very disappointing season for us," admits Johnson. "We didn't improve. We lost a lot of close games or we could have been 15-5.

"So we decided to work as hard as we could and as much as we could during the off season," adds Johnson.

Ralston players competed in an Omaha-area college league on Sunday nights and in a Metro prep league on Thursday nights during the summer.

"We learned to get physical from those experiences. It's made a world of difference," maintains Johnson. "We're not heavy, but we're around 190 pounds, strong for our size and real aggressive."

The Rams, however, are tall. Starters include 6-6½ Gary Grobeck, 6-6 Greg Craft, 6-4 Mike Rea, 6-1½ Mike Kealy and 6-0 Mark Hiner. All except Kealy are returning starters.

In addition to playing in the summer leagues, 10 of Ralston's current 12-man varsity team went to California Lutheran College in Thousand Oaks last July and August to participate in a UCLA basketball camp.

"Johnny Wooden was there every day all day long, conducting a lot of mass fundamental drills," relates Johnson.

"Our players raffled off sides of beef and sold concessions at the Metro All-Star game to help earn their way," points out Johnson. "They learned and grew closer from the experience."

Johnson also expects Papillion to offer a strong challenge against Lincoln in the Eastern I-80. The Monarchs opened the season with a 30-point victory over South Sioux City (84-54) and a 13-point triumph at Kearney (80-67).

Millard's wins were 65-64 over Grand Island and 49-31 over Omaha Bryan. Ralston plays Omaha South Saturday night, then hosts Lincoln East the following Friday. It could be a key battle for conference laurels.

In games involving Lincoln teams this weekend, it's:

Kearney (0-2) v. Lincoln Northeast (1-0), Friday night, East High Gym — The Rockets need this one to set up an early-season showdown at Papillion the following Friday.

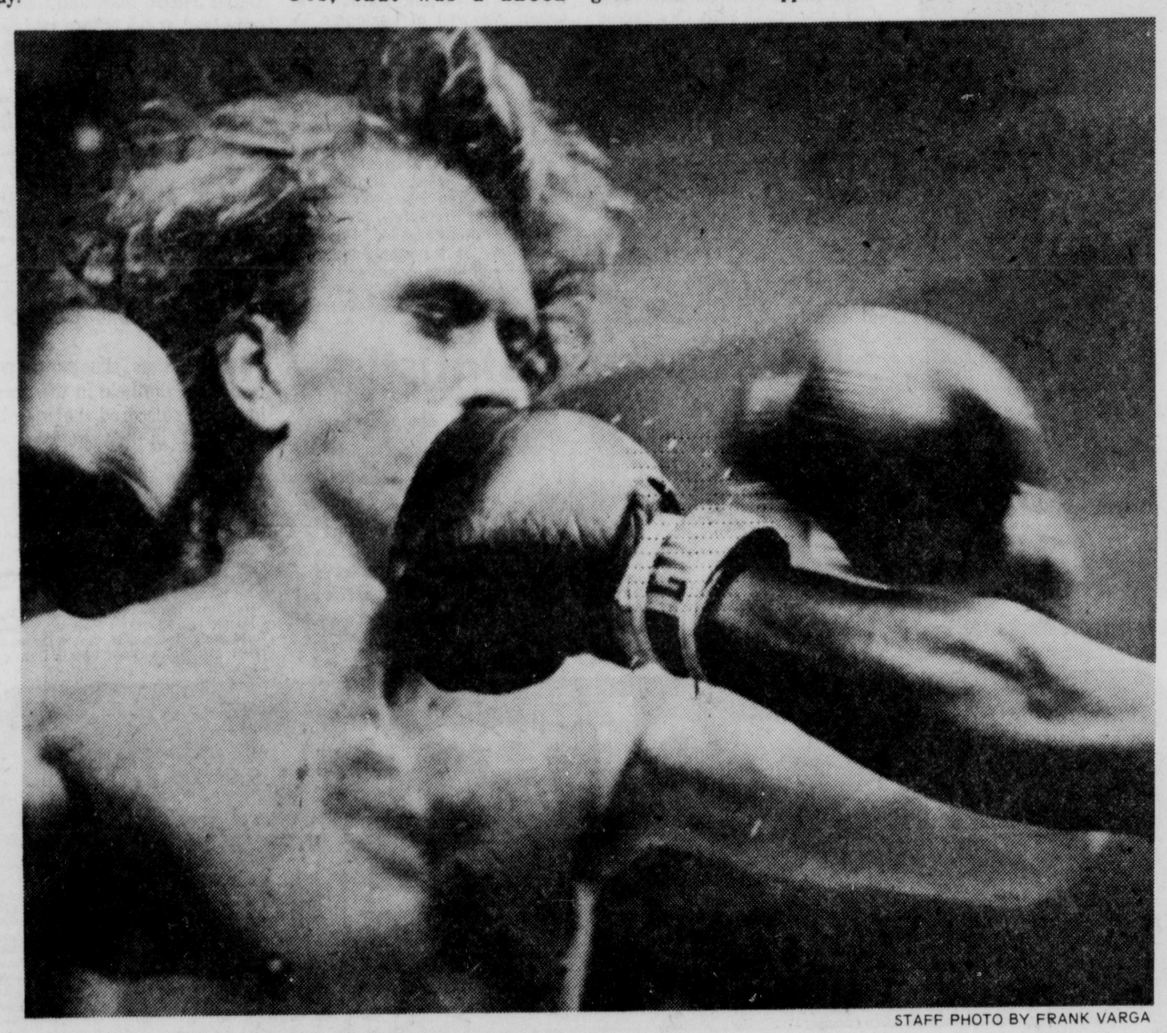

Omaha Central (2-0) at Lincoln East (0-1), Saturday night — The Spartans shelled Central at East two years ago. The defending state Class A champions still remember it.

Fairbury (2-0) at Lincoln Pius X (1-0), Saturday night — The 'Bolts rate the home court edge, but they'll have to play a bunch better than they did against Milford.

Lincoln Southeast (0-1) at Fremont (1-0), Saturday night — The Knights have to be better than they showed against Northeast last week.

Lincoln High (0-2) v. Omaha Benson (1-0), Saturday night at Omaha Northwest — The Bunnies own a 27-point win over Council Bluffs TJ. They may have too much height and too much offense for the Links to handle.

Dickey, Studenski Top Gymnasts

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

A "blue chipper" in gymnastics is a top high school performer that has natural talent and exhibits a promising skill in the sport.

Neither Pete Studenski nor Steve Dickey were "blue chippers" when they were graduated from high school. But the two Nebraska gymnasts are tops in the nation now.

Studenski, one of two Husker seniors is considered "one of the most innovative ring men in the U.S.," according to Husker coach Francis Allen.

"He does things that others talk about. If I say let's try this or that, he will. He firmly believes in the gymnastics theory that there is always a better way to do something, given the opportunity," Allen continued.

"Last year he came into his own and this year he has been on his routines all season. It's rewarding for us, because all the high school kids now idolize him," Allen said.

Studenski finished first in the still rings with the meet's highest score in the Windy City Invitational at Chicago last week in both the compulsories and optionals after winning the Big Eight title just two weeks before.

Studenski feels that a basic change in his routines has made the difference in his performances this year. "I use more straight arm work, for the big swings, but I've been doing the same routine since my junior year in high school six years ago, when I took up the sport," said Studenski.

Steve Dickey

"It's just a matter of doing the same things over and over," Studenski added, "Until you get all the mistakes out and do it right."

"I'd never do anything in a meet that I hadn't done in practice, but I never do the exact same thing twice," he said.

Dickey, a junior side horse specialist agrees, "You make the mistakes in practice. I've become familar with my routine so now I'm in a position to progress."

Dickey, who finished first in the side horse in the Midwest Open in Chicago two weeks ago and fourth at the Windy City Invite last week, has consistently defeated Oklahoma's Goeff Rieder, a high school all-American and Iowa State's Don Young, a highly touted performer.

"It takes a long time to develop. A little natural ability helps but most of the success comes with hard work," said Dickey.

"When you've been around a couple of years you've seen just about every trick that can be done. But the difference comes in how they are done according to style and technique," said Dickey.

Both quickly added that the improved mental attitude has been a major factor in Nebraska's recent success.

"I was around when we weren't so good," Studenski said," And then about Slick's (Dickey) freshman year, we started to become a team. Before that we were just a collection of individuals."

"The difference is incredible," added Dickey, "People started coming up to us after the Midwest Open and asking about our workouts." People are starting to show an interest and it is really great."

"We used to get maybe five people and a dog walking through on their way to somewhere. But now we have a real following. It's good to know somebody's watching." Studenski said.

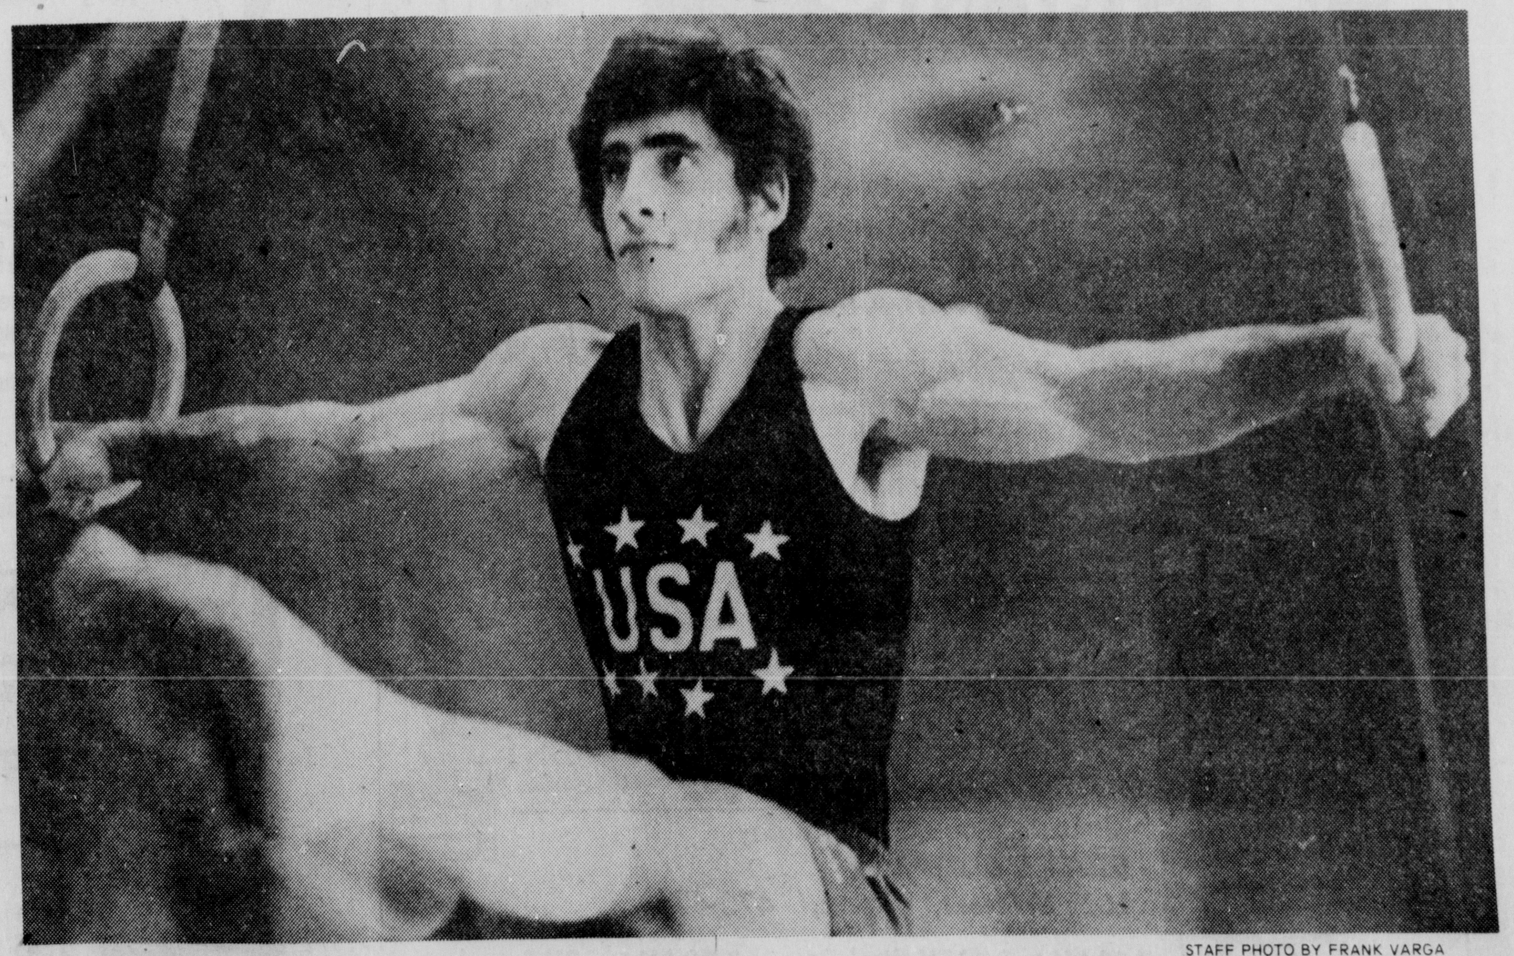

Studenski and Dickey are both national caliber competitors but some of their stiffest competition comes from the NU squad.

Freshman Larry Gerard, who is an all-arounder and strong in the rings, and freshman Mike Cosgrove is a sidehorse specialist with great potential are both scoring just behind Dickey and Studenski.

"We have kind of a friendly competition between us but we also have different styles. So we learn from each other while improving our team scores," Studenski said.

"It takes a big adjustment from high school to college and our freshmen are really coming along," added Dickey.

The Nebraska gymnasts invade Denver for the Rocky Mountain Open on Friday and Saturday to face Iowa State, New Mexico, Arizona, Arizona State, Colorado and eight other schools.

Wilderness Action Underway

A couple of notes today:

President Ford recently added a list of proposed wilderness areas for inclusion under the federal Wilderness Act. Included in the areas to be studied under the 10-year program for formulating national wilderness areas is Nebraska's Fort Niobrara Wildlife Refuge near Valentine.

The 4,635-acre Fort Niobrara Refuge joined 37 other such proposals sent by President Ford to Congress for final approval. It now joins the Valentine Wildlife Refuge and the Crescent Lake Wildlife Refuge which were sent to Congress by former President Nixon last year.

The Valentine and Crescent Lake proposals were made in November, 1972, and were followed in June, 1973, by Fort Niobrara. Valentine offers some 16,317 acres and Crescent Lake, north of Oshkosh, some 14,502 acres for wilderness areas.

The Wilderness Act of 1964 directed all federal agencies to view their lands for possible inclusion into the wilderness program. Should lands qualify, all man-made structures (i.e. fences, windmills, roads) would be removed and the area would be permitted to return to its natural state with a minimum of maintenance or leased grazing.

Nebraska currently has no wilderness area. Such an area would not only provide an ideal setting for wildlife, but would be open for backpacking, hiking, camping, nature study and other related outdoor activities. No motor vehicles would be permitted into the areas. A refreshing change. It's up to Congress now.

Tough Act to Follow

Highly skilled obedience trained dogs aren't so hard to find these days. But highly skilled obedience trained English bulldogs are another story. As one authority puts it, "There just ain't many of 'em around."

And finding a highly skilled obedience trained English bulldog celebrity which allegedly is a ham before live audiences is almost too much to ask for. Hold the phone. The folks at Drake University in Des Moines, Ia., found one It lives in Lincoln, Neb.

"R.G. Ivy, C.D.X." is just such an animal. Owner Ms. Kathy Quist of Lincoln has instilled the finesse in Ivy to become the third rated obedience trained English bulldog in all of America.

So when Drake University, nicknamed the Bulldogs by the way, wanted an obedience dog of the proper breed name for a halftime performance during a future basketball game, Ms. Quist was contacted.

When she and Ivy make the trip to Des Moines in early January, they may be the first English bulldog-trainer act on record to accept an offer to make a 300-mile journey for one Bulldog to another. It'd be a tough act to follow.

Golf Course May Cost Less

Lincoln's new 18-hole Mahoney Golf Course, scheduled to be constructed at the city's extreme northeast corner next year, may cost less than originally anticipated.

Bids opened at city hall Wednesday by City Purchasing Agent Wayne Harvey included a proposal from one contractor to build the course and install a sprinkler system for $296,600.

The city Parks and Recreation Dept. has budgeted $450,000 for the entire Mahoney Golf Course project which will include other equipment and facilities in addition to the actual course and water distribution system.

Ten different construction companies submitted bids for either the course construction, the sprinkler system, or both.

Parks and Recreation Director Don Smith said following Wednesday's bid opening that a decision on which proposal or combination of proposals to accept would probably be made by Thursday.

The golf course will be built on property located north of Adams St. between 70th and 84th Sts.

Construction is scheduled to begin next spring with a deadline for finishing the course now set for Sept. 15, 1975.

Money to pay for the project is coming from the Golfers Capital Improvement Fund, in addition to state and federal sources.

Smith said 75% of the $450,000 budgeted by the city will be reimbursed by the federal government under funding agreements with the federal Bureau of Reclamation for the recreation project.

The bids opened Wednesday were:

Gundersons, Inc., Rapid City, S.D., $189,600 base bid, $107,000 sprinkler system, $296,600 total

Flott-Tomanio, Lincoln, $283,271.30 base bid, $148,631 sprinkler system, $431,902.30 total.

Watson Golf Course Construction Co., Lincoln, $179,995 base bid, $125,939 sprinkler system, $305,934 total.

Moore Golf Inc., Culpepper, Va., $264,000 base bid, $142,000 sprinkler system, $406,000 total.

Van Buskirk Construction, Sioux City, Ia., $309,000 base bid, $109,000 sprinkler system, $418,000 total.

Wadsworth Construction, Plainfield, Ill., $398,080 base bid, $148,000 sprinkler system, $546,080 total.

Hank Buis Construction, Lincoln, $450,000 base bid, no bid on the sprinkler system.

E. J. Bousquet & Sons, Lincoln, no base bid, $119,000 sprinkler system.

Nebraska Sprinkler Co., Omaha, no base bid, $129,873.45 sprinkler system

Western Sprinkler Corp., Oklahoma City, Okla., no base bid, $105,995 sprinkler system.

Loyola Blasts NWU, 101-66

CHICAGO (AP) — Loyola of Chicago raced to an easy 101-66 victory over Nebraska Wesleyan in a collge basketball game Wednesday night.

The Ramblers broke the game open early, when Tony Parker hit six points in a row to pull Loyola away from a 28-23 lead that they had held midway in the first half.

Loyola built the lead to 48-35 at halftime, and was never in touble in the second half.

The victory boosted Loyola to 3-1, while Nebraska Wesleyan is now 3-2 for the season.

Indiana Defeats Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — A 10-point burst in the first half and the shooting of forward Scott May and center Kent Benson propelled third-ranked Indiana to a 94-84 college basketball victory over No. 11 Notre Dame Wednesday night.

The 6-foot-7 May, the Hoosiers' leading scorer with a 25-point average, scored 22 points, and Benson, a 6-11 sophomore, tossed in 19 to offset Irish forward Adrian Dantley's game high of 32 points.

Indiana's Steve Green and Notre Dame's Billy Paterno added 17 each.

The loss was the first in five games for the Irish and snapped a 24-game winning string at home. The Hoosiers, winning their third game against a ranked opponent in one week, remained unbeaten in four games this season.

Notre Dame, a smaller team, tried to keep the Hoosiers to the outside, but Indiana was hitting. Indiana raced from a 13-11 lead to 23-11 and was never seriously threatened after that.

Indiana had a 47-34 lead at the half and widened it to as many as 18 points in the final period before Notre Dame made a final surge that brought the Irish within eight.

Dantley was virtually the entire Notre Dame offense in the first half as he scored 17 points in that period.

Benson got Indiana off to a good start, scoring the first two baskets of the game before Paterno tallied for the Irish. Notre Dame battled back and took its only lead at 6-5 before two baskets by Green put the Hoosiers ahead to stay.

Notre Dame could pull no closer than six points late in the opening period before Indiana scored another eight in a row to take its widest lead of the period, 47-33, with half a minute remaining.

Indiana reserve John Laskowski gave the Hoosiers a big lift with 10 points in the first half.

The Hoosiers, shooting 50 per cent from the field in the opening half, outscored the Irish by 18 points in that period.

KSU Assistant Drops As Candidate For Post

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Bob Weber got tired of the indecision and asked Kansas State University not to consider him further for its head football coaching job.

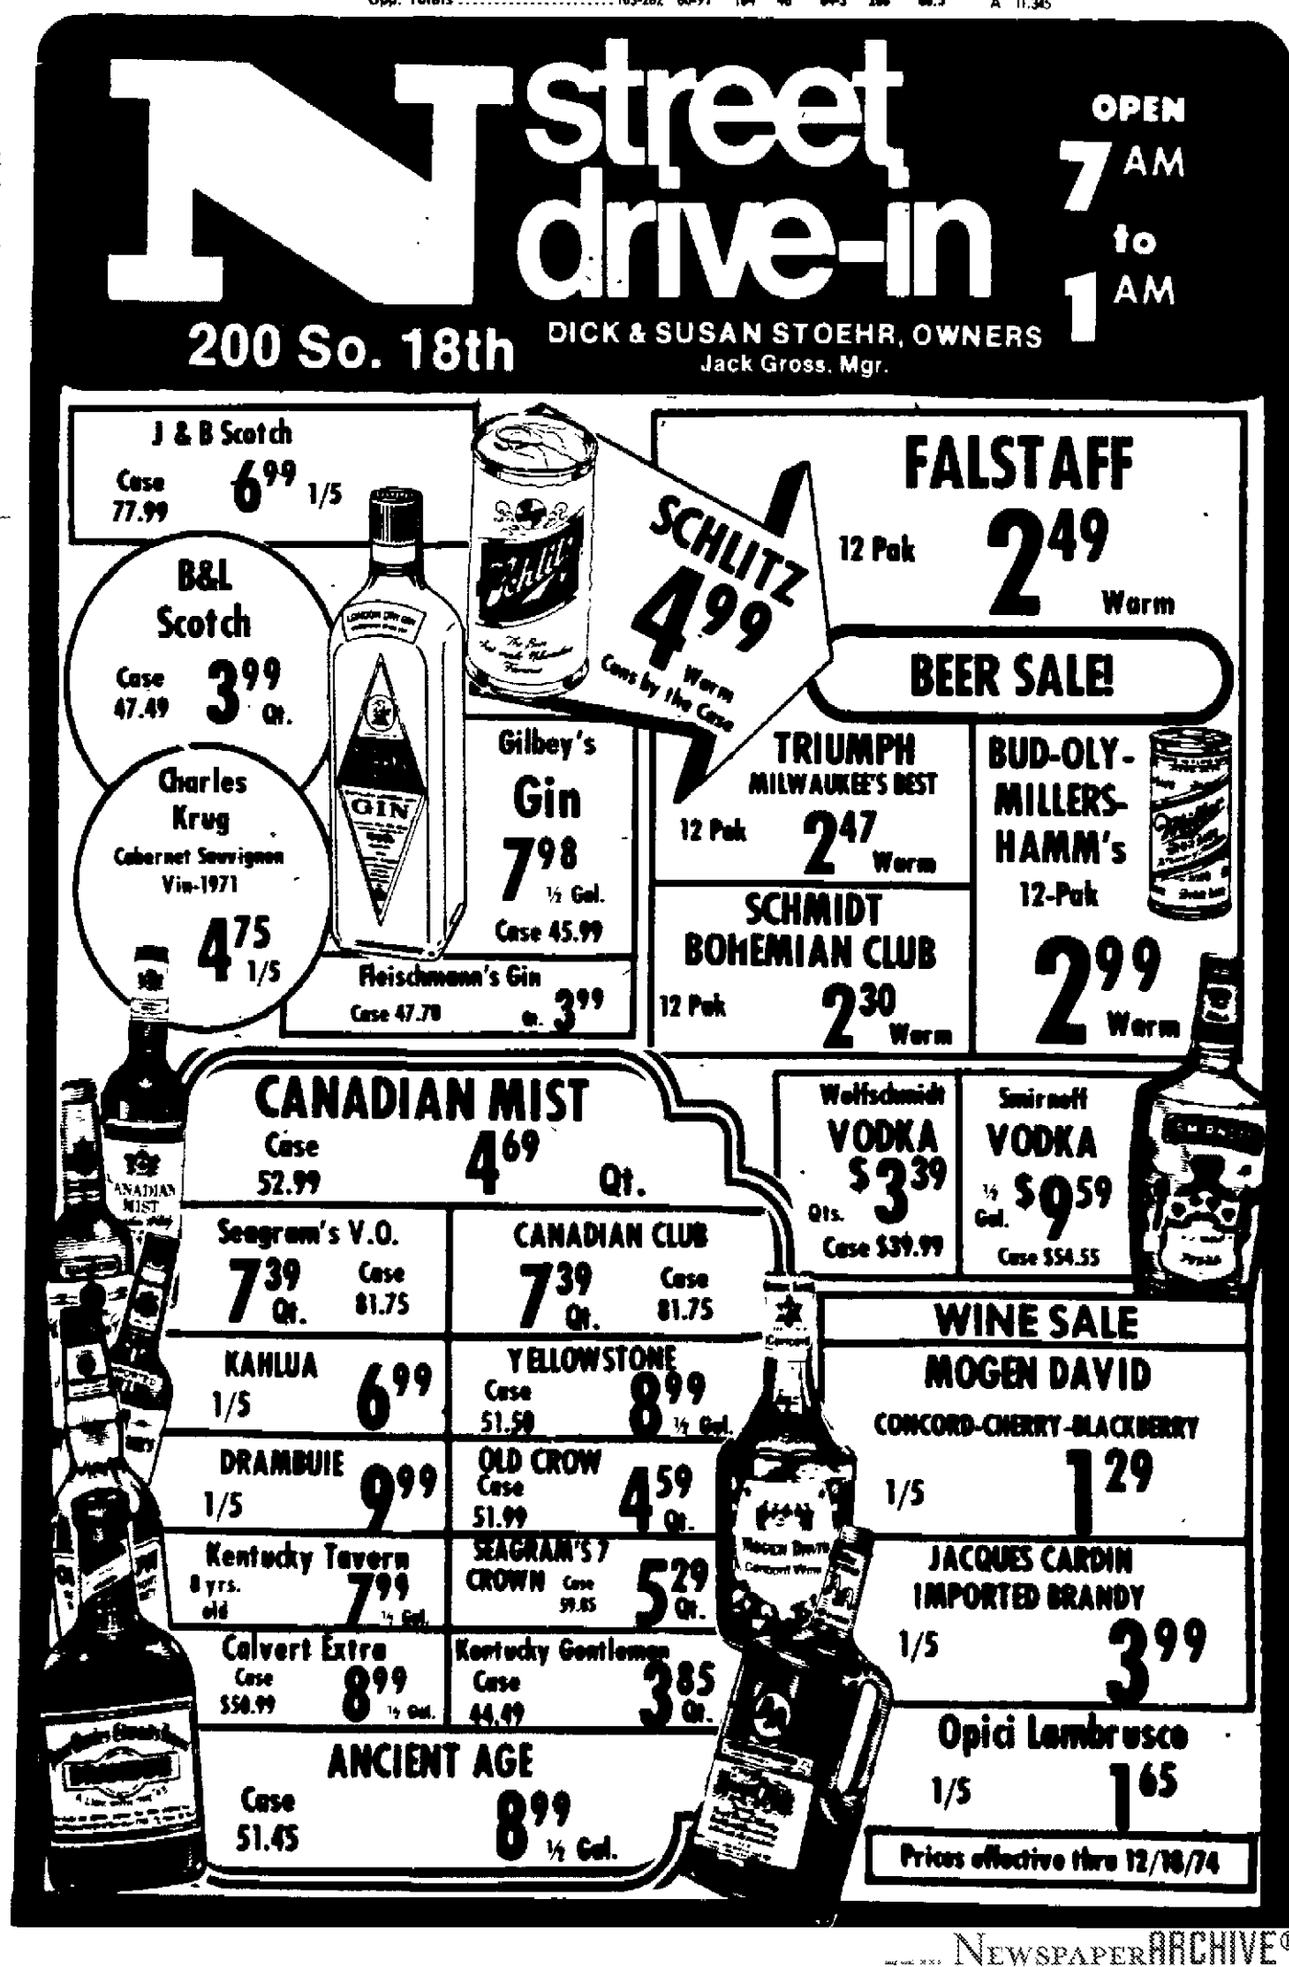

Weber has been offensive coordinator the past two seasons for Vince Gibson. His request that his name be removed from the list of possible successors to Gibson was announced Wednesday by Ernie Barrett, K-State's director of athletics.

"Bob based his decision on our continued efforts to find a replacement, including the fact we still are interviewing candidates," Barrett said.

Gibson quit late in November after nine years as head coach. His Wildcats had a mostly miserable season until they upset Colorado in the final game.

Weber was among the first to come under consideration as Gibson's successor. Larry Lacewell, an assistant at Oklahoma, and LeRoy Montgomery, an assistant at Arkansas, both publicly withdrew as candidates after being interviewed.

Wilderness Action Underway

A couple of notes today:

President Ford recently added a list of proposed wilderness areas for inclusion under the federal Wilderness Act. Included in the areas to be studied under the 10-year program for formulating national wilderness areas is Nebraska's Fort Niobrara Wildlife Refuge near Valentine.

The 4,635-acre Fort Niobrara Refuge joined 37 other such proposals sent by President Ford to Congress for final approval. It now joins the Valentine Wildlife Refuge and the Crescent Lake Wildlife Refuge which were sent to Congress by former President Nixon last year.

The Valentine and Crescent Lake proposals were made in November, 1972, and were followed in June, 1973, by Fort Niobrara. Valentine offers some 16,317 acres and Crescent Lake, north of Oshkosh, some 14,502 acres for wilderness areas.

The Wilderness Act of 1964 directed all federal agencies to view their lands for possible inclusion into the wilderness program. Should lands qualify, all man-made structures (i.e. fences, windmills, roads) would be removed and the area would be permitted to return to its natural state with a minimum of maintenance or leased grazing.

Nebraska currently has no wilderness area. Such an area would not only provide an ideal setting for wildlife, but would be open for backpacking, hiking, camping, nature study and other related outdoor activities. No motor vehicles would be permitted into the areas. A refreshing change. It's up to Congress now.

Tough Act to Follow

Highly skilled obedience trained dogs aren't so hard to find these days. But highly skilled obedience trained English bulldogs are another story. As one authority puts it, "There just ain't many of 'em around."

And finding a highly skilled obedience trained English bulldog celebrity which allegedly is a ham before live audiences is almost too much to ask for. Hold the phone. The folks at Drake University in Des Moines, Ia., found one. It lives in Lincoln, Neb.

"R.G. Ivy, C.D.X." is just such an animal. Owner Ms. Kathy Quist of Lincoln has instilled the finesse in Ivy to become the third rated obedience trained English bulldog in all of America.

So when Drake University, nicknamed the Bulldogs by the way, wanted an obedience dog of the proper breed name for a half-time performance during a future basketball game, Ms. Quist was contacted.

When she and Ivy make the trip to Des Moines in early January, they may be the first English bulldog-trainer act on record to accept an offer to make a 300-mile journey for one Bulldog to another. It'd be a tough act to follow.

Golf Course May Cost Less

Lincoln's new 18-hole Mahoney Golf Course, scheduled to be constructed at the city's extreme northeast corner next year, may cost less than originally anticipated.

Bids opened at city hall Wednesday by City Purchasing Agent Wayne Harvey included a proposal from one contractor to build the course and install a sprinkler system for $296,600.

The city Parks and Recreation Dept. has budgeted $450,000 for the entire Mahoney Golf Course project which will include other equipment and facilities in addition to the actual course and water distribution system.

Ten different construction companies submitted bids for either the course construction, the sprinkler system, or both.

Parks and Recreation Director Don Smith said following Wednesday's bid opening that a decision on which proposal or combination of proposals to accept would probably be made by Thursday.

The golf course will be built on property located north of Adams St. between 70th and 84th Sts.

Construction is scheduled to begin next spring with a deadline for finishing the course now set for Sept. 15, 1975.

Money to pay for the project is coming from the Golfers Capital Improvement Fund, in addition to state and federal sources.

Smith said 75% of the $450,000 budgeted by the city will be reimbursed by the federal government under funding agreements with the federal Bureau of Reclamation for the recreation project.

The bids opened Wednesday were:

Gundersons, Inc., Rapid City, S.D., $189,600 base bid, $107,000 sprinkler system, $296,600 total.

Flott-Tomanio, Lincoln, $283,271.30 base bid, $148,631 sprinkler system, $431,902.30 total.

Watson Golf Course Construction Co., Lincoln, $179,995 base bid, $125,939 sprinkler system, $305,934 total.

Moore Golf Inc., Culpepper, Va., $264,000 base bid, $142,000 sprinkler system, $406,000 total.

Van Buskirk Construction, Sioux City, Ia., $309,000 base bid, $109,000 sprinkler system, $418,000 total.

Wadsworth Construction, Plainfield, Ill., $398,080 base bid, $148,000 sprinkler system, $546,080 total.

Hank Buis Construction, Lincoln, $450,000 base bid, no bid on the sprinkler system.

E. J. Bousquet & Sons, Lincoln, no base bid, $119,000 sprinkler system.

Nebraska Sprinkler Co., Omaha, no base bid, $129,873.45 sprinkler system.

Western Sprinkler Corp., Oklahoma City, Okla., no base bid, $105,995 sprinkler system.

Loyola Blasts NWU, 101-66

CHICAGO (AP) — Loyola of Chicago raced to an easy 101-66 victory over Nebraska Wesleyan in a collge basketball game Wednesday night.

The Ramblers broke the game open early, when Tony Parker hit six points in a row to pull Loyola away from a 2823 lead that they had held midway in the first half.

Loyola built the lead to 48-35 at halftime, and was never in touble in the second half.

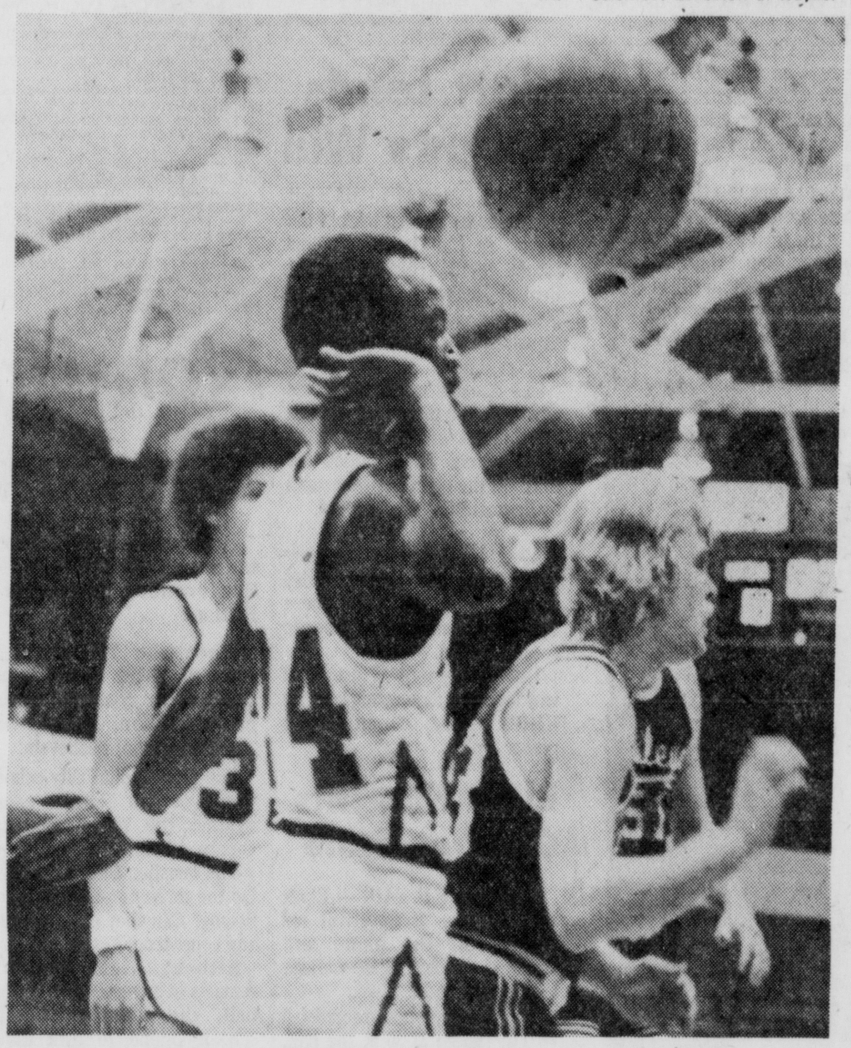

The victory boosted Loyola to 3-1, while Nebraska Wesleyan is now 3-2 for the season.

Indiana Defeats Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — A 10-point burst in the first half and the shooting of forward Scott May and center Kent Benson propelled third-ranked Indiana to a 94-84 college basketball victory over No. 11 Notre Dame Wednesday night.

The 6-foot-7 May, the Hoosiers' leading scorer with a 25-point average, scored 22 points, and Benson, a 6-11 sophomore, tossed in 19 to offset Irish forward Adrian Dantley's game high of 32 points.

Indiana's Steve Green and Notre Dame's Billy Paterno added 17 each.

The loss was the first in five games for the Irish and snapped a 24-game winning string at home. The Hoosiers, winning their third game against a ranked opponent in one week, remained unbeaten in four games this season.

Notre Dame, a smaller team, tried to keep the Hoosiers to the outside, but Indiana was hitting. Indiana raced from a 13-11 lead to 23-11 and was never seriously threatened after that.

Indiana had a 47-34 lead at the half and widened it to as many as 18 points in the final period before Notre Dame made a final surge that brought the Irish within eight.

Dantley was virtually the entire Notre Dame offense in the first half as he scored 17 points in that period.

Benson got Indiana off to a good start, scoring the first two baskets of the game before Paterno tallied for the Irish. Notre Dame battled back and took its only lead at 6-5 before two baskets by Green put the Hoosiers ahead to stay.

Notre Dame could pull no closer than six points late in the opening period before Indiana scored another eight in a row to take its widest lead of the period, 47-33, with half a minute remaining.

Indiana reserve John Laskowski gave the Hoosiers a big lift with 10 points in the first half.

The Hoosiers, shooting 50 per cent from the field in the opening half, outscored the Irish by 18 points in that period.

Stabler Tops American All-Stars

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ken Stabler, the smooth-throwing left-hander who led Oakland to the best record in the National Football League this season, heads a group of seven Raiders selected Tuesday to United Press International's 1974 American Conference All Star team.

Stabler, who threw 24 touchdown passes this season to easily surpass the nearest competition, edged out Cincinnati's Ken Anderson for the quarterback slot. Anderson was the No. 1 ranked passer in the AFC and Stabler ranked second but Stabler was the key force that led the Raiders to 11 victories in 13 games.

Joining the former Alabama star are his favorite target, wide receiver Cliff Branch, and tackle Art Shell from the offensive unit and tackle Otis Sistrunk, linebacker Phil Villapiano and safety Jack Tatum from the defense. Oakland punter Ray Guy was the leading vote-getter, polling 34 of the 39 votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers, three from each conference city.

The Buffalo Bills, who earned their first playoff spot in 10 years this season, and the Pittsburgh Steelers, who made it for the third straight season after missing out for 40 years, each placed four players on the team. Miami, which has dominated the balloting the past two seasons, had only three players named The Bills and Steelers face each other in opening round playoff action and the Dolphins take on the Raiders.

Leading the Buffalo contingent is O.J. Simpson, the Bills' super running back, who was slowed by injuries this season but still managed to go over the 1,000 yard mark. His "main man", Reggie McKenzie, was named to one of the guard slots, Robert James repeated at cornerback and Tony Greene, considered by many to be the heart of the Bills' defense before being injured a week ago, was chosen at free safety.

Joining Simpson in the backfield is Otis Armstrong of Denver, the NFL's leading rusher with 1,265 yards entering his final game. It is his first appearance on the team.

The selection of Tatum and Greene end a stanglehold by Miami safeties Dick Anderson and Jake Scott. Both were named to the second team

Pittsburgh placed only kicker Roy Gerela on the offensive unit but had three members of its awesome defense chosen. Tackle Joe Greene and linebacker Jack Ham drew the highest number of votes on the defensive unit, each being named on 27 ballots, and end L.C. Greenwood makes his debut on the team.

Miami had guard Larry Little and center Jim Langer named to the offense and end Bill Stanfill to the defense. Last year, eight Dolphins were picked on the first team.

Riley Odoms of Denver was the runaway choice at tight end, beating out Richard Caster of the New York Jets, and Isaac Curtis, Cincinnati's long-range threat, joins Branch at wide receiver. Winston Hill of the Jets repeated at tackle.

Two Kansas City players—Willie Lanier at middle linebacker and Emmitt Thomas at cornerback—round out the defensive unit.

Armstrong and Branch are tied for the touchdown lead with 12 each and Gerela is the leading kick scorer with 84 points. Branch ranks second in the AFC with 57 receptions and Odoms has 37 to lead all tight ends. Curtis has 10 TD receptions, Thomas leads the league in interceptions with 11 and Guy is the leading punter with a 41.7 average.

Morning Briefing

A Roundup of Sports News

FOOTBALL

The Tennessee Volunteers arrived in Memphis two days ahead of the Maryland Terrapins to begin preparations for Monday night's Liberty Bowl.

Cincinnati Bengal Dave Green, fifth in the NFL in punting, has been called on to prepare for the quarterback position vacated by the injured Ken Anderson. Wayne Clark has been elevated to the starting role leaving no one, excpet Green, as the No. 2 quarterback.

Injured players Sam Davis, Preston Pearson and John McMakin returned to practice as the Pittsburgh Steelers prepare for Saturday's season finale against Cincinnati in Pittsburgh. A Steelers spokesman said it was not known if the three would see action against the Bengals.

Marshall University coach Jack Lengyel, who shouldered a four-year rebuilding effort after a 1970 airplane crash killed most of the team, resigned, after a four-year record of 9-33 at Marshall.

Mike Adamle is expected to start at running back despite a severe gash in his tongue when the New York Jets shoot for a club-record sixth straight victory Sunday against the Colts in Baltimore.

Detroit Lions' wide receiver Ron Jessie, who played college football at Kansas University, is trying to get out of his contract with the Birmingham Americans of the World Football League, Lions' coach Rick Forzano said.

Former Tennessee track and football star Richmond Flowers says he took a chance on the WFL and lost, not having been paid since August.

The WFL has given Florida Blazer boss Rommie Loudd until Friday to settle team debts or lose the franchise, the Orlando Sentinel Star said.

Wichita State and North Texas State have agreed not to meet on the football field for at least eight years. No reason was given.

Harrison C. Kohl, 62, executive director of the Sun Bowl for the past 12 years, announced his resignation effective Jan. 15, 1975.

Alex Yunevich will be back for his 34th year as head football coach at Alfred University next season, the school's president said.

BASKETBALL

John Gianelli, the top rebounder for the New York Knicks, will miss at least one of this weekend's games against the Buffalo Braves because of a "moderate" sprain of the right ankle.

University of Detroit coach Dick Vitale will be hospitalized about a week for tests for a stomach ailment.

Rookie guard Bill Higgins of the Virginia Squires has been suspended for "irresponsible conduct."

Southern Illinois joined the Missouri Valley Conference this fall and senior center Joe Meriweather leads the conference in scoring, 21.7 average, is second in rebounding, 12 per game, and third in field goal percentage, .659.

Louisiana State announced that freshman Evan Robinson will drop off the Tiger varsity basketball team and out of school this month. Robinson, a 6-3 forward, claims personal reasons for the move.

Utah Stars owner Bill Daniels, who remained silent while a group of Salt Lake City businessmen announced they were the new owners of the ABA team, says he might not sell the team after all.

BASEBALL

The New York Mets traded infielder Teddy Martinez to the St. Louis Cardinals in exchange for infielder Jack Heidemann and minor league outfielder Mike Vail.

Hand Aaron says the Most Valuable Player award should be chosen by the players because "they are the closest to him (the player) and they know what he is to the club." The winner now is chosen by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The Milwaukee Brewers and Baltimore Orioles tied for the lead in American League club fielding with .980 averages, according to figures released by the league.

OTHER SPORTS

Former boxer Rubin "Hurricane" Carter and co-defendant John Artis were refused a new trial on their murder conviction in a triple slaying in Paterson, N.J., in 1966.

John Newcombe outlasted Bjorn Borg and kept alive his hopes of reaching the semifinals in the $100,000 Masters Tennis Tournament with a 7-6, 7-6 decision.

The National Hockey League Players' Association urged the federal government to appoint a powerful new commission to stamp out "injustices and inequities" in hockey and settle disputes in all sports.

The Professional Golfers Association has announced it will permit the players to employ their regular touring caddies in the PGA Championship, beginning in 1978.

The New York Racing Association's request to experiment with 10 Sunday dates in 1975 was approved by the New York State Racing and Wagering Board.

New Jersey signed a $32.8 million contract for construction of a 76,500-seat stadium in the Hackensack Meadowlands that will house the New York Giants football team. The Giants expect to move into the new stadium in 1976.

Tom Harmon, an all-American football player at Michigan and the 1940 Heisman Trophy winner, was named the sports director of Hughes Television Network.

The 1975 World Karate Championships will be held Oct. 4-5 at Long Beach, Calif. the Amateur Athletic Union announced.

Land speed merchants Art Arfons and Billy Meyer have agreed on a match race at the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah next October.

Rosa M. Gatti, a 1972 Villanova graduate was named sports information director at Villanova University, becoming the first female full-time sports information director at a university division school in the country.

Peter Kiewit Sons' Company of Omaha has been named to complete the King County domes stadium in Seattle, which is now 72 per cent complete.

The Philadelphia Flyers sent defenseman George Pesut to the California Golden Seals to finalize a trade which brought Reggie Leach to Philadelphia.

Dr. Jack O'Leary, who has served as acting athletic director at Colorado State University since July 1, was offered the position on a permanent basis. O'Leary indicated he was looking forward to the opportunity.

The Ivy League voted to reduce football staffs to no more than seven full-time coaches and made freshmen eligible in three team sports.

HCV — HOME COURT VALUE TPR — TEAM POWER RATING

KEY: The figure on the left represents the value of the team's home court. (Where teams play on two different courts, the one more frequently used is considered.)
The figure on the right represents the team's power rating. ALL TEAMS ARE MEASURED FROM THE TOP RATING OF ZERO (0). Thus a team with a Power Rating of 6 would be a 7-point favorite over a team with a rating of 13 if the game were played on a neutral court. Add allotted points for Home Court Value to the Home Team.

Number in brackets indicates final 1973-74 Rating.

Ballots List 37 For Hall Of Fame

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thirty-seven former players, headed by Ralph Kiner and Robin Roberts, were listed Wednesday on the 1975 ballots for election to the Baseball Hall of Fame.

The voting by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America will be completed Jan. 18. A player must be named on 75 per cent of the ballots to be selected.

Kiner, who hit 369 home runs in a 10-year major league career with the Pirates, Cubs and Indians, and led the NL in homers seven straight seasons, has been close to election the last four years, drawing over 200 votes each time.

Last year, when Mickey Mantle and Whitey Ford were voted in, Kiner received 219, 55 shy of the 274 necessary.

This is the last time Kiner is eligible for election by the writers. If he is not selected this time, he will fall into the "old-time" category for consideration by a special veterans committee.

Roberts, who won 286 games for the Phillies, Orioles and Astros, received 224 votes in the 1973 election. Besides Kiner, the players under consideration by the BBWAA for the last time are Phil Cavarretta, Hal Newhouser, Vic Raschi and Johnny Sain.

Four players who retired five years ago are appearing on the ballots this year for the first time, but none of them are considered likely to be elected —Ken Boyer, Don Drysdale, Johnny Podres and Bill White.

The others on the ballot are Richie Ashburn, Lew Burdette, Rocky Colavito, Walker Cooper, Alvin Dark, Nellie Fox, Dick Groat, Harvey Haddix, Gil Hodges, Elston Howard, George Kell, Ted Kluszewski, Don Larsen, Vernon Law, Bob Lemon, Roger Maris, Eddie Mathews, Don Newcombe, Pee Wee Reese, Phil Rizzuto, Red Schoendienst, Enos Slaughter, Duke Snider, Bobby Thomson, Mickey Vernon, Bill Virdon and Vic Wertz.

Black Hall Of Fame Honors 14 Athletes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Roy Campanella and Roberto Clemente, two baseball greats whose careers were ended by tragedy, and 12 others were named Wednesday as the second group of inductees to the Black Athletes Hall of Fame.

The 14 officially will be inducted in ceremonies next March 13 at Las Vegas, Nev., to the Black Hall, which was founded last year by former Olympian Charlie Mays.

Campanella was a three-time MVP in the National League for the Dodgers in the 1950s before his baseball career was cut short when he was paralyzed in an automobile accident. Clemente, a four-time batting champ, 1966 MVP and also MVP in the 1971 World Series, died in a plane crash Dec. 31, 1972.

Named besides Campanella and Clemente, both of whom also are members of the baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., were:

Bob Douglas, founder of the Harlem Renaissance basketball team; Joe Yancey, founder of the New York Pioneer Club; former Chicago Bears running back Gale Sayers; former track stars Willye White, Harrison Dillard and William De Hart Hubbard; former boxing champion Henry Armstrong; ex-Lakers basketball star Elgin Baylor; former heavyweight champion Jack Johnson; Harlem Globetrotters founder Abe Saperstein; John Henry (Pop) Lloyd, infielder with the Atlantic City Bachrach Giants in the early 1900s, and Pele, the retired Brazilian soccer star.

The first group of inductees last year included Hank Aaron, Willie Mays, Muhammad Ali, Bill Russell, Jackie Robinson, Joe Louis, Jesse Owens, Althea Gibson, Wilma Rudolph and Joe Frazier.

Legion Baseball Adds Class C

By United Press International

The Nebraska American Legion has adopted a Class C division for the American Legion baseball program, effective with the 1975 season.

All divisions are to be based on the male high school enrollment figures in grades 9 through 12.

The divisions are:

—Class A: combined male enrollment of 500 or more;

—Class B: combined male enrollment of 200 through 499;

—Class C: combined male enrollment of 199 or less.

The schedule of tournaments for 1975 was also announced Wednesday.

Class B and C district tournaments will be held July 23-29; Class A, B and C area tournaments on July 31; and Class A, B and C state tournaments on Aug. 8.

Burke Invite Draws 17 Teams

Omaha (UPI) — Seventeen teams are scheduled to compete Thursday and Friday in the sixth annual Burke Invitational Smallbore Rifle Match here at Burke High School.

The competition, starting at 3:30 p.m. Friday, is open to all individuals and teams in the Omaha public school district.

Col. Carl Ervin, assistant supervisor of military science, said there are 1,215 students enrolled in the junior reserve officer training program, including 378 girls.

HOOP RATINGS

HCV — HOME COURT VALUE TPR — TEAM POWER RATING

KEY: The figure on the left represents the value of the team's home court. (Where teams play on two different courts, the one more frequently used is considered.)
The figure on the right represents the team's power rating. ALL TEAMS ARE MEASURED FROM THE TOP RATING OF ZERO (0). Thus a team with a Power Rating of 6 would be a 7-point favorite over a team with a rating of 13 if the game were played on a neutral court. Add allotted points for Home Court Value to the Home Team.

Number in brackets indicates final 1973-74 Rating.

Black Hall Of Fame Honors 14 Athletes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Roy Campanella and Roberto Clemente, two baseball greats whose careers were ended by tragedy, and 12 others were named Wednesday as the second group of inductees to the Black Athletes Hall of Fame.

The 14 officially will be inducted in ceremonies next March 13 at Las Vegas, Nev., to the Black Hall, which was founded last year by former Olympian Charlie Mays.

Campanella was a three-time MVP in the National League for the Dodgers in the 1950s before his baseball career was cut short when he was paralyzed in an automobile accident. Clemente, a four-time batting champ, 1966 MVP and also MVP in the 1971 World Series, died in a plane crash Dec. 31, 1972.

Named besides Campanella and Clemente, both of whom also are members of the baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., were:

Bob Douglas, founder of the Harlem Renaissance basketball team; Joe Yancey, founder of the New York Pioneer Club; former Chicago Bears running back Gale Sayers; former track stars Willye White, Harrison Dillard and William De Hart Hubbard; former boxing champion Henry Armstrong; ex-Lakers basketball star Elgin Baylor; former heavyweight champion Jack Johnson; Harlem Globetrotters founder Abe Saperstein; John Henry (Pop) Lloyd, infielder with the Atlantic City Bachrach Giants in the early 1900s, and Pele, the retired Brazilian soccer star.

The first group of inductees last year included Hank Aaron, Willie Mays, Muhammad Ali, Bill Russell, Jackie Robinson, Joe Louis, Jesse Owens, Althea Gibson, Wilma Rudolph and Joe Frazier.

Legion Baseball Adds Class C

By United Press International

The Nebraska American Legion has adopted a Class C division for the American Legion baseball program, effective with the 1975 season.

All divisions are to be based on the male high school enrollment figures in grades 9 through 12.

The divisions are:

—Class A: combined male enrollment of 500 or more;

—Class B: combined male enrollment of 200 through 499;

—Class C: combined male enrollment of 199 or less.

The schedule of tournaments for 1975 was also announced Wednesday.

Class B and C district tournaments will be held July 23-29; Class A, B and C area tournaments on July 31; and Class A, B and C state tournaments on Aug. 8.

Burke Invite Draws 17 Teams

Omaha (UPI) — Seventeen teams are scheduled to compete Thursday and Friday in the sixth annual Burke Invitational Smallbore Rifle Match here at Burke High School.

The competition, starting at 3:30 p.m. Friday, is open to all individuals and teams in the Omaha public school district.

Col. Carl Ervin, assistant supervisor of military science, said there are 1,215 students enrolled in the junior reserve officer training program, including 378 girls.

Hilton Planning To Sell Interest In Six Hotels

Beverly Hills, Calif. (AP) — Hilton Hotels Corp. announced that it has reached an agreement in principle to sell a 50% interest in six hotels to the Prudential Insurance Co. of America.

Barron Hilton, president, said the aggregate sales price will be approximately $83.4 million, consisting of $65.9 million in cash and $17.4 million of existing mortgage indebtedness.

The hotels involved, which will remain under Hilton management, are the San Francisco Hilton, the Los Angeles Hilton, the Beverly Hilton, the Dallas Statler Hilton, the Washington Statler Hilton and the Tarrytown Hilton Inn, in Tarrytown, N.Y.

Prudential currently owns 50% of the Washington Hilton, the New York Hilton and the Rye Town Hilton Inn, in Rye, N.Y.

$5.3 Million Net Loss Is Reported By United

Chicago (AP) — United Air Lines reported a net loss of $5.3 million in November, primarily due to a sharp drop in passenger traffic.

The nation's largest airline said it expected declining traffic to continue through the first half of 1975 as consumers will have less to spend on pleasure trips and as businesses react to falling profits and a slowdown of business activity.

United's November loss compared with earnings of $1.4 million for the same month last year.

"The loss reflects an unexpected sharp decline in November passenger traffic which in general affected the entire industry," said Edward E. Carlson, president of UAL, Inc., and United. "With the softening of the economy, the consumer simply is buying less."

Passenger traffic was down 17.4% from November 1973 when United absorbed additional passengers due to strikes against Trans World Airlines and Pacific Southwest Airlines. After adjustment for increased traffic due to the strikes, the decline for November 1974 was 9%, United said.

Ubben Moderator For Belmont Baptists

Loren Ubben, of Air Park West, was elected church moderator at the Belmont Baptist Church annual meeting Wednesday night. Ubben succeeds Tom Ekvall as moderator.

Other officers elected were: Vern Scholl and William Gale to the Board of Deacons; Bill Kleckner, Trustee Council chairman; Delmar Hutson, Trustee Council member; Karen Jones, church clerk; Louise Bockover, church treasurer; Mrs. Irma Udd, church school superintendent.

Heath Orders Racing Yacht

London (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Edward Heath has ordered a new $144,000 ocean racing yacht to replace the one that sank in a storm in September with the loss of two crewmen.

The 44-foot Morning Cloud IV will be built in Britain from American plans and will have an aluminum alloy hull, deck and interior fittings.

Heath, an experienced yachtsman, said he hoped Morning Cloud IV would be completed by mid May so he can compete for a place on Britain's Admiral's Cup team.

Hilton Planning To Sell Interest In Six Hotels

Beverly Hills, Calif. (AP) — Hilton Hotels Corp. announced that it has reached an agreement in principle to sell a 50% interest in six hotels to the Prudential Insurance Co. of America.

Barron Hilton, president, said the aggregate sales price will be approximately $83.4 million, consisting of $65.9 million in cash and $17.4 million of existing mortgage indebtedness.

The hotels involved, which will remain under Hilton management, are the San Francisco Hilton, the Los Angeles Hilton, the Beverly Hilton, the Dallas Statler Hilton, the Washington Statler Hilton and the Tarrytown Hilton Inn, in Tarrytown, N.Y.

Prudential currently owns 50% of the Washington Hilton, the New York Hilton and the Rye Town Hilton Inn, in Rye, N.Y.

$5.3 Million Net Loss Is Reported By United

Chicago (AP) — United Air Lines reported a net loss of $5.3 million in November, primarily due to a sharp drop in passenger traffic.

The nation's largest airline said it expected declining traffic to continue through the first half of 1975 as consumers will have less to spend on pleasure trips and as businesses react to falling profits and a slowdown of business activity.

United's November loss compared with earnings of $1.4 million for the same month last year.

"The loss reflects an unexpected sharp decline in November passenger traffic which in general affected the entire industry," said Edward E. Carlson, president of UAL, Inc., and United. "With the softening of the economy, the consumer simply is buying less."

Passenger traffic was down 17.4% from November 1973 when United absorbed additional passengers due to strikes against Trans World Airlines and Pacific Southwest Airlines. After adjustment for increased traffic due to the strikes, the decline for November 1974 was 9%, United said.

Ubben Moderator For Belmont Baptists

Loren Ubben, of Air Park West, was elected church moderator at the Belmont Baptist Church annual meeting Wednesday night. Ubben succeeds Tom Ekvall as moderator.

Other officers elected were: Vern Scholl and William Gale to the Board of Deacons; Bill Kleckner, Trustee Council chairman; Delmar Hutson, Trustee Council member; Karen Jones, church clerk; Louise Bockover, church treasurer; Mrs. Irma Udd, church school superintendent.

Heath Orders Racing Yacht

London (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Edward Heath has ordered a new $144,000 ocean racing yacht to replace the one that sank in a storm in September with the loss of two crewmen.

The 44-foot Morning Cloud IV will be built in Britain from American plans and will have an aluminum alloy hull, deck and interior fittings.

Heath, an experienced yachtsman, said he hoped Morning Cloud IV would be completed by mid May so he can compete for a place on Britain's Admiral's Cup team.

TEEN VOLUNTEERS . . . in 30 minutes collected a record 1,152 cans of food for needy persons.

SCROOGE Shows Real Christmas Spirit

Scrooge has got the Christmas spirit.

Operation SCROOGE (which stands for Student Christmas Rush for Oodles and Oodles of Goodies), through its staff of over 100 high school volunteers, collected 1,152 cans of food for men, women and families staying at the People's City Mission and the Family Shelter.

The program was sponsored by the Youth for Christ/Campus Life, an interdenominational organization. The area high schools competed against each other as to which school could collect the most canned goods in half an hour. Students collected the cans from homes in Lincoln. East High School students won the contest, collecting 280 cans.

The students broke the unofficial world's record in can collecting which they set two years ago. The students had collected 600 cans of food in half an hour then, which also were given to the City Mission, according to the Rev. Jerry Dunn, mission director.

Approximately 30 families presently are staying at the Family Shelter, and 35 men are staying at the mission, Dunn said.

TEEN VOLUNTEERS . . . in 30 minutes collected a record 1,152 cans of food for needy persons.

SCROOGE Shows Real Christmas Spirit

Scrooge has got the Christmas spirit.

Operation SCROOGE (which stands for Student Christmas Rush for Oodles and Oodles of Goodies), through its staff of over 100 high school volunteers, collected 1,152 cans of food for men, women and families staying at the People's City Mission and the Family Shelter.

The program was sponsored by the Youth for Christ/Campus Life, an interdenominational organization. The area high schools competed against each other as to which school could collect the most canned goods in half an hour. Students collected the cans from homes in Lincoln. East High School students won the contest, collecting 280 cans.

The students broke the unofficial world's record in can collecting which they set two years ago. The students had collected 600 cans of food in half an hour then, which also were given to the City Mission, according to the Rev. Jerry Dunn, mission director.

Approximately 30 families presently are staying at the Family Shelter, and 35 men are staying at the mission, Dunn said.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 12-12
